King of England Gave Arms Aid, Senators Hear

Tried to Swing Order to British Firm, Message Says.

U. S. Navy Helped American Group

'Dirty' Competition Was Charged to Vickers in Turkish Deal.

By Robert C. Albright.

His majesty, King George V, of England, tried to block an American munitions sale to Poland in an effort to swing new business to a British firm, a special Senate investigating committee disclosed yesterday.

Intervention by the English king came in January, 1932, when the Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co. of New York, was competing with British interests for a Polish gun contract, it was charged in a cablegram read into the record.

Testimony pictured Great Britain and the United States Navy Department as rivaling one another in aiding their arms merchants to break into foreign markets. Two instances where the Navy helped private ordnance producers to sell their wares were brought into evidence.

"Navy a Sample Case."

"It looks to me like the Navy was used as a salesman's sample case," commented Senator Gerald P. Nye, after witnesses told of a United States cruiser sent to Constantinople on a demonstration call, and the "loan" of a United States Naval officer to advise Colombia on armament purchases.

The Naval officer, Commander James Strong, now resigned from the Navy and directing Colombia's air forces, later was shown to have profited from a stock market account handled for him by I. J. Miranda, one of the founders of the American Armament Corporation.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, caustically observed that some years before, Commander Strong, in 1932, was "loaned" to Colombia and the United States sent a naval mission to Peru, then verging on hostile relations with Colombia.

Charges that King George made strong representations to Poland's Ambassador to Great Britain early in 1932, when the American-owned Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co. was about to close a gun contract with Poland, created a mild sensation in the Senate caucus room.

Comment by Vandenberg.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, said the episode, viewed in the light of Governmental aid given armament salesmen from this country, rendered disarmament moves "paradoxical."

Addressed to L. L. Driggs, president of the American arms firm, the cablegram making the allegation was dated January 20, 1932, and signed by Florjan Ziemba, Driggs' special agent in Poland.

"King of Great Britain summoned our ambassador and intervened in 3-inch or 75 millimeter

View of Cortege Denied Mooney

Funeral Procession of Mother to Stop at Prison Tomorrow.

San Francisco, Sept. 7 (AP).—The funeral cortege of Mrs. Mary Mooney will draw up to the cheerless gates of San Quentin Prison tomorrow, but stone walls will prevent her noted convict son from getting a glimpse of the somber procession.

"Tom Mooney will not be permitted to see the cortege," said Warden James B. Holohan. "We try to be broad, but that would be going too far."

"We have a prison population of 6,000 and if we granted Mooney such a privilege we could hardly deny similar privileges to others."

Despite Holohan's pronouncement, Leo Gallagher, an attorney who has figured in the long fight to exonerate Mooney and obtain his freedom from a life sentence for the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing in 1916, said the cortege would stop at the prison gates and the warden would be asked again to let Mooney look upon the procession.

Both Holohan and Acting Governor Frank F. Merriam previously had ruled there was no legal way to permit Mooney to leave the penitentiary under guard to attend the funeral here Saturday.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon in the big San Francisco Civic Auditorium, which was obtained by the Mooney defense after calling for a gigantic "working class" assembly for the rites.

Vienna, Sept. 7.—Rumania's famed "red-headed woman" tonight was reported ready to retire from the spotlight.

Diplomatic quarters here heard that Mme. Magda Lupescu, titian-haired beauty for whom Prince Carol once foreswore his throne, was urging Carol to seek reconciliation with Princess Helen, his former wife.

King Carol's friend, the reports said, recommended the reconcilia-

Young Mother Shoots Suitor, Child and Self

Woman Dead, Hope Slight for Victims of Her Gun at Rendezvous.

A young mother, angered at a chance remark by a man companion as they met secretly in a rural rendezvous near Tuxedo, Md., early yesterday, shot him in the abdomen, turned the gun on her 2-year-old son and killed herself with a bullet through the head.

In a lonely thicket beside freight tracks of the B. & O. Railroad, off the Tuxedo-Cheverly road, friends found the body of Mrs. Lulu Pyles, 20. A few feet away, lying on his face, was her small son, Vernon, a bullet through his forehead.

Friends and neighbors were led to the spot by Ernest C. Loor, 31, automobile mechanic. Only semi-conscious, with a wound in the abdomen, Loor pointed to the bodies and collapsed. Later, in Casualty Hospital, he insisted Mrs. Pyles shot him, then the baby and finally herself.

First word of the tragedy was learned when Loor stumbled into the filling station of Thomas Mohler, former sheriff of Prince Georges County, shortly after 8 a. m.

"Call the police," he demanded.

Mohler hesitated, and Loor, staggering against a counter, urgently repeated his request. Policeman Arthur Brown, stationed at county police headquarters in Hyattsville, was summoned by telephone. Before he arrived Loor showed his wound and told the story to Mohler.

"The little girl (meaning Mrs. Pyles) did it," he was quoted as saying. She shot the boy, too. I guess they are both dead. But I'll take the rap for this—leave her out."

A few minutes later, Loor was

'Wets' Ask Court to Enjoin Takoma Park Liquor Election

The Takoma Park "wet or dry" issue was thrown into the District Supreme Court yesterday when four applicants for liquor licenses within the area controlled by the proposed referendum obtained an order from Justice F. Dickinson Letts requiring the District Commissioners to show cause by Monday afternoon why they should not be enjoined from conducting the vote.

The four who petitioned for the order are business men. They are Daniel J. Mattingly, who operates a drug store at 532 Cedar street northwest; Martin S. McLain, who conducts a sea food business at 324 Cedar street northwest; Joseph B. Simpson, a grocer, of 323 Carroll street northwest, and Harry N. Ballos, lunchroom proprietor of 317 Cedar street northwest.

Through Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., the petitioners gave ten reasons for demanding that the Commissioners be placed under court order to abandon their plans for the vote set for Wednesday.

Chief among these was the contention that there is no authority in law for "conducting a straw vote at the taxpayers' expense." Pointing out that the commission form of government was set up by the organic act many years ago, the attorneys said there had been no election or referendum here for more than 50 years.

The Commissioners, according to the suit, are charged with giving Washington their best judgment, and if they "are guided by the result of the straw vote in Takoma Park, it is obvious that they are not acting for the benefit of the people as a whole," but are "favoring a certain section." This was termed an unlawful delegation of authority which only the Commissioners may exercise.

The proper method for finding out the desires of the Takoma Park

Italy Unites With France To Suppress Hitler Peril

Duce Asserts 1,500,000 Bayonets Will Back European Peace.

Policy Reversed On Versailles Pact

Army Leaders Called for a Conference by Mussolini.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Rome, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini has pledged to France that Italy will abandon her revisionist policy concerning the Versailles treaty, it was learned tonight.

In a new move toward unity with France, Il Duce agreed also to enforcement of a so-called "pax romana" against Nazi Germany.

Denunciation of Italy's support of Germany's demands for broad revision of the treaty of Versailles was regarded as especially significant, in viwe of the new Italian-French agreement designed to police Europe and check Nazi threats to peace.

Mussolini formerly supported Berlin's revision demands—but recent events, including his conviction that Adolf Hitler intends to engulf Austria as part of his Nazi state of Germanic peoples have caused a reversion of policy.

Thunderous Welcome.

The new attitude was revealed in another passionate address by Mussolini today at Lecce, where he was thunderously welcomed. Addressing a throng of 30,000, Il Duce cried:

"Are you ready to rush to the defense of our fatherland and the Fascist revolution?"

The query was met with a roar of "Yes" from thousands of enthusiastic throats.

Mussolini's speeches, including one at Bari yesterday expressing "contempt" for the Nazi policies, are part of a bold program designed to indicate to Hitler just where Italy stands on the Nazi program for rearmament of the Reich and an "anschluss" (combine) with Austria.

Mussolini was represented as ready to lead a combine of nations, with France as his first ally, to preserve peace at any cost.

He emphasized this peace would be backed by 1,500,000 bayonets and 7,000 airplanes in the combined armies and air forces of Italy, France and the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechcoslovakia and Sugoslavia—ready for action against any nation causing war.

Reversal of Policy.

This huge force will direct European policy indefinitely along the lines of a "pax Romana," namely, "armed peace with justice," it was intimated. It was agreed among observers that recent German events have induced this complete reversal of Il Duce's foreign policy.

The general feeling in Rome was that the new alignment will wreck Germany's hope of parity in armaments and place Germany in isolation, ringed only will the Treaty of Versailles be reinvoked, but all Mussolini's former policy for revision to give Germany equality status will be forgottun it was indicated.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 7 (AP).—Petitions were filed in the State elections bureau tonight to place the name of Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot on the ballot as an independent candidate for Governor to succeed her husband, Gifford Pinchot.

Mrs. Pinchot will oppose William A. Schnader, attorney general, Republican, and George H. Earle, former Minister to Austria, Democrat.

Courts' Writs Block Long's Dictatorship As He Masses Army

Injunction Is Granted on Voters' Charge of Conspiracy; 2,000 Troops Converge on New Orleans at Senator's Call.

New Orleans, Sept. 7 (AP).—State and Federal courts today overruled the dictatorship which Senator Huey P. Long entered at noon as he fumed against his enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsely, in the city "vice" investigation and rolled into town 2,000 National Guardsmen for next Tuesday's primary election.

The Louisiana Supreme Court, by vote of four to one, denied writs filed by the Long faction seeking to suspend temporary orders issued yesterday by Judge Michel Provosty of Civil District Court, prohibiting the naming of extra election commissioners and special officers by the parish board of election supervisors.

Richard Leche, secretary to Gov. O. K. Allen, Senator Long's political ally, is chairman of the board of supervisors and authority to name the extra officers was given the administration at the recent Long-controlled legislative session.

Judge Wayne G. Borah in Federal district court granted a preliminary injunction restraining Richard J. Gregory, city registrar of voters, who is appointed by Gov. Allen, from scratching any names from the registration list prepared for the election.

Two voters who applied for the injunction alleged that Long, Allen, Gregory and Adjt. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming had entered into a conspiracy to use the National Guard to deprive them of their right of franchise.

The State Supreme Court majority in the other case held that there was insufficient time before the election for proper hearing and decided that next Tuesday's primary should be held in accordance with laws prevailing before the special legislative session.

In his legislative investigation of Walmsley's administration Senator Long, counsel for the investigating committee, today yelled "impeachment" at the mayor and said he had enough evidence already to put him out of office in an early session of the Legislature.

The "Kingfish" under his new laws, thundered orders across the State and 2,000 National Guardsmen from a dozen or more Louisiana towns sprang to arms.

In automobiles, buses and special trains they converged on the South's largest city to see that next Tuesday's primary is "pure and peaceful."

It was like the war days of 1917. Trains rolled in at stations, disgorging veteran soldiers and wide-eyed youths, many of whom had never seen the big city. Others clattered in by automobile.

The militia barracks overflowed, and temporary cantonments were set up in warehouses along the city's 7-mile waterfront.

The "Kingfish's" rival in the dictator business, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, was not idle. He counted up his 1,000 regular policemen and 500 others recently commissioned, and announced that he, too, was anxious to see that the election is "pure and peaceful."

There was so much talk about riot guns, howitzers, machine guns,

Japan Insists On Sea Parity; Scraps Pacts

Abolition of Ratio System Will Be Demanded at Next Parley.

Tokyo, Sept. 7 (AP).—Japan tonight was ready to demand equality on the high seas.

The island empire, latest addition to the world's major powers, determined today to chuck overboard present naval limitation schemes and insist on parity with Great Britain and the United States.

Details of the new policy were not officially announced, but it was learned it has the approval of all the nation's highest authorities.

Recommendations of high naval officers were incorporated in the program, prepared by Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the navy, and the cabinet gave its unanimous approval. Then Premier Keisuki Okada carried the document to the palace, where it was reported the emperor also indorsed it.

Still later Japan's highest-ranking admirals, members of the supreme war council, assembled to approve the policy which, it was stated, will guide Japanese representatives at next year's naval conference and at conversations in London preliminary thereto.

Tokyo newspapers were unanimous in asserting the policy embodies demand for abolition of the ratio principle of limiting navies, which would mean Japanese abrogation of the Washington naval treaty at the earliest possible date, December 31, this year.

It was stated Japan favors the reduction of offiensive naval weapons and will seek lower limits for tonnage of capital ships and gun calibers.

Reds Opposed In League Bid By 3 Nations

Portugal, Argentina and Poland Fight Seating; Parley Continues.

Geneva, Sept. 7 (AP).—Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, today failed to persuade Poland, Portugal and Argentina to support Russia's admission to the League of Nations.

He spent the day conferring with delegates representing those nations, the most potent opponents of the Russian candidacy, but admitted afterward that further negotiations would be necessary.

Portugal's affirmative vote is regarded as vital inasmuch as France, England and Italy, the triumvirate backing Moscow's cause, are anxious to place the Soviet permanently on the league council, for which Portugal's assent, by virtue of her council membership, would be necessary.

It was learned that authorities at Lisbon are so opposed to communism that in exchange for Portugal's adherence to the Russian cause they must have assurances that there will be no communistic propaganda in the Iberian country.

Poland was described as demanding that Russia accept obligations respecting racial minorities such as Poland and the Warsaw government, at present a semipermanent member of the council, is reported talking of a permanent seat.

England, it was understood, is backing Barthou in his efforts to induce Argentina to support Russia's entry without reservations.

Virginia Bankers Win U. S. to 'Corn Likker'

Alcohol Board, After Twice Denying Permit, Gives In When Business Leaders Back Demand for 'White Mule.'

Virginia's thirst for "legal white corn whisky" was appeased yesterday by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, which granted the Old Dixie Distilling Co., of Richmond, a permit to manufacture 1,275 gallons of the famous potion daily under Federal sanction.

On two occasions the board turned down the application, but yielded the third time when prominent Richmond bankers and business men joined in the declaration that "the demand for pure white corn in this community and elsewhere is great."

The FACA revealed that Julian Hill, president of the State Planters Bank; John C. White, official of the First and Merchants Bank, and other prominent civic leaders, including M. M. Anderson, A. F. Ryland, and Ed H. Hotchkiss, were among those approving the request. The famous Richmond club—the Commonwealth—and "other clubs," said they desired the product for member consumption, the board stated.

The application said Chairman Tyler of the Virginia alcohol control unit indicated demand for white corn is so great his home city of Norfolk alone might be expected to consume a major part of the output.

It was indicated the State board might purchase the entire Old Dixie Co. supply, leaving none at present for other Southern States or for the District of Columbia, although the application set out a similar demand in these sections.

The Old Dixie Co. permit is the first granted in the United States for the purpose of making white corn for direct consumption, the FACA said.

The application said it is "common knowledge" plenty of this liquor is being made in Virginia at present but the illegal stuff is of inferior grade and some of it is poisonous. The inference was this source is now supplying Virginia consumers who soon will be able to get legal moonshine at the State stores.

One consideration leading the board to grant the application was

'Bargaining' Rule Upheld By Roosevelt To Aid Labor

Hints End of Price Fixing or Closer Tie-up With Trust Laws.

NRA Revamping To Be Discussed

Gen. Johnson Expected at Hyde Park Monday or Tuesday.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Collective bargaining provided under the National recovery act is here to stay, in the opinion of President Roosevelt.

This statement, made today during a press conference discussion by the President of the future of NRA, took on additional significance in view of the general textile strike. The strike itself, he made clear, is the problem of the new special board headed by Gov. Winant of New Hampshire.

Speaking with unusual freedom to the newspaper correspondents, Mr. Roosevelt expressed doubts about price fixing as practiced under NRA.

As Mr. Roosevelt phrased it, behind price fixing and price posting as well is a most decided question mark, indicating to his press audience—squeezed into the President's cubby-hole office—that these practices will be made more amenable to the antitrust laws or abandoned entirely.

Inquiries as to the approaching visit of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, touched off the President's comment on the NRA. He said Gen. Johnson will arrive either Monday or Tuesday, and in the quiet of Hyde Park House they will thresh out problems of administration which have provoked dissension in New Deal ranks.

Will Organize Gradually.

According to Mr. Roosevelt's explanation, the internal reorganization of NRA will not take place at any set time, but rather will gradually evolve in the course of the next several months. According to reports, Gen. Johnson will be shorn of much of his power by the creation of a board, but the President did not go into this. Rather, his marks were confined to a broad view of the whole situation.

In accordance with this view, the machinery of the NRA will be simplified while decisions are reached on what parts of the recovery act should be made permanent, or at least continued for another year's trial by Congress. Besides the abolition of child labor and retention of collective bargaining, principles the President has previously said he favored keeping are maximum hours and minimum wages and the prevention of unfair trade practices.

From his outline, it was obvious that Mr. Roosevelt considers the NRA an agency of continuing evolution, continuing over a period of years before reaching a position which might be called permanent.

Two More Men Plunge to Death In Niagara Falls

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—Two men plunged into the roaring waters of Niagara Falls today, bringing to three the number of suicides in two days.

A man tentatively identified as Joseph H. McGregor, of Chicago, leaped into the Niagara Gorge from the Falls View Bridge and was swept away.

About an hour later an unidentified man waded into the rapids and was hurtled over the brink of the American falls.

Another unidentified man had chosen a similar death yesterday. None of the bodies has been recovered.

Streets Flow, Traffic Tangled In Cloudburst; More Rain Due

Rain which fell steadily all day flooded sewers and streets and tied up traffic throughout Washington yesterday.

The downpour, which was general along the Eastern Coast from the Carolinas to New England, amounted to more than 2.00 inches in the Capital by nightfall, and was still falling.

At the height of the storm, overburdened sewers at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue pushed up manhole covers and geysered out, flooding the intersection.

The total rainfall, the Weather Bureau reported, was more rain than fell in entire month of April of this year.

The heavy rains disrupted traffic on the Rosslyn-Clarendon spur of the Arlington & Fairfax Railway. Drain waters undermined a 25-foot stretch of the roadbed and caused the collapse of poles which carry the line's electric power. Passengers were transferred to buses and taken to Clarendon.

Vehicular traffic on Military road between Rosslyn and Fort Myer was paralyzed for a half-hour by flood waters which cascaded down Fort Myer Hill. Automobiles were in fender-high water.

More rain is promised by the Weather Bureau for today. It will be brought by a tropical disturbance, now moving northward, which is expected to pass over Cape Hatteras today.

Several traffic jams in the afternoon rush hour period made workers late to their homes. These were traceable directly or indirectly to the rain. One, on lower Connecticut avenue tied up hundreds of motorists, as did another on Sixteenth street, when traffic lights at I and H streets went out of order.

Heavy rains in Prince Georges County caused a considerable rise in streams. It was feared Bladensburg would be partially under water before sunrise today.

Ritchie, Nice Given Edge in 3-County Tilt

Upset in Garrett, Allegany and Washington Not Believed Likely.

This is the sixth of a series of articles by Mr. Waltman on the Maryland political situation, preliminary to the primary election next Wednesday.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 7.—On the basis of organization support and past performances, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and Harry W. Nice appear to have a distance lead in Garrett, Allegany and Washington Counties in their fights for the Democratic and Republican gubernatorial nominations, respectively.

There appears no doubt that former Representative N. Zihiman, seeking to stage a comeback this year, will defeat in these three counties William A. Gunter for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Sixth District, which should assure him the victory. Representative David J. Lewis, the Democratic incumbent, is unopposed for Representative.

Both Democrats and Republicans are engaged in warm internal and local fights in this westernmost corner of the State, fights which cut across the State-wide contest over aspirants for the Governorship. Yet in each of the three counties the Republican and Democratic parties are efficiently organized, and in the past have been difficult for rank and file uprisings to overthrow.

If there is a deep unrest and dissatisfaction, as contended by the insurgent leaders, but not discernible on the surface, then anything may happen. The regular organizations may be swept into the discard, Mr. Charles H. Conley may carry

Meeting of 108 A.F.of L. Affiliates Called by Chief Here.

Sympathy Tie-Ups Won't Be Approved

Peace Board Hears Sloan and Gorman but No Pact Made.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Organized labor united last night behind the Nation-wide textile strike as a Presidential mediation board began an inquiry into the tie-up.

William Green, president, announced a meeting of all of the 108 American Federation of Labor affiliates would be held here next week to discuss means of making the walkout more effective. He made plain that a general strike was not contemplated.

Francis J. Gorman, spokesman for the United Textile Workers, telegraphed to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., in protest against use of State troops in North and South Carolina as what he termed "strike breaking organizations."

The mediation board held its first meeting under the chairmanship of Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire and then conferred at length with Gorman. The board later began a separate parley with George A. Sloan, Cotton Textile Institute chairman. No definite peace proposals were considered.

Earlier Secretary Perkins charged the deputizing of nonunion workers by local authorities was responsible for the slaying of six persons Thursday at Honea Path, S. C., in the greatest outbreak of violence since the conflict began a week ago.

Questioned concerning statements by Gorman that other international unions may vote to call out their members, Green, with a gesture of finality, emphatically observed:

"Sympathy strikes just simply will not be approved."

Calls Deaths Unjustifiable.

With rumors persisting that the textile union had exhausted its war chest, Green declined to be drawn out on reports that A. F. of L. unions would offer financial help. The nearest he came to making definite comment on that point was when he declared:

"The big meeting will discuss all phases of administering the strike."

Green said every resource of his organization would be used to "bring to justice" the persons who fired the fatal shots in the Honea Path skirmish.

"I feel very strongly about that," said. "It is most reprehensible and entirely unnecessary. It serves to arouse feeling among workers in other lines of industry and increases unrest and social dissatisfaction. It is bad for industry as a whole and in my opinion is unjustifiable." The persons who armed workers at Honea Path, he added, were "guilty of murder."

All State and municipal units of organized labor, Green said, have

Bridge Closed As Gears Jam

Traffic on Highway Span Shunted to Mt. Vernon Memorial Route.

The Highway Bridge was closed for two hours to all traffic last night when gears, which connect the draw with the bridge heads, jammed as the draw was closing.

The span was opened at 6:30 p. m. to permit the passage of a small tug, bound for Georgetown. As the draw was closed, a series of mesh gears on the approaches clogged.

All vehicular and pedestrian traffic was halted while engineers tried to repair the mechanism. After a wait of nearly an hour, traffic was shunted west across West Potomac Park to the Mount Vernon Memorial Bridge.

Bus lines to Alexandria and Fort Myer, as well as interstate buses, which use the principal artery between the District and Virginia, were delayed.

Pope Demands Fund Account In Montgomery

Nonpartisan Taxpayers' Head Writes Letter to Commission.

Contending that the Montgomery County commissioners have failed to answer his query regarding $700,000 which he alleged to have been kept on deposit in a county bank while a similar amount has been borrowed by the county, Carson W. Pope, chairman of the Nonpartisan Taxpayers League, last night reiterated his questions.

Pope said he had written to the county commissioners asking whether or not the money had been kept on deposit in the bank, of which Maj. E. Brooke Lee, former Democratic county leader, is director and first vice president, while a like sum had been borrowed, and if the commissioners had accepted trust notes of $537,800, some of which were "notes of Maj. Lee's private real estate corporations" and others for corporations of which Maj. Lee is an incorporator or officer.

"For the benefit of other interested taxpayers I would like to know why you borrow money at 5 per cent rather than use this $700,000 which should be available for defraying county expenses," Pope wrote in his first letter, which was received yesterday by the commissioners.

Diamond Answers Charges.

John B. Diamond, president of the board of county commissioners, issued a statement shortly after receiving the letter. It said:

"When the political committee of the Democratic antis and the Republican politicians representing the fusion candidates complete their usual set of election year charges against the county administration we will, as usual, state the record of the county administration in complete detail to the voters and taxpayers of the county."

"In connection with the charge made today, the large county balance carried in several banks of the county during recent months will be the proceeds of school and road construction bond issues which could not be expended until the progress of the PWA program of school construction and the county-financed road program to be built by the State Roads Commission actually required the expenditure of the money.

"Consequently the money remained on deposit in the county banks that had purchased the largest amount of county bonds and in that way had been of the greatest support to the county treasury.

"The Democratic antis and county Republicans in one of their campaign issues four years ago contended that the proceeds of the county construction bond issues, including the courthouse issue, should not be spent either for county operating expenses or for any public improvement project other than the one for which the bonds were issued."

Keeps Funds Intact.

Mr. Diamond declared that the county, since that time, has kept each county fund intact in balance and that this has cost the taxpayers considerably more than under the previous system of financing county activities on the smallest possible cash balance. He said most of the $700,000 of new county issues the antis now complain of are refunding long-term bonds issued in place of outstanding short-term county certificates at much lower rates of interest. There has never been, and is not now, any shortage of money to pay either the operating expenses or for the construction program of the county. All county deposits are covered by bonds and securities as required by law."

In his second letter Pope declares there was $1,279,434.17 on hand in the county treasurer's office June 30, 1934, and still the county raised $867,727.99 in the annual levy signed on that date. He asks the commissioners to inform him as to whether the money on hand was bond issue money and if so when the bonds were sold, and what interest is being paid on them by the county.

"If any bonds have been sold, they are actually the obligations of the taxpayers. All county money on deposit is taxpayers' money. The commissioners should be willing to give the public a full statement of all the facts unless they have some reason to continue keeping the secret," Pope wrote.

"If the commissioners refuse to give the taxpayers this information, Maj. E. Brooke Lee, as head of the county administration, in fairness to himself as well as the taxpayers, should make them give it," Pope further declared. "The fact that the county deposit is secured by a great many real estate notes of Maj. E. Brooke Lee's private real estate corporations making my inquiry concerning the reason for this deposit more pertinent."

Prisoner Is Slain As Armed Convicts Riot in Argentina

Rosario, Argentina, Sept. 7 (AP).—Three hundred and fifty desperate, shouting convicts, mysteriously equipped with rifles, pistols, hand grenades and dynamite, rioted madly here today in an unavailing break for freedom.

A convict was killed and another gravely wounded before flying squads of military police and firemen quelled the disorders with tear gas and fire hose.

Saul Pintolin, 23, was the man killed, while Francisco Salerno was wounded. Both were described as model prisoners. Penitentiary officials said they believed the rioters shot them when they refused to join the break.

An investigation was immediately launched to determine how the prisoners got their arms and the 60-pound dynamite bomb with which they planned to blast their way to freedom. They had no chance to use it owing to the swiftness of the police counterattack.

It was reported that numbers of the prisoners wore civilian clothes in preparation for the break. How they got them was also the object of investigation.

'The Coming American Boom'

British Author Says Reflation to 1926 Price Levels Was Needed to Halt Crisis.

By Maj. Lawrence L. B. Angas

This is the third installment of the book by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist, which recently caused a flurry in American financial circles. Although some of the economics expounded will not stand an acid test, The Post is nevertheless publishing the book because it does contain interesting material.

Installment 3.

When the President took office in March, 1933, much had gone wrong with America's civilization. Production and prices had fallen nearly 50 per cent from the 1929 peak, 16,000,000 persons were unemployed, banking assets had fallen to below liabilities and a Nation-wide run on the banks was occurring, thousands of banks had already closed, foreign trade had also come to a standstill, central, State and municipal budgets were in debt; credit was being contracted in all directions, the fear of deflation had brought production to a standstill and incomes and consumption had disastrously declined. Orthodox financiers and advisers were stunned. They could not put forward a practical solution. The cure, they pleaded, could only come from "hard work, economy and self-sacrifice."

The President, however, took a different view, which was doubtless based on a study of past business cycles.

By the end of 1932 the slump, which had begun in September, 1929, had finally assumed, as all slumps have done in the past in their later stages, a purely monetary character, viz., that of a cumulative deflation of bank credit and prices.

Modern business is conducted with the aid of a huge inverted pyramid of credit superimposed on a small basis of gold or notes, bank credit currency (in America) varying from about 10 to 15 times the gold basis.

Now, the prudent bank manager, in the course of his duty toward his depositors, must necessarily call in loans as collateral values shrink, so as to keep his accounts well covered. The unfortunate borrower is then forced to sell. His forced selling leads to still lower prices. Other bankers then call in additional loans, and the process gathers momentum. Prudent bank management thus rapidly leads to cumulative industrial collapse. Hence a casual fall in prices, when once it has begun, normally tends to gather momentum.

To cure such a slump it is never sufficient to aim at removing the primary or initial causes (e. g., war debts, dear money, or whatever it may have been); it is invariably necessary to concentrate mainly on the secondary causes, which are monetary.

In past trade cycles something, as it happens, has always occurred to prevent the inverted pyramid of credit from collapsing completely. In the present trade cycle, however, since there were factors present in America which were absent in past cycles, and since the modern credit machine is now much more highly developed than it was formerly, the normal check did not mature. The pyramid of credit was thus in danger of collapsing, and, unless a miracle of trade psychology occurred, or unless the Government deliberately stepped in to counteract the progressive credit deflations which all prudent bank managers were necessarily pursuing, the collapse would have undoubtedly continued despite unlimited "hard work and self-sacrifice."

Brought Monetary Problem.

The problem facing America in March, 1933, was to convert the vicious circle of falling prices, credit contraction and grave stagnation of trade into a virtuous circle of higher prices and expanding industry. This problem was first and foremost monetary, and this was the problem which the incoming President had to attack.

Its constituent parts were:

(1) To reopen banks;

(2) To stop the public from hoarding;

(3) To stop culmulative bank credit deflation;

(4) To raising the value of banking assets, mainly by causing a market rise in bonds;

(5) To reduce the real burden of monetary debt by raising prices in general to about the 1926 level;

(6) To restore profit margins in industry by getting prices back above costs;

(7) To increase the flow of money, and the volume of trade and employment;

(8) To raise farm prices;

(9) To balance the budget.

Action was needed. His plan was as follows:

First and foremost to reflate prices up to about the 1926 level so that (i) the "real" burden of farm mortgages and fixed money debts no longer ate up the whole profits of industry, and (ii) so that on the revival in profits the bonds of the railways, &c., held by the banks would become better covered, and by rising in price would once more restore the proper balance as between assets and liabilities of banks, insurance companies, &c.

Sees Reflation Essential.

Price reflation was, in fact, an essential in order to avoid a continuance of the banking crisis and farm mortgage foreclosures, for although in the spring of 1933 the total of American internal debts was just as big in dollar values as in 1929, the total of the assets had shrunk in dollar values, because of credit deflation and monetary hoarding, to below that of the debts. The choice thus lay between a prolonged epidemic of bankruptcies and foreclosures or increasing the values of property of all kinds of reflation. Reflation was naturally decided upon because it would:

(a) correct the recent injustice of deflation,

(b) readjust the assets of the banks,

(c) put an end to the social strife that was already growing because of mortgage foreclosures and unemployment.

The first half of the President's monetary policy consisted therefore of bringing back the price level to that point at which, on the average, existing debts were contracted. The second half was subsequently to stabilize that price level when at last it had been reached, and thus to provide the Nation with a "sound" dollar which would not change its purchasing and debt-paying power during the succeeding generation.

Roosevelt's monetary plan, in brief, was "Reflate, then Stabilize," and thus to correct one wrong without creating another.

There remained, however, the psychological question of confidence, which it was clearly necessary to restore as soon as possible. Confidence, however, is a troublesome word, which has, as it happens, several meanings.

Confidence in Government.

First of all there is the confidence due to people possessing faith in their Government. Efficiency, justice, sound policy and finance are what create and maintain such confidence.

But a Government may cause "lack of confidence" in itself, either by inaction, on the one hand, or by a flood of economic and social legislation on the other. At times it may cause lack of confidence in itself and in the industrial outlook by overtaxation; at others by overexpenditure, or inadequate taxation.

But those who talk glibly about governments either destroying or creating "confidence" should clear their minds as to what they really mean. Do they refer to confidence in the currency, confidence in the banks, confidence in the Government, or business confidence?

When Roosevelt came into power there was certainly no confidence whatever in the banks, and the fact that people were cashing their deposits and drawing money out forced many banks to close. Confidence in banking institutions, however, i. e., in the places where people keep their money, is not the same thing as confidence in American money, although confidence in the places where people keep their money is essential to continued prosperity; it is obvious that an important part of the President's work was to re-create confidence in the banks.

Faith in Dollar.

Confidence in the dollar, i. e., in American money, as distinct from American banking institutions, is quite another matter; and incidentally it is not the same thing as business confidence. Confidence in the dollar as such implies the belief that if one invests in it it will not depreciate, but preferably appreciate. Confidence in the money of a country is largely brought about by deflation, and ruined by inflation.

Business confidence, however, is quite a different thing. Business confidence requires the belief that profits will be made, i. e., that commodities will not depreciate and that money will not appreciate. Indeed, assuming that confidence in the banks exists, business confidence is largely engendered by causing lack of confidence in money. This latter point is not generally realized and tends to give rise to much confused talk.

In respect of confidence Mr. Roosevelt's plan had to be a mixed one:

I. To restore public confidence in monetary institutions, i. e., the banks;

II. To give capitalists some confidence in American money and above all in bond values—which was carried out in the main by providing the currency with a huge and convincing gold reserve; and

III. Simultaneously to foster business confidence by a policy of credit inflation in order to secure higher prices.

New Price Psychology.

Now, as already said, the President's monetary plan was to reflate the price level so as (I) to restore the asset position of the banks, and (II) to correct the injustice of the previous deflation.

The actual operation of this plan, however, would itself be a powerful stimulus to business.

The point is that the mere expectation of rising prices causes consumers to buy in advance of the rise, and this eats into middlemen's stocks; while middlemen themselves, who in the course of a deflation habitually let stocks run off to below normal for fear of inventory losses, tend to restock-up again to normal, thereby giving increased orders to makers, who, in their turn, pay out additional incomes to workers and thus increase the general scale of employment and consumption.

The President knew, of course, that by pure inflation he could positively increase the total quantity of note currency, and thus rapidly set in motion an era of advancing prices. But the German experience of the early 1920's doubtless made him loath to inflate the note currency if he could possibly avoid it. He knew, moreover, since there existed in the country even more gold than in the 1929 boom, when prices and trade were 100 per cent higher, that if by psychological methods he could make the public "believe" that higher prices were coming, he could thereby restore confidence and make the powerful "latent" reflationary influence effective. He therefore planned to make maximum use of every possible psychological stratagem.

Devalued Dollar.

His first psychological maneuver was to obtain powers from Congress to devalue the gold dollar by 50 per cent and to spend 3,000 million of inflationary Government money on public works and relief. He rightly guessed that the mere obtaining of these powers would create a new psychology of prices and thus improve industry.

Secondly, observing that the belief was generally held (though it is theoretically unsound) that going off gold is itself inflation, he deliberately took America off gold even though her gold holdings were superabundant and her foreign trade balance was active.

These two devices met with success, and business at once began to revive. The revival continued until November, 1933, although the currency was not quantitatively inflated one iota. Indeed, it is interesting to note that, whereas England obtained her revival by saying nothing and inflating her deposit currency by 18 per cent, Roosevelt obtained his initial results (up to 1934) by much talk and little action. Indeed, bank credit or notes were not inflated at all until early in 1934.

Monday: Now NRA codes, public works and other Roosevelt measures fit into integrated program for price reflation and credit expansion, concomitants of boom.

helped into Mohler's automobile and guided the policeman and friends to the scene. Mrs. Pyles, clad only in a dress, was lying on her back. The baby, wrapped in a blue blanket, lay unconscious nearby. Members of the Bladensburg Fire Rescue Squad took the three to Casualty Hospital. Mrs. Pyles, who had been separated from her husband for some time, was pronounced dead on arrival. Little hope is held for recovery of Loor and the child.

H. H. O'Neill, acting coroner, said Mrs. Pyles had been dead for approximately five hours.

Word quickly spread throughout the countryside and a crowd of curious had gathered before the bodies were moved. The scene, a marshy thicket some distance from the main road, is about three miles from the District line.

Blankets and food were found under the trees, indicating, authorities said, that Loor and Mrs. Pyles had been meeting there for several days. Three empty milk bottles, a whisky bottle which had contained milk and part of a loaf of bread also were found.

Loor frankly admitted, according to police, that he met Mrs. Pyles secretly. She became angered at a chance remark, he declared, and drew the gun from beneath the blankets and opened fire.

"We were sitting there talking and eating," Loor told Detective Sergt. Walter Beck, of headquarters, "when I told her I was going to see my wife. There were no further words. She just started shooting."

Visiting at Tuxedo.

Mrs. Pyles had been staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Dudley, at Tuxedo. Dudley, a member of the Tuxedo-Cheverly Fire Department, said both he and his wife had known her for several years.

"She often visited us," Dudley declared, "and always brought the baby. She had relatives in Fredericksburg, Va., and also stayed in Washington."

The Dudleys said they knew Mrs. Pyles had been meeting Loor, but their rendezvous had been kept secret. Labor Day, Dudley said, she brought Loor to their home and introduced him. They had never seen him before and he never returned, Dudley declared.

The revolver Mrs. Pyles used was taken from the Dudley home, he told authorities. Until he saw it in possession of police he did not know it was gone, Dudley said.

When Loor staggered into the filling station about 500 yards from the thicket, he had the gun beneath his belt. He laid it on the counter, explaining he took it from Mrs. Pyles' hand.

Apparently only one resident of the section heard the shots. Mrs. Viva Bedore, in her home about 500 yards from the scene, said she was aroused by a series of shots about 2 a. m. She listened, but heard nothing more and "promptly forgot it," she said.

Loor, barely able to talk, reconstructed the shooting for police.

"She shot at me first, and missed," he related. "A moment later she shot again, before I knew what was happening, and struck me in the stomach. Then she shot the baby in the head. She put the gun to her temple and pulled the trigger. I must have fainted. It was daylight when I came to."

Police said the gun had been emptied.

Apparently the last person to see Mrs. Pyles alive was an employe of the Mohler gas station. He sold her a quart of milk about 7:30 p. m. yesterday. Mohler said he knew Loor from visits to Tuxedo. He had often been seen walking in the vicinity with Mrs. Pyles.

Loor, police said, lived with his family in the 3500 block of Thirty-fifth street, Mount Rainier, Md. He has two small children.

Reward for Labatt Kidnapers Posted

Toronto, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Ontario government tonight offered $5,000 reward for information leading to the capture of persons who kidnaped John S. Labatt, millionaire brewer, on August 14.

Windsor, Ontario, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Border City Star in a copyrighted story today said police prevented payment of $25,000 to the kidnapers of John Labatt, London, Ontario, brewer.

The story quoted Alex Colvin, Windsor agent for the Labatt brewery, as saying the close police watch kept upon him prevented him from keeping a promise to the kidnapers of turning over the money.

Labatt was released three weeks ago.

3,236 Trucks Bought By War Department

The War Department announced yesterday the award of contracts for 3,236 trucks at $2,671,687, according to the Associated Press.

Two of the contracts for 3,133 trucks were awarded the Fargo Motor Corporation, Detroit, for $2,596,937.

A contract for 101 trucks was awarded the Chevrolet Motor Co., Flint, Mich., for $71,365 and another to the Reo Motor Car Co., Lansing, Mich., for two trucks for $3,384.

antiaircraft .50 caliber gun on new mobile mount," read the cablegram.

The cable further stated:

"Chief stands high pressure, but great difficulty hold situation. You must hasten summoning commission to America."

Driggs, the mild-mannered, gray-moustached little man who heads the company that for 40 years has manufactured standard equipment for the Army, told the committee the "chief" referred to evidently meant the Polish chief of ordnance.

British Salesmanship.

When committee members pressed Driggs for some interpretation of the cablegram, he said:

"It's just another interest by British royalty in British business abroad, I suppose. The Prince of Wales was sent to the Argentine to help British commerce there, you recall. He's their best salesman, they say."

Ultimately, neither the American firm or the British armament makers landed the contract, Driggs said. The American company had practically completed the deal, when America's abandonment of the gold standard "temporarily halted negotiations," he said.

A glimpse of the keen competition for arms markets all over the world was afforded in other communications taken from the files of the United States ordnance firm, one of them charging that women and almost an entire "embassy" was used by Vickers, Ltd., of England, to get Turkish business.

"Dirty" Competition Charged.

This letter, received by Driggs in January, 1929, from Herbert Allen, then representing the American company in Turkey, read in part:

"I suspect Landi with the other members of Vickers have tried to offset the favorable attitude of the Polish government to us. The Vickers crowd are the dirtiest opponents here. They have almost an entire embassy working for them and use women of doubtful character freely."

Asked if "special commissions" had to be paid by the company in Turkey to get business, Driggs replied:

"Turkey is very clean now. Kemal Pasha, dictator, settled that."

In connection with the United States Navy's "loan" of Commander Strong to Colombia in 1932, letters read into the record disclosed that a plan of national defense was drawn up for the South American republic by the Navy officer, with the Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co. "cooperating" and later using the information to promote sales.

When a copy of the plan of defense and correspondence with Strong was offered for evidence, Driggs mildly protested the matter should be kept "confidential." The committee overruled him.

Giving detailed advice for the fortification of Cartagena, Puerto Colombia, Colombia, Commander Strong's recommendations to the Consul General of Colombia went out of its way to observe:

"The Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co., who are furnishing quotations for the material involved, have given whole-hearted support in working out these recommendations * * *."

Evidence that an employe of the Driggs Ordnance & Engineering Co., who later joined in formation of the American Armament Corporation, handled a stock market account for the former Navy commander was offered before the committee recessed for the week-end.

Four officials of the American Armament Corporation were called before the committee—A. J. Miranda, jr., president; F. H. Sweetser, secretary; Maj. H. M. Brayton, technical director, and Frank Johnson, a director.

Told of Profit on Stock.

Miranda, head of the company, identified correspondence between Commander Strong and I. J. Miranda, his brother and associate in business. One letter signed by his brother and dated August 9, 1933, advised the former naval officer he had made a $170 profit through sale of his stock in the New York Shipbuilding Corporation.

"Many thanks for your note regarding the sale of New York Ship," Strong replied, in a letter addressed to "Dear Iggy." "I agree with you in taking a little profit and then grabbing the stuff back again in the reaction for another little gain."

Testimony showed the Mirandas left the Driggs employ to form the American Armament Corporation late in 1933.

President Miranda told of arms sales to a number of South American countries, and one small $15,000 ammunition order from Cuba that caused them "trouble."

The Cuban order was received indirectly through another company, and when the ammunition was delivered to the Cuban army the Cubans claimed it was "defective," Miranda said. Maj. Brayton interrupted to say insufficient information was supplied them on the sort of ammunition wanted.

It was later shown that the American Armament Corporation sold three of the modern Lockheed airplanes to Japan.

Testimony that the cruiser Raleigh was sent to Turkey in March, 1929, where it gave a demonstration of Griggs guns, and that the War Department offered the Griggs concern secret antiaircraft designs in

Liberals in Great Britain Urging Arms Inquiry

London, Sept. 7 (AP).—A move to launch an arms inquiry in Great Britain similar to that in Washington was under way here tonight.

Liberals in Parliament, members of the Liberal party, initiated the movement, and political sources indicated their belief the Labor and Conservative parties might join in the demand.

Parliament reconvenes late in October and it was regarded as likely that action would be deferred until then.

The Labor party was said to be seriously considering making the armaments question an important issue this fall.

The London Star, Liberal afternoon paper, earlier today had said editorially, "A similar inquiry here is inevitable."

While there was no official comment on the Washington revelations, the Star said the third day's testimony "involves still further the conduct of British firms in this cold-blooded business of making money out of warfare."

"Charges of 'double-crossing' made against Vickers (Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd.) are for the company itself to answer, but the statement that the British government gave plans of the 'K' submarines to the Japanese is one which the British public will require probed to the bottom," the paper said.

"It is incredible on the face of it. However, there has been enough evidence given at the American inquiry to make a similar inquiry here inevitable. Members of Parliament already propose to raise the case of the letter on submarine contracts alleged to have been written by Sir Charles Craven. Their questions can only be a prelude to what is to come."

Candle Service Opens Church In Mt. Rainier

Ceremonies to Be Held in St. Johns Episcopal Tomorrow Night.

The first service to be conducted in the new St. Johns Episcopal Church at Mt. Rainier will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. with a special candle-light service under the direction of the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, rector.

The congregation will assemble in the parish hall, where services have been held pending the completion of the new building. Each will be provided with a candle, lighted from the eucharistic candle on the altar, and will then march to the new building headed by the choir.

A similar service was held at the time the congregation held its final service in the old church. One of the features was the carrying of one of the eucharistic candles from the old altar to the new, where the other candle was lighted. This ceremony signified the carrying forward of the Gospel and the hallowed memories of those who have died, it was explained by the Rev. Mr. Plumley. This same procedure will take place tomorrow night, when the eucharistic candle will be carried from the parish hall to the high altar of the new church. Its flame will unite the light of the past with the light of the new, thereby uniting closely the past with the present.

Special music will be rendered by the St. Johns Church Choir.

Sunday, September 23, has been designated as the formal opening day and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D. Bishop of Washington will conduct the 11 a. m. service and deliver the sermon.

St. Johns Church was founded October 17, 1909.

Governor Adds To Mill Guard For Danville

Town Authorities Fear Invasion of 'Lawless' Outsiders.

Richmond, Sept. 7 (AP).—Gov. Peery said tonight that he had authorized the concentration of 15 additional highway police at Danville in response to an appeal from that community.

He said director of the division of motor vehicles, John Q. Rhodes, called him by telephone late this afternoon and read him the text of a message from Danville, and Pittsylvania County authorities. After a short telephone conference with Rhodes, already in command of a force of 11 officers at Danville, the Governor authorized Rhodes to call in 15 men from nearby Virginia points.

Danville, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Declaring that this community is threatened with "invasion by lawless mobs from another State," authorities here wired Gov. Peery late today that 30 more State patrolmen are needed to cope with the textile situation, and asked that they be dispatched here at once.

The telegram to the Governor was sent following a conference of members of the police commission, the mayor and Commonwealth's attorney of Danville, the chief of police of Danville, the Commonwealth's attorney of Pittsylvania County, and the sheriff of that county. The Danville police department was given authority to place 27 more special officers on duty immediately and call in as many more as may be needed in event of emergency.

Commonwealth's Attorney George E. Bendall was asked by the mayor to prepare the necessary papers to make possible the calling out of National Guard units stationed here, in the event that an emergency should develop so swiftly that officials would not have time to communicate with the Governor. These papers have been drawn up, and are held ready for signature. The code of Virginia permits the mayor of a city or the sheriff of a county to present the commander of any National unit with a written summons requesting mobilization of his men in event of extreme emergency, without consulting the Governor, officials said.

Admiral Sellers Back in Annapolis

Academy Chief's Flag Gets 13-Gun Salute.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 7 (AP).—Salutes were exchanged today when the blue, white-starred flag of Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Naval Academy, was run up over the U. S. S. Reina Mercedes, station ship.

The battleship Wyoming, anchored in Annapolis Roads off the academy, fired a 13-gun salute in return.

Admiral Sellers, former commander in chief of the United States fleet, returned to the academy last night after a two months' vacation in Europe.

The new 1,100-ton destroyer Farragut put in at the academy last night, to stay over the week-end. The vessel is on a shake-down cruise.

Army High Command Confers on 'War' Plans

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff, shown conferring with the high command of the U. S. Army during the mimic war maneuvers in the New Jersey area. The "war" map is in the background. The Army officers, left to right, are: Brig. Gen. Alfred T. Smith, assistant chief of staff for Military Intelligence; Brig. Gen. Andrew Moses, assistant chief of staff for personnel; Maj. Gen. George Simonds, chief umpire of the staff maneuvers; Maj. Gen. Hugh Drum, chief of staff during the maneuvers; Gen. MacArthur, Maj. Gen. Robert E. Callan, assistant chief of staff for supply; Brig. Gen. Charles Kilbourne, deputy chief of staff; Brig. Gen. John H. Hughes, assistant chief of staff for operation and training; Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, commanding general of the General Headquarters Air Force.

Guns Silenced As 'Paper' War Ends Abruptly

Defenders Fail to Check Monster Soldierless Army in Jersey.

By Harris B. Hull.

Headquarters, American Army, Raritan Arsenal, N. J., Sept. 7.—The war ended tonight!

And, as exclusively predicted in yesterday morning's Post, when the roar of cannon subsided and the last of the soldiers returned home from the trenches, the enemy lines still embraced a considerable portion of New Jersey.

Thus into the military history of a section so rich in stories of colorful battle was written finis to the campaign of 1934 against a nondescript enemy, known, even in the inner circles of the military intelligence, simply as the "Blacks."

Even the most impartial observer would admit that the Blacks did a very good job. It is true that their strength was a terrifying thing to behold, even if only on paper. If Light Horse Harry Lee, whose dragoons galloped across this country into combat with far superior forces in the latter part of the eighteenth century, had returned to the battle scene as it existed this morning, and could have seen the size of the invading armies, he would have scurried for cover. It is believed that never before had such an army existed, actual or otherwise.

Hordes of Troops Appear.

In the final stages of the war problem, division after division of Black troops appeared against the defending American Army, which had only companies and battalions.

For every field artillery piece put out of commission by the defending forces a new battery went into action.

For every squadron of airplanes defeated over Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, ten squadrons flying faster planes would come into the struggle. Obviously, then, the only line of strategy for the American generals to pursue was to stop the offensive. Certainly nothing was to be accomplished by the continued fighting against such an extraordinary foe.

Even the war correspondent began to appreciate this after a few days of fighting. An investigation revealed that Maj. Gen. George Simonds, commandant of the Army War College, was the soldier who produced these countless enemy battalions.

Commandant Explains.

His explanation was simple. He had to make it difficult or the war might have ended Wednesday. And in the War Department appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1934 there is an item for a seven-day maneuver. It was feared the comptroller of the U. S., Gen McCarl, might have declared war on the War Department if the officers returned victorious after two or three days of shooting.

That, briefly, is the explanation of the Black army, a force whose advance guard would have swept the combined armies of Caesar, Napoleon and the Russians operating in Poland in 1915 completely off the map without being obliged to issue a communique that there was opposition.

Tomorrow the entire maneuver program will be closed when a final critique is held at Fort Monmouth, N. J. The several general officers of the First and Second Armies and the general headquarters will discuss briefly the strategic plays made and their results. At the conclusion of this, Gen. Douglas MacArthur will deliver a 15-minute talk to the officers.

Talk to Be Broadcast.

Gen. MacArthur's remarks will be broadcast over a Nation-wide hook-up of the National Broadcasting Co. This program will go on the air at 12:15 p. m., Eastern standard time.

New Jerseyites took the end of the war in their stride. Shortly after the signing of the armistice a group of officers and the writer visited a restaurant at a point on the map named Metuchen.

Feeling elated that the gruelling campaign had come to an end, one of the officers greeted an aged man sitting at a nearby table.

"Pop," he said, "the war is over."

The old man looked over his spectacles and said:

"Smart guy, eh, son? You ain't kidding me a bit. The big war ended in 1865 and I know it."

Hand and Foot Lost by Hunter In Odd Mishap

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Jesse T. Meadows, 31, local attorney, was recuperating in a hospital today although he lost one hand and one foot in the queerest hunting accident ever reported here.

Mr. Meadows had gone into Little Brushy Mountain with several friends to hunt squirrels. He left his friends at a cabin and went into the woods. A short time later the friends heard a shotgun explosion followed by a shout. They went into the woods and found Mr. Meadows on the ground. One hand was missing and one foot was dangling by tissue.

When he recovered in a local hospital Mr. Meadows said he had climbed a small tree to get a better chance at the squirrels. He did not know that an axe had been partly driven into the tree trunk, leaving a section of the sharp blade exposed. When Mr. Meadows fell his left wrist was caught by the axe blade and amputated. At the same time his double-barreled shotgun discharged and shot his left foot off with the exception of a small piece of tissue. The foot was amputated at the hospital. Physicians say he will recover.

Awards Made For Costumes In Style Show

Handmade Dresses Are Displayed at Loudoun County Fair.

Purcellville, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.). Attractive hand-made costumes were exhibited at the style show held in the large auditorium at Purcellville last night as a closing feature of the Loudoun County Fair.

Little Jean Knowles Weadon, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Welby Weadon, of Philomont, in a blue organdie frock, was judged the most attractively dressed child under 10 years of age. Catherine Yakey, of Purcellville, won second place, and third went to Betty Lee Nesbit, of Warrenton.

Alberta Dillon, of Purcellville, in a plaid gingham, won the high school dress class; second ribbon went to Yvonne Paxson, of Purcellville, and third to Mary Evelyn Lake, of Philomont.

A brown linen sport dress with white linen coat and brown trimmings won for Geraldine Potts first place in the sport costume; second went to Ida Mae Ball, of Purcellville, and third to Louise Case, of Purcellville. Alberta Dillon, with a pink and white ruffled organdy, won the first place in the teen age dance frock; second went to Yvonne Paxson; third to Henrietta Taylor. Street dress—First ribbon to Miss Ida Mae Ball, who wore a garnet wool coat suit, trimmed in squirrel; second to Mrs. John Bleeker, of Washington; third to Miss Leslie James, of Purcellville. Impasse Faced By NRA Heads On Hotel Code

Admit Full Compliance Impossible; Wonder What to Do.

(Associated Press.)

NRA officials, virtually conceding claims of the hotel business that nine months' operation under the Blue Eagle had demonstrated "the impossibility of full code compliance," were faced yesterday with the question of what to do about it.

Hotel officials sought modification of the code, but their suggestions were resisted by NRA officials.

Recovery spokesmen said they were hamstrung in seeking enforcement of the hotel code by two important factors—the intrastate character of the business and the lack of employe organization.

"Only about 2 per cent of the hotel employes are organized," one official said.

Exemption Urged.

NRA was in receipt of a resolution adopted by the code committee of the American Hotel Association urging an Executive order exempting from code provisions all hotels which had been unable to earn operating expenses, taxes, interest and insurance charges.

Officials at the Recovery Administration said this would amount to removing all semblance of NRA rule over the industry. They said hotel men were seeking a 25 per cent cut in code minimum wages. These are $15 a week for cities of more than 500,000, $14 for cities between 100,000 and 500,000, and $13 for those between 25,000 and 100,000.

New Low for Pay.

"This would bring pay to just about the lowest for any Blue Eagle code, while the 54-hour work week is one of the longest," an official explained.

"There is a 15 per cent wage differential for the South. It is possible, and undoubtedly occurs, that with allowable deductions from wages of $2.50 for lodging and 25 cents a meal for food, that many employes are working for less than $1 a week with room and board."

Allen Brown Rites Will Be Held Today

Mount Airy, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.). Funeral services for Allen Brown, 23, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, Sykesville, Carroll County, and husband of the former Pauline Leatherwood, of Mount Airy, Carroll County, will be held at the home in Sykesville tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Brown's death occurred Wednesday at the West Baltimore General Hospital. He was associated with his father in a general merchandise business at Sykesville.

His widow is confined to the Frederick City Hospital, where she gave birth to a daughter yesterday.

Drunken Driving Shows Increase

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Drunken driving arrests here during the summer of 1934 totaled more than three times those of the 1933 summer, police records indicate.

June, July and August drunken driving arrests this year totaled 16, while only five offenders were locked up during the corresponding period last year.

One hundred and sixty-six arrests for drunkenness were made this summer, with only 66 booked in the three months of 1933.

Fewer Pupils Attend Mount Airy Schools

Mount Airy, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Announcement was made today that the enrollment at the Mount Airy high and elementary schools was less than that in 1933. Enrollment figures for the present term reveal 154 students in the high school and 272 pupils in the elementary grades.

According to G. D. Martin, principal, the decrease of 29 students as compared with the 1933 figure may be caused by a revision and extension of school bus routes to neighborhood schools.

Concert to Open Young People's Church Meeting

Arlington and Fairfax Sessions Open Today at Elmhurst Grove.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The Youths' Revival Conference conducted by the young people of Arlington and Fairfax Counties will open at 2:30 p. m. today at Elmhurst Grove on the Lee highway.

The program will open with a concert by the Falls Church Volunteer Firemen's band. A varied program of entertainment has been planned by the committee, of which Miss Margaret Ankers is chairman. The principal speaker during the afternoon will be Page McK. Etchison, of the Washington Y. M. C. A., and the Rev. Arthur Stovall, of Elizabethton, Ky.

The conference will continue through Thursday evening with a meeting each afternoon at 3 o'clock with a recreation program. The conference will be led by Mrs. Arthur Stovall and the speakers will include Dr. George T. Waite and Dr. J. E. Hill, of Richmond; Dr. Joseph T. Watts, of Baltimore; the Rev. Minor C. Miller, of Bridgewater, Va., and Dr. J. W. Bailey, professor of biology of the University of Richmond.

The evening meetings will be held in the Columbia Baptist Church at Falls Church with the Rev. Mr. Stovall in charge. A mass meeting will be held tomorrow at 6:30 p. m., when the young people of the different churches will present a pageant.

Miss Marian Ervin, of Falls Church, has been elected president of the conference with Miss Grace Herd as secretary. All meetings are to be nondenominational.

Council Acts on Absences.

The newly elected Town Council of Fairfax, Va., insists on having its members attend council meeting regularly.

At its organization meeting this week a resolution was adopted that any councilman absent from two successive meetings without good cause will be disqualified and at the third meeting his resignation will be requested.

At the town election this summer no one filed for any of the local offices and on election day the voters were presented with blank ballots on which they wrote the names of their choice. The citizens elected William Lindsay Carne, mayor, and Edgar Littleton, O. B. Campbell, James E. Nickell, Dr. Ford Swetnam, John M. Whalen and S. F. Cooper as councilmen. All qualified for the offices except Cooper, who is out of town.

Train Wreck Kills Explorer's Father

One of 2 Dead in Kansas Collision; Severla Hurt.

Winfield, Kans., Sept. 7 (AP).—Two men were killed and several others were injured, two critically, in the collision of a Santa Fe passenger train and a locomotive 5 miles west of Grand Summit, Kans., today.

Sherman Leighty, 65, Chanute, Kans., engineer on the passenger train and father of Mrs. Martin Johnson, explorer, was pinned under the cab of his overturned locomotive.

J. I. Hanson, Chanute, engineer on the pusher engine, died of burns en route to a hospital. Roy Diehl and E. A. Taylor, firemen, suffered severe scaldings and internal injuries and little hope was held for their recovery.

Three Ptomaine Poison Victims to Get Well

Woodstock, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Harvey Fox, 80, who has been critically ill of ptomaine poisoning, is reported out of danger.

An entire family suffered from ptomaine poisoning as the result of eating salmon which had stood too long in the can. The only survivers are Fox and two children, Ruth, 14, and Loraine, 17. Doctors report Fox is gaining strength rapidly. Funeral services for Mrs. Bertie Fox, 74, and her daughter, Mrs. Vergie Boehn, 44, were held Wednesday.

Martinsburg HOLC Employes Curtailed

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Seven members of the regional office of the Home Owners Loan Corporation here were dropped today or transferred to Charleston as a result of decreased applications for loans, an official statement said.

The cut represents approximately half of the peak staff. In the interest of economy, the work hereafter will be concentrated at the State manager's office in Charleston.

Joseph H. Shaffer, 81, Dead at Woodstock

Woodstock, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Joseph Henry Shaffer, 81, one of Woodstock's oldest citizens, died here today. Mr. Shaffer has been retired from business for the past 10 years.

Funeral services will be held Sunday.

Illness of Veterans Laid to Tainted Ham

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP).—More than 100 of the 350 war veterans who were stricken with ptomaine poisoning at the National Military Home were still confined to the hospital today, but Col. James Mattison, commandant of the hospital and chief medical officer, said none of the men was seriously ill.

Col. Mattison said it was likely that boiled ham, the main course of the meal which the men ate, was tainted.

Pupils Increase In Alexandria Public Schools

Total for Second Day of Term is 4,534, Gain of 138.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

On the second day of school this year a total of 4,534 pupils have enrolled in the public schools of Alexandria, according to Supt. T. C. Williams. This is 138 more than were enrolled on the fifth day last year. Supt. Williams has predicted approximately 300 more pupils will enter the local schools this year than in 1933.

Enrollment figures of the various schools are: Alexandria High, 646; George Mason High and seventh grade, 421; Mount Vernon, 847; Jefferson, 562; Lee, 652; Washington, 449; Maury, 250; Parker Gray, 607; Seminary, 100.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lillian Fern Santmire, of 315 South Patrick street, will be held this afternoon from the home and will be conducted by the Rev. C. Morgan Compher, former pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, assisted by the Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the church. Interment will be in Bethel Cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, John L. Santmire; a daughter, Mrs. George Giles, and two brothers, Leslie Campbell and Russell Campbell.

Officials of the Alexandria Hospital yesterday issued a warning to all merchants and residents of the town against an unidentified woman who has been soliciting funds for the hospital on false pretenses.

Mrs. S. Cooper Dawson, president of the hospital's board of lady managers, said the hospital is not conducting a drive and that no person has been authorized to solicit funds for it.

Robert L. Insko, of Lorton, elected commander of the American Legion, Department of Virginia, at the convention in Lynchburg early this week, paid his first official visit to the Alexandria post last night in Gadsby's Tavern and installed new officers of the post.

The officers installed were: Everett Hellmuth, commander; H. N. Jones, first vice commander; W. E. Sellers, second vice commander; O. Ashby Reardon, third vice commander; W. J. Greenan, adjutant; Jones Cox, finance officer; Howard L. Arnold, historian; Herbert Cady, chaplain; Turner Anderson, sergeant at arms.

Three Cumberland Offices Are Robbed

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.). Three offices in the Liberty Trust Building were entered and robbed this week.

Two of the offices entered were the Peoples Life Insurance Co., room 50, and the Eureka Life Insurance Co., room 71. About $40 in cash was removed from the two offices. The third office entered was that of a lawyer and over $100 was taken from his safe.

Shore Dwellers Flee As Gale Nears Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.). Warning of a tropical disturbance moving up the coast toward Virginia caused a number of residents at exposed points along the shore line to come to Norfolk tonight.

The storm, if it strikes here, is not expected until tomorrow. The Weather Bureau advised that strong northeast winds reaching gale force would prevail here late tonight.

Kiwanis Club Plans Boy and Girl Camp

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Plans were laid here today for a summer camp site for Boy and Girl Scouts of the Eastern Panhandle, with possibly an enlarged territory later, as a result of an offer by Dr. Nat T. Frams to donate a site on Back Creek, 8 miles from here, near a 4-H camp now named for him.

Goldsborough Seen 'Victor' in Prince Georges

G. O. P. Claims Nice Will Win Contradicted by Latimer.

Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, chairman of the Republican State central committee of Prince Georges County, yesterday contradicted statements of certain local Republicans that the county would "go" for Nice at next Wednesday's primaries.

"There is no doubt in my mind," said Dr. Latimer, "that Prince Georges County will go 2 to 1 for Senator Goldsborough.

He branded the information, which has been spread far and wide in favor of Harry Nice, as campaign talk from county Republicans who are against the committee's indorsement of Senator Goldsborough. Mr. Goldsborough is the only candidate indorsed by the committee.

Dr. Latimer drew up and issued yesterday morning an "instruction card."

The "instruction card," also termed the "Republican Organization ticket," can be taken to the voting booth. It contains the name of Senator Goldsborough for Governor, John Philip Hill for United States Senator, and William Newton Jackson for comptroller.

The card also contains the names of one candidate for each county office.

The five commissioners named are Robert A. Bennett, John M. Bowie, William A. Duvall, Elroy Gasch and J. Bryant Morrison. J. Frank Parran is listed as State's attorney, and Joseph V. Wyvill, jr., as sheriff.

For the Republican State central committee (which is elected at the primaries), Dr. Latimer lists A. E. Burgess, Charles Arthur Greenleaf, William J. Griffith, Dr. Latimer, John M. Littlepage, Howard Proctor and W. Eugene Pyles.

For delegate to the Republican State convention are listed James P. Curley, Walter R. Davis, Francis Fletcher, Harold W. Orcutt, Robert H. Palmer, Martha May Severe and Howard W. Spicknall.

Dr. Latimer said he understood that the Nice camp had issued a similar card. However, this could not be verified.

Hitler Admonishes Nazis' 'Little Men' To Be Examples

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 7 (AP).—The corporals and sergeants of National Socialism's army tonight heard Adolf Hitler tell them "God gave us our mission to perform."

"We are but instruments in the hands of providence," Der Fuehrer said solemnly while the serried ranks of 200,000 Nazi "po" men—political organization leaders—listened.

"Be models to all Germany," he admonished the party's little men.

"A people that is held together by the spirit of unity that now animates it can not and will not be broken by a hostile world.

"Our hand is stretched out in friendship to all who favor peace, but it will turn against anybody who attempts to rob us of our freedom. * * *."

It was the little men's day, and they made the most of it.

The 200,000 of them, brought to Nurnberg in 65 special trains, represented nearly 1,000,000 Nazi political workers and constituted the most compact party contingent massed in one group during this year's convention.

The party convention earlier heard Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, the Nazi's "idea man," declare Russia went wrong when she turned to Communism.

Strike Gaining In New England; 150,000 Out

Complete Tie-up Possible in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Boston, Sept. 7 (AP).—The continued closure of textile mills went steadily forward in New England today and by nightfall the ranks of the idle stood close to 150,000.

In Massachusetts and in the heavily concentrated Blackstone Valley area in Rhode Island factories continued to shut their doors until the strike, which earlier in the week gripped such important centers as Fall River and New Bedford and Manchester and Nashua, N. H., Burlington, Vt., and Holyoke, Mass., threatened to cause a virtual cessation of activity in the two States.

In Maine, Connecticut, Vermont and New Hampshire, however, there was little change in the existing situation.

The day saw a check of the activities of the flying squadrons of textile workers from Fall River which heretofore had met with considerable success in closing mills.

It also was signalized by a statement by Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, in which he made it plain that "we want no bloodshed in Massachusetts."

"Requests for State police or military assistance," he continued, "for protecting strike areas have been refused, largely upon the representation of the leaders of this strike that no violence would be indulged in by them or their men."

Flying squadrons of strikers from Fall River, flushed by their success in closing every plant in that city of 22,000 textile operatives, were halted as they sought to enter Lawrence, one of the largest woolen centers in the country. They quit Fitchburg after being told by police there that picketing would not be permitted.

Squad Halted at Model Town.

A motorcade of more than 15 machines was halted at the Lawrence-Andover line in Shawsheen Village—model textile community built by the late William R. Wood, president and founder of the American Woolen Co.—by a determined platoon of Lawrence and Andover police.

The situation in Lawrence, practically the only textile center of any importance in New England not to be affected by the strike, remained unchanged, although, in accordance with its announcement two weeks ago, the American Woolen Co. released tonight its 4,300 employes for a fortnight furlough, leaving between 7,000 and 8,000 employes at work in other plants.

Violence flared late today in the Blackstone Valley area when a group of pickets surrounding the Sayles Finishing Co. in the village of Salesville, employing 2,000 workers, clashed with deputy sheriffs. The pickets, it was said, attempted to molest workers quitting the afternoon shift and a fire hose was turned upon them, whereupon the pickets assertedly began to throw rocks at the guards. The plant has thus far been unaffected by the strike.

Despite the activities of the day, a lull appeared in prospect for tomorrow throughout the entire area. Practically every mill in the six States closes on Friday night, not to reopen until Monday.

Richmond Bankers Win U. S. to Corn

the desire of the State control unit to supply Virginians with a cheap liquor palatable to their tastes. Many inquiries have been made from Virginia to the FACA, some suggesting the State board might engage in "white mule" manufacture, but no action was taken until today.

Permits granted thus far in Virginia have been mainly for the manufacture of brandy. These permits can not be obtained unless the distillery was established before November 27, 1933, a fact narrowing the field for permits in the State. Success of the first white corn distillery may determine whether Virginia permits are shifted to this product in the future.

The Old Dixie Co., controlled by C. L. Little and R. L. Mahaley, of Richmond, made its first application in January, but was turned down when it was found the distillery was not built prior to the November 27 date. A subsequent application also was refused. When the third was made, accompanied by indisputable evidence of demand, the commission exercised its power to grant a permit in cases where demand exceeds legal supply.

The distillery is located on the Richmond-Petersburg highway, 5 miles south of the Virginia capital, on a 57-acre tract of land. Efforts to attain capacity output as soon as possible will be made, FACA understands.

phone details of the conference to Buenos Aires.

A secret session of the council has been convoked for tomorrow afternoon when the French hope the Russian problem will be solved satisfactorily.

The question of disarmament apparently had sunk into the background tonight and the consensus was that it could not be effectively revived until after the plebiscite in the Saar in January.

If the Saar residents vote to rejoin Germany, league officials anticipate vastly improved chances for an accord between France and Germany, which is considered an essential basis for any disarmament convention.

Strike Mediation Board Takes Up Task

been urged to actively support the strike. He said all organizers of every A. F. of L. union likewise have been ordered to the war zone.

"The strike," Green said, "is progressing satisfactorily."

He declared he was "favorably impressed" with the personnel of the mediation board and believed the group offered opportunity for a settlement "on a basis fair and just to all concerned."

Green said he impressed on Gorman that all existing contracts with textile mills should be "maintained inviolate" to maintain "the integrity of the organized labor movement."

The date of the meeting of American Federation of Labor executives will be announced later.

Gorman's telegram to the President read:

Gorman Flays Governors.

"National Guards in several States, particularly in North and South Carolina, being used simply as strike breaking organizations. Understand that all arms and ammunition used by guards are Federal property and can be legally used only in time of war.

"Governors bringing discredit whole organization for national defense by using guardsmen to club and intimidate workers striking. Mobilization armed forces this time is provocative, needless. Workers angered by totally needless show of armed force on picket line.

"As commander in chief of United States Army we urge you to forbid use of war materials in time of strike and discourage use National Guards for petty police duty."

Miss Perkins talked with Gorman after he finished his conference with the mediation board.

"I made no proposals to Mr. Gorman," the Secretary explained. "I am leaving that to the board appointed by the President. We merely discussed some of the episodes of the strike.

"The Honea Path incident presented a very dangerous and unfortunate situation. The local authorities deputized a group of workers who weren't on strike. That is a very dangerous procedure.

"Just think of the opposite situation. Suppose a prolabor sheriff deputized the union members.

"Apparently the shooting was done by people with no police training who shot because they were frightened. Fear will make all of us do foolish things. It's all a very terrible and alarming thing."

Miss Perkins said strikes always brought out many people who had no real interest in the issues, but were merely "hoodlums."

Communists Not Active.

"Mr. Gorman assured me," she said, "that no hoodlumism will be tolerated by the union. Incidentally, our trusted observers report that the Communists aren't very active and aren't making much headway in the strike."

The Secretary was asked whether she planned to take steps to prevent deputizing of workers in the future.

"This is a country of free local government," she responded. "Every Governor is responsible for maintaining order in his State. I shall give my advice when it is asked. But the way to handle people who are riotous is not to deputize people with whom they are at odds."

Gorman told reporters after his conference with the mediation board he had not been asked to agree to arbitration.

"I was very favorably impressed with the board," he said. "There wasn't any suggestion of a joint meeting with the employers. Our position remains the same. The strike goes on. We won't agree to arbitration unless the manufacturers make real concessions."

He said he would meet with the board again today.

Gorman estimated the number of strikers at 500,000, or 50,000 more than he claimed were out 24 hours earlier.

The mediation board also conferred with Secretary Perkins and members of the NRA textile industrial relations board.

All three members attended the first meeting. Raymond G. Ingersoll, Brooklyn borough president, said he would serve despite suggestions in some quarters that he could not hold both Federal and municipal posts. It was understood that both Winant and Ingersoll will refuse Federal pay because of their other public offices. The third member, Marion Smith, Atlanta lawyer, will receive $25 a day.

Fishermen to Discuss Pollution of Rivers

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Members of Izaak Walton League chapters from throughout Virginia will meet here tomorrow afternoon with the State commission of game and inland fisheries to discuss stream pollution and new game legislation.

Special attention will be given to ways of halting pollution in the Rivanna, Rockfish and Jackson Rivers, said Prof. George T. Starnes, head of the Charlottesville chapter. The State board of the league will hold a meeting in connection with the open discussion.

Takoma Park's Liquor Election Taken to Court

'Wets' Assail D. C. Right to Hold Referendum; Ask Injunction.

residents, the petition said, was to hold a public meeting, which was provided for in the 1934 liquor act. The "blind vote" now contemplated offers the Commssioners no chance to observe the opposing sides and learn "whether spokesmen for either side were reasonable men, actuated by a public spirit, or whether they were acting by reason of bias, prejudice, or for other interested motives."

Another angle of the attack on the vote was the assertion that it "lodges a veto power covering an entire locality in a few persons." If the result is controlling, the Commissioners will have obviously "delegated their discretion and governing power into the hands of unknown persons. If it is not controlling, there has been a waste of time and money on the part of all," it was alleged.

The Commissioners have not indicated the period of time within which the vote will be adopted as a guide for granting liquor licenses in Takoma Park, Mr. Leahy said. Under the liquor act all licenses expire January 31, 1935, "and, presumably, at the end of that time, another referendum will be held, as there is no presumption that the residents of Takoma Park today will be the residents of Takoma Park next January. In addition, they might change their votes. The history of prohibition and repeal shows such a change of sentiment."

It was charged that the "present referendum commits the Commissioners to a policy of referendum, on this and other questions, and thus we drift steadily away from the commission form of government and into one of demagogy."

Other Points Raised.

After alleging that "the designation of the area is entirely capricious and arbitrary," the attorneys said the "referendum is aimed directly at the rights of property owners in Takoma Park and elsewhere and may possibly result in the abrogation of leases and destruction of property values."

Other points raised were that the "referendum will be an expense to the District;" that the liquor act "was intended, among other things, to raise revenue," and that if Takoma Park voted "dry" it would allow its citizens to reap the benefits of revenues from other parts of the city.

The final thrust at the vote was taken in the assertion that there are criminal statutes in the District punishing election frauds, which "can be perpetrated with impunity." It is unheard of in this country that an election or referendum shall be held with nothing to make certain that it will be a true election. This shows how utterly unprepared the District is for holding a referendum of this sort, and how entirely at variance such a referendum is with our scheme of government."

"I have read the brief very carefully," Commissioner George A. Allen said after he had been served with a copy of the plea.

"My answer to it would be to turn the brief back to the court with one more paragraph saying: 'So what?'"

District officials will oppose the effort to stop the voting, the commissioner said and, if the decision is against them, will appeal to a higher court.

"The Takoma Park wets must be afraid of the outcome of the balloting," Mr. Allen said. "The referendum seems to me to be fair to everyone in the neighborhood. So far as I am concerned I am going to be bound to the last detail by the outcome of the balloting."

unlawful obstruction, combination or assemblage" to retire to their homes before noon tomorrow.

This edict was regarded as an ultimatum to the strike sector on whose battle fronts in South Carolina seven men have been killed since the general strike went into effect, as the Governor for the past 24 hours has been "seriously considering" declaring martial law in the State.

The chief executive explained his proclamation was issued in conformity with a State statute requiring formal notice before issuing a declaration of martial law or state of insurrection.

"My proclamation of tonight is that notice," the Governor said.

Gov. Blackwood explained the chief difference between a state of insurrection and martial law was technical. Under a state of insurrection declaration, he said, civil authorities are still in charge; but troops are at their disposal, habeas corpus is suspended and authorities are empowered to commandeer any resources necessary to their work, as under martial law.

"I may or may not declare a state of insurrection," the Governor said, adding that if he did, the area to which the declaration would apply had not been designated.

This development came tonight as Southern textile manufacturers, aided by National Guardsmen, took a toe-hold today and launched a counter offensive against unionists, reopening their plants in several towns while strike "flying squadrons" rested from their mill-closing campaign.

A score of mills reopened behind menacing rows of bayonets in the Carolinas, and one started up in Alabama with the aid of officers. In addition, guardsmen and thousands of special officers patrolled the properties of mills which had fought off the demands of the flying squadrons that their employes come out.

A crowd of strike sympathizers were dispersed by tear gas loosed by National Guardsmen stationed at the Woodside Mill, at Greenville, S. C. One of the marchers was injured when struck on the head by a rock. Col. H. O. Withington, commanding the troops, said the crowd, led by flag-waving women, tried to force a path through the ranks of his soldiers.

Today's lull in picketing promised only a brief respite, however, as United Textile Workers reorganized their forces to resume activities Monday after the week-end closedown. Most mills in this area do not operate on Saturday.

As the strike ended its first active week, independent surveys indicated the score was slightly in favor of the union.

Best available figures after the rapid-fire of closings and reopenings in the past two days indicated 70,000 of North Carolina's textile workers remained idle, out of 111,000 in all branches of the industry. Reopenings in South Carolina were fewer, National Guardsmen largely devoting their time to protecting mills which never completely closed. Reports indicated that 40,000 of that State's 65,000 workers were out.

Georgia reported 38,290 of 60,000 out; Alabama 15,000 of 38,000; Tennessee 4,000 of 25,000; Mississippi 800 of 4,700; Virginia none of 22,000; Maryland only 25 of 9,000; Oklahoma 550 of 760, and Texas 350 of 5,000. Florida, with only a handful of mills, was not affected.

Gorman to Speak at Funeral.

Governors of both North Carolina and South Carolina today answered critics of their actions in calling out troops to halt the activities of "flying squadrons" which in many cases had forced entry into mills and physically ejected workers, asserting they were acting only to preserve law and order.

Meanwhile, National leaders of the union laid plans for a giant funeral at Honea Path, S. C., at 3 p. m. tomorrow, for five of the six strikers killed in a clash with officers and antistrike employes of the Chiquola Mill yesterday.

John Peel, Southern strike director, said that Francis J. Gorman, National director, would speak at the funeral, and that Norman Thomas, head of the Socialist party in the United States, had indicated he might attend. The death toll from the strike in the South remained at ten. There was no additional major violence today.

Governor's Life Threatened.

Gov. Blackwood, replying to a reported assertion by Gorman that he had been "hostile" to strikers, revealed his life had been threatened by anonymous letters if he continued to use the troops, and that dynamiting of the executive mansion also had been threatened.

The strike area was quiet except for the trouble at the Woodside Mill at Greenville.

Only one flying squadron was reported active in the Carolinas, which for three days have watched large motorcades roar through the countryside, closing mill after mill. At a small plant near Shelby squadsmen ordered a close-down. Mill officials refused and a force-out was promised at the next shift-changing time. Troops were called, but no violence resulted.

Practically all mills which operated in the principal textile areas did so behind National Guard lines. Plants in many towns outside of the western sections of two States have never been molested. The great textile concentration is in the Piedmont, an area 60 to 100 miles wide, stretching from Greensboro, near the Virginia line, to Anderson, near the Georgia line.

Dictator Long Masses Army In New Orleans

gas bombs and the like that anxious fathers and mothers of "soldier boys" decided to do something.

A citizens' committee at Monroe got behind parents to ask President Roosevelt to step in and issue an Executive order to "exempt schoolboys from active armed service in a purely political issue."

The call for guardsmen took many of the high school students there as well as elsewhere in the State. It almost broke up fall football training at Louisiana College at Alexandria.

Long's Life Threatened.

Alfred D. St. Amant, of Baton Rouge, was so incensed when his son was drafted for duty that he sent Senator Long a telegram informing him that if any harm or injury came to his son "as a result of this mad effort of yours, either by accident or otherwise, I will personally kill you as I would any other mad dog."

Long sat in his suite atop a skyscraper hotel, surrounded by personal bodyguards and State soldiers. Walmsley moved about City Hall, conferring with his political leaders.

In his telegram, St. Amant said: "I understand you have had the Governor order the several National Guard units of the State mobilized for duty in New Orleans or elsewhere over the period of the approaching primary. My son, Thomas Harris St. Amant, is a member of Company A, 156th Infantry, now mobilizing at Baton Rouge. This is to notify you that should any harm or injury come to him as a result of this mad effort of yours, either by accident or otherwise, I will personally kill you as I would any other mad dog."

Rule Made Absolute.

The Louisiana "Kingfish" assumed his toga of legal dictatorship at the stroke of noon, when laws he had passed at the recent special session of the Legislature became effective. He made his rule absolute by force of arms.

Long presided at the Legislature during its five-day session, directed the writing of all the bills, guided them through both houses and then saw that they were signed by Gov. O. K. Allen, his major domo.

The laws, among other things, set up a legislative committee which is conducting an investigation of charges of graft and corruption in the New Orleans city government. Numerous witnesses already have testified city officials received large "pay-offs" from gambling establishments and that municipal officials were connected with other illegal practices.

Other "dictator" statutes gave Long control of a State police force, described as a private army, placed the appointment of election officials in his hands, prevented the courts from interfering with his use of State troops, provided for an unlimited reprieve power, forestalled the use of special police by municipalities and outlawed racing handbooks.

Long charged that Mayor Walmsley had imported Col. Guy Molony, a leader of Central American revolutions, to head a machine gun detachment on election day.

Molony, a former New Orleans superintendent of police, denied before the city investigating committee that he had been hired for such a purpose, but said he "would be glad to do it."

Walmsley also denied that the soldier of fortune had been hired for military duty and explained that he had conferred with Molony a few hours after his arrival yesterday because they were old friends.

Calls Long Madman.

The mayor said he told Molony the "civil liberties of the people were being attacked by a madman," and he might call upon him, "as a citizen," to aid in fighting Long.

The first action of the current invasion occurred late today when a detachment of militiamen unloading machine guns from a freight car seized a newspaper photographer who had taken pictures of them and destroyed his plates after he was told, "Keep your mouth shut or I'll throw you in the brig."

There was a strained tenseness in political circles as every one shied away from talk about possible armed conflict and bloodshed.

Senator Long issued a formal statement proposing that there be "not one armed man at the polls" during the election. Mayor Walmsley issued a similar statement saying there would be none of his policemen around the voting precincts unless they were ordered there by the election arbitration committee as provided for by law.

Kilauea, in Raging Temper, Hurls Tons of Lava Skyward

Fierce Winds Caused by Tremendous Heat at Volcano.

Hilo, Hawaii, Sept. 7 (AP).—A fiery cauldron 100 acres in area, with sides nearly one-fifth of a mile high, hissed and roared today as the huge Kileauea volcano continued the tossing of fountains of lava within its pit. There was no sign of cessation of the eruption, which began yesterday.

Bright fires burned along the edges of the pit. Seen from the rim 1,000 feet above, they appeared small, but in reality they were giant flames 50 to 100 feet high.

Before dawn the volcano put on an awesome show, rumbling explosively while it tossed lava toward the sky. The tremendous heat ascending from the pit caused fierce winds.

The wild shrieks of the wind as it tore over the plateau mingled with throaty rumblings of the volcano and made more eerie one of the earth's strangest sights.

The spectacle throughout Thursday night surpassed in brilliancy any seen here by the present generation. From villages along the seacoast a glow showed blood-red against the sky, with a background darkened by smoke rolling upward.

Occasionally a subterranean explosion sent a volley of lava rocks screaming skyward, where the flaming missiles lighted the heavens like skyrockets. They slowly burned out as they dropped back toward the pit.

Three Admit Plot To Hide Dillinger; Fourth Fights Case

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—Pleas of guilty were entered today by two doctors and a lawyer accused with Louis P. Piquett, Chicago attorney, of having conspired to harbor John Dillinger, notorious desperado slain by police July 22. Piquett pleaded not guilty. His trial was set for September 17.

The physicians, Dr. Wilhelm Loeser and Dr. Harold B. Cassidy, admitted performing a face-lifting operation on Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter, also slain by police.

The third to plead guilty was Arthur W. O'Leary, young attorney employed by Piquett.

The three testified yesterday before the Federal grand jury, which returned the indictments against them and are expected to be Government witnesses against Piquett, who is accused of having arranged for hiding Dillinger and Van Meter, of arranging for the operations, of paying the physicians and of having allowed his suite of offices in a Loop skyscraper to be used as a rendezvous for the gangsters.

Lupescu Yields To Save Carol

tion as the best way to silence growing criticism of Carol.

[A group of Rumanian army officers recently was convicted of plotting against the lives of Carol, members of his court and Mme. Lupescu.—EDITOR.]

All the one-time junk dealer's daughter asks as the price of her withdrawal, the reports said here, is the right to reside quietly in Rumania as one of Carol's loyal subjects.

The diplomats here understood, too, that Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania was striving to untangle the marital snarls that enveloped Carol and Helen 10 years ago when the young, handsome crown prince first caught sight of Mme. Lupescu.

Likewise in the background of the reported efforts to renew relations between Carol and Princess Helen, it was said, was the recent engagement of Prince George of England to Princess Marina of Greece.

King George and Queen Mary, it was contended, will be anxious to invite all Europe's crowned heads to the state ceremony in Westminster Abbey this winter that will unite George and Marina.

Should Queen Marie, with the help of the British royal family, prevail on Carol and Helen to go back together again, it was pointed out, an awkward meeting of the two in London might be avoided.

Both Carol and Helen are related to Great Britain's rulers.

Queen Marie's role in the reconciliation, it was pointed out here, is in keeping with her known devotion to Princess Helen.

Responsible for Carol's marriage to Helen, Queen Marie's affection for her son's estranged wife continued even after she had instituted divorce proceedings against Carol.

Rumania's dowager queen, it is known, has been invited to make an early visit to Balmoral Castle, in Scotland, and it was believed not unlikely that peace in Rumania's royal household might be discussed in connection with plans for the wedding of George and Marina.

President Upholds 'Bargaining' Plan

For the present, he conceded, the future appears vague and uncertain. But the ultimate objective, he added, is becoming increasingly clear, although no definite program has yet been decided to ask at the next Congress.

The recovery act expires next June.

He explained that the whole system of Federal supervision of American business is one of trial and error. Code provisions which appear desirable will be retained, he said, but other provisions, either found unworkable or questionable, will be modified or eliminated completely.

Thus the abolition of child labor, about which there is an unanimity of opinion, he said, will undoubtedly be continued. And collective bargaining, he added, likewise is here to say, in his opinion.

McAdoo Sees President.

Continuing his discussion, the President said a number of NRA practices are on the border-line. Among them, he said for the first time, is the question of price fixing, about which a continual controversy has raged ever since the recovery administration moved into this field.

The President's comments on the NRA followed closely a conference with California's lean Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, who has just returned to this country from abroad to find his home State suddenly become the center of political attention. Their meeting, however, did not break the discreet silence which both have maintained concerning the overwhelming victory of Upton Sinclair, erstwhile Socialist, in California's Democratic primary for Governor.

Mr. Roosevelt said they discussed numerous topics, but would not go into detail. But among them, it was clear, was the question of Mr. Sinclair. So far, Senator McAdoo, pleading ignorance of affairs at home, has not taken a position in regard to the nominee, further than to state that personally he is a good friend. From Hyde Park, the Senator proceeded to Washington.

The Californian was one of a number of conferees called to Hyde Park by the President, who explained that he is following last summer's procedure, that of summoning visitors to question them for information. Besides Senator McAdoo he had for guests at luncheon, during which foreign affairs were discussed, Pierre Flandin, French minister of public works, Mme. Flandin and their daughter.

Others discussing conditions with the President today were Wallace V. Donham, dean of the Harvard Business School; Percy Straus, of New York's R. H. Macy & Co., and Nelson W. Cheney, State senator from Erie County. None of them is being considered for public office, it was learned on good authority.

Los Angeles Probes Dynamite Bootlegging

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Los Angeles County grand jury today launched an investigation into what police said was a gigantic explosives bootleg gang that has been peddling dynamite to any and all who would buy it.

The jury summoned five persons arrested recently on charges of stealing and selling 9 tons of explosives, and also called several police officers. The nature of testimony wanted from the officers was not disclosed.

Selkirk, Radio Pioneer, Found Shot to Death

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—Andrew Selkirk, 40, pioneer radio program impresario and former cellist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, was found shot to death in his apartment on the near North Side today. Police said he apparently had taken his own life.

Friends said Selkirk came to Chicago ten years ago after being graduated from the University of Texas and assembled complete shows for radio presentation. Recently, they said, Selkirk suffered financial losses.

Members of State Society to Make Pilgrimage Tomorrow.

Members of the California State Society in the District of Columbia will make a pilgrimage to the Washington Cathedral at 3 p. m. tomorrow to see the California State flag hanging from the Triforium Gallery of the Great Choir. Other residents of California now living in the District of Columbia are invited to participate in this pilgrimage which will begin in the Chapel of St. John.

The Rev. G. Freeland Peter will deliver the sermon at the service of morning prayer and Holy Communion in the Great Choir at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. John Temple, rector of Christ Church, Georgetown, will preach at the evensong service at 4 p. m. Music will be furnished at both services by the Cathedral Choir of men and boys.

Bishop James E. Freeman will preach tomorrow in the chapel of the United States Military Academy at West Point. He is expected to arrive in Washington early next week, and will preach his first sermon in the Cathedral after his return at the evensong service, a week from tomorrow.

Dr. Forney Hutchinson To Preach Twice.

Dr. Forney Hutchinson, pastor, will occupy his pulpit at both services tomorrow at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At the morning hour his subject will be "The Saviour's Great Proposal;" at the 8 p. m. service, "Building the Temple." The choir will present the anthem, "Christ Triumphant," Christiansen, and "We Thank One God," Bach. Offertory solos will be sung by Arthur M. Tabbutt and Mrs. Lily Garrett. The Young Adult and Young Peoples' Departments will hold evening services at 7 p. m.

Dr. Albert J. McCartney Returns to Pulpit.

Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, minister of the Convenant-First Presbyterian Church, returns to his pulpit tomorrow morning after a vacation in the West. The morning service will be in celebration of the Sacrement of the Lord's Supper.

The Sunday School sessions will open formally on September 23, at 9:45 a. m., with a rally day service. The general class studying the regular Sunday school lesson will be taught this Sunday at 10 a. m. by Judge Hugh M. Tate. There will be a special class for children.

Rev. Ferguson to Preach On "Burning Hearts."

The acting minister, the Rev. Rush P. Ferguson, will preach tomorrow at both services at Centennial Baptist Church. At the morning service his subject will be "Burning Hearts" and at 8 p. m. he will preach on "The Test of Conversion." There will be special music by the choir.

The church has set Sunday, September 23, as Homecoming Sunday, and a special program has been arranged.

Services to Resume In All Souls' Church.

After the summer period of union services, regular services will be resumed in All Souls' Church (Unitarian) Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with the minister, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., in the pulpit. Dr. and Mrs. Pierce have just returned from a summer spent at Chautauqua, N. Y., northern New England and Canada. The subject of the sermon will be "The Gospel of Tolerance." Sessions of the church school will be resumed on Sunday morning, September 16.

Dr. John Compton Ball To Give Two Sermons.

Dr. John Compton Ball, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, has returned from his summer home at Lake Mohonk, N. Y., and will occupy the pulpit at both services tomorrow. The morning theme will be "An Unchanging Christ for the Changing Times." In the evening his text will be "My Father's World." The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the moning hour.

Ohev Sholom Synagogue Topics Announced.

"Religiosity vs. Profanity," and "Praying For All Humanity," will be the subjects of Rabbi Z. Greene's sermons at the morning services of Rosh-Hashono on September 11 and 12, respectively, at the Ohev Sholom Synagogue, Fifth and I streets northwest. Services will be conducted also on the evenings of Sunday and Monday, September 10 and 11.

Cantor R. Greenberg, with a choir will chant the prayers at all services.

Rock Creek Episcopal Church Services.

Dr. Raphael H. Miller, minister of the National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will return to his pulpit tomorrow after a month's absence on a speaking tour. He will preach on "An Open Door—With Difficulties" at the morning service and "Vision and Reality" in the evening.

On his tour he delivered a series of lectures at the Winona Conference at Winona Lake, Ind., and at the Westminister Conference at Westminister, Md.

Universalist Church Resumes Services.

"A Faith to Live By" is the sermon the Rev. Dr. Frederic W. Perkins will deliver at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Universalist National Memorial Church. This will be the first service held in the church since the closing of the union summer services with Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and All Souls' Unitarian Church. Music will be furnished tomorrow by the National Capital Choir of 30 voices under the direction of Dr. Albert W. Harned.

Mount Pleasant Church Teachers Plan Retreat.

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, minister of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will occupy the pulpit tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock his sermon subject being "The Church's One Foundation." This service is the first following the summer union services with All Souls' Church (Unitarian) and the Universalist National Memorial Church.

The teaching staff and officers of the Church School plan a retreat September 22 and 23, when they will work out plans for the year.

"Man" Is Lesson-Sermon For Christian Scientists.

"Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Romans iiiv:14: "As many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female created He them. (Gen. 1:26-27.)

The lesson-sermon also includes a passage from the Christian Science Text Book, page 591.

Spiritual Preparedness Dr. R. W. Weaver's Topic.

"National Defense Through Spiritual Preparedness" will be the subject of Dr. Rufus W. Weaver at the First Baptist Church tomorrow morning, in his series of sermons on "The New Deal and the Christian Faith." The evening service will be conducted by the B. Y. P. U., with the Rev. Harvey V. Prentice, superintendent of Gospel Mission, as the speaker. A musical program will include a solo by Francis Williams and songs by a quartet, Evangeline Cowden, Kathryne Cowden, Lila Hicks and Lillian Smith.

The following are attending the B. Y. P. U. retreat at Braddock Heights today and tomorrow: Mr. and Mrs. James L. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Smith, Lillian Smith, Evangeline Cowden, Kathryne Cowden, Nellie Fike, Lila Hicks, Thelma Hicks, Henry Hefley, Clyde Gainous, Dovey Overby, Alice Steadman, Eva Powell, Gus Thompson, Jack Claspell, Neil Murphy, William B. Wise, O. L. White and Bob Wright.

Dr. Allen A. Stockdale Back Following Vacation.

Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregational Church, returns to his pulpit tomorrow morning after his summer vacation. The church has been thoroughly renovated and redecorated for fall and winter activities.

Dr. Stockdale will preach at 11 a. m. on "A Home Made World." Katherine Fowler Rogers will substitute at the organ in the absence of Paul DeLong Gable. There will be no evening service.

An Old Depression Cure

King Hezekiah, Faced With Economic Calamity in Judah 2,600 Years Ago, Beat the Crisis With a Religious Revival.

By William T. Ellis.

Everybody who sits in a watch-tower these days observes that people are all thinking in larger terms. The war and the depression have shaken us out of our provincialism. National thinking has increased immeasurably, and world thinking is not lagging far behind. Viewpoints have enlarged, horizons have widened, sympathies have expanded, communications have increased. Drought in the West becomes the deep concern of the East. A strike in San Francisco agitates the entire United States. What is going on in Japan and Germany stirs the whole world. Events in Austria set civilization's nerves a-quiver.

Dimly, the people are coming to understand that what affects any of us also affects all of us, and that the whole is but the sum of all of its parts. What the physicians call "local treatment" can not cure the ills of the body politic. Effective remedies must deal with the entire system. That is why the United States and Canada, and nations abroad are handling the unemployment and relief problem on a Federal scale.

Old King Hezekiah, who began to reign over Judah more than seven hundred years before the birth of Christ, was well aware of this big, basic truth. So our newest ideas are not so new, after all. Hezekiah saw unrest and disaster abroad in Israel and Judah. The Northern Kingdom had already suffered the early incursions of the Assyrians—a movement that was to grow until soon the whole nation of Israel would be taken into exile. "The times were out of joint." Economic and social distress had developed from the abandonment of the ancient integrities of life. Religion had been debased and idolatry had become prevalent. As always, a slump in morals and in prosperity had followed the loss of spiritual ideals.

If I had but one word to say to the youth of today, it would be "Begin your life work early. Cultivate some major interest, and then start right in at it. Utilize your powers in their freshness, when the audacity of youth is still strong within you." The most successful magazine of the present generation was started a few years ago by some young college graduates, and it is still run by them, though even elder statesmen read its pages attentively.

So it was with Isaiah. He won an unusually long stretch of service because he dared to speak the deepest convictions of his heart when still a young man. It was then, at the period when the spirit is most susceptible to religious emotions, that he had his great personal experience of God, which made him a prophet, and gave him something to speak and to write.

If there has been a silence of trumpet-voiced Isaiahs in our time, there has been a surplus of piping sounds from the frog-ponds of cynicism and criticism. Egotistical commentators upon life, "debunkers," "wisecrackers," "smart alecks" have become the plague of modern literature. Over-sophisticated, irreverent, erotic in mind, they have debauched the ideals of silly youth.

Vision Found Isaiah Ready.

What makes the difference? Well, principally because this "modern school" of "realists" have worshiped at the shrine of the perpendicular pronoun, which is the present day pillar of Baal. They have an exalted sense of self-consciousness. Whereas the Isaiahs of literature have looked upon the glory and majesty of the Most High God, and have caught a sense of His purity and power and justice and love. A man's work will be according to his conception of God. If his god is himself his work will be proportionately small.

Even now we may imagine the excitement in every walled town and wayside village, as the king's messenger read the royal rescript. Here was something to talk about. As a feat of propaganda, the king's purpose and edict was a success.

Hezekiah was as real a man as Roosevelt; and his story is documented by contemporary records of the Assyrians and the Hebrews. One of his works stands today a marvel and mystery of achievement, baffling the wisest modern engineers. When Jerusalem was menaced by Sennacharib, and the city's sole water supply threatened, Hezekiah ordered a tunnel dug to carry the water to what later was called the Pool of Siloam, within the old city walls. The workmen began at both ends simultaneously, and, for unknown reasons, followed a serpentine course, and met in the middle, with the grade exactly right for the flow of the water. It still runs today; and the oldest Hebrews inscription extant, cut by the workmen into the walls of the tunnel to commemorate the feat, may be seen in the museum in Istanbul. This is only one of scores of dramatic archeological corroborations of the authenticity of the Bible record.

While our lesson tale is of interest as a vivid historical event of 2,600 years ago, it is of most importance as a monition for today. In a time of National crisis, we may follow Hezekiah's example, as many living voices are calling upon us to do. We need to get back to first principles, and to the master motives. A new spirit in all the people alone can effect the results which we seek. On the lowest political and economic basis, a revival of religion is indicated as our basic need.

It will straighten out crookedness in finance and politics. It will reestablish the Christian virtues in the home and in social relationships. It will purify the motion pictures, the stage and the gutter press. It will abate the crime menace and solve the liquor question. It will fertilize the barren thinking of our young people. It will set people to living at their best, instead of at their worst. It will recognize the sovereignty of the Lord over all of life.

Hezekiah's plan succeeded, as will any sincere modern duplicates of it.

Church College Plans 8th Year

Opening September 17 at Columbia Christian Education School.

The Columbia College of Christian Education (formerly Columbia Bible Training School) will open at the school headquarters, 1724 H street northwest, at 8 p. m. Monday, September 17, with a program of music, a summary of subjects by instructors, and matriculation of students, followed by a reception.

Ten denominations are represented by officials and instructors of the school, which is coeducational. Benjamin J. Brooks is chairman, and the board of trustees is composed of Lewis E. Breuninger, the Rev. George Fiske Dudley, John A. Garber, William S. Jones, Irving L. Koch, Fred P. Myers, Hervin U. Roop, Elsie Wade Stone, and James Trimble. Miss Stone is president of the school. Both day and evening classes are held.

Three courses are offered, a bachelor of theology course, a general Bible and missionary training course and a special course for students who do not wish to take examinations. Special attention is given to music in the choir school, which offers an education in music with the degree of master of music.

Conley to Urge Single Term if He Is Governor

Ritchie Foe Pledges Move in Talk to Baltimore Democrats.

Baltimore, Sept. 7 (Spl.).—A State law forbidding any Governor of Maryland to succeed himself will be urged by Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, if he is elected Governor in the November elections, Dr. Conley declared in a speech here last night.

Addressing members of the Calumet Democratic Club, Dr. Conley quoted a statement of Gov. Ritchie that Ritchie wished Dr. Conley luck on 364 days of the year, "but not on September 12," which is primary election day.

"So far as I am concerned Ritchie and I can be enemies 365 days in the year," Dr. Conley declared.

Gov. Ritchie also has been actively campaigning in Baltimore during the last several days, making speeches at two political clubs last night. He impressed upon his hearers that he was well and strong following his return from his vacation trip to France.

On the Republican side, last night was marked by a statement by Harry W. Nice, candidate for the G. O. P. nomination for Governor, that if elected he will abolish any State office for which he can not find a capable appointee within the borders of Maryland. His administration as Governor will be "Maryland for Marylanders," he said, and he promised to use Maryland-made products in the State wherever practicable.

Frederick County Sees Active Campaigning

Frederick, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—A large crowd attended a Democratic meeting of friends and supporters of Gov. Ritchie at Grange Hall, New Market, near here, tonight.

The speakers were Charles E. Moylan, one of the judges of the tax appeal court, Baltimore, and David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of state. Both speakers appealed for support of Gov. Ritchie in the primary election September 12.

More than 5,000 persons, including delegations from Baltimore City and practically every county in the State, are expected at the big barbecue under the auspices of the Conley-for-Governor Club at the Fairgrounds tomorrow. Music will be furnished by bands. William J. Grove, veteran Democrat and chairman of the State central committee, will preside at a mass meeting on the grounds and, following a short address, will present the principal speakers, Dr. Conley, Alban M. Wood and Samuel A. Lewis.

A meeting of the district leaders and workers will be held on the grounds at which final plans will be made for the primary election.

Seventy ministers of Protestant churches of Frederick City and County in a statement today urged voters to cast their ballot against the sale of beer and light wine and the sale of beer, wine and distilled liquor at the primary election. All of the 26 election districts of the county will vote separately to determine whether or not beer, and light wine or beer, wine or whiskey may be sold in the districts.

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—State Senator David J. Ward, of Wicomico County, who is not a candidate for reelection, came out yesterday with an indorsement of Dr. Charles H. Conley for Governor, subject to the Democratic primaries.

2 Get Life Terms For Pay Robbery

Orange, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Convicted of assault and robbery of James P. Dempsey, well-known Fredericksburg (Va.) business man, William Henry Porter and Thomas Porter, colored, were sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday by Judge A. T. Browning in the Orange County Circuit Court.

Dempsey said he was attacked by the Negroes July 28 near a lumber camp, to which he had carried a $125 pay roll. The men robbed him of $75, he said. After beating him, he said, his attackers seized his automobile and escaped. The abandoned car was found by Alexandria police a few days later.

The jury in yesterday's trial deliberated 16 minutes before returning a verdict of guilty and recommendation of life imprisonment. The case went to the jury early last night. The defendants, pleading not guilty, brought forth three witnesses to testify they were in Alexandria at the time of the holdup. The men were positively identified by Dempsey as his assailants.

Sheetz Is Elected Kiwanians' Head

Winchester, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—The Winchester Kiwanis Club has named H. C. Sheetz president, and Garland R. Quarles and John Glover as delegates to the Capital District session of the organization at Richmond, October 11 to 13.

Alternate delegates include Ansell Solenberger, R. Edwin Buckwalter and Wendell Goode.

The Kiwanians also voted to award a banner of efficiency to a Boy Scout at the next court of honor for Shenandoah area here. The area includes Northern Virginia and adjacent West Virginia counties and cities.

D. C. Cab Operator Fined in Virginia

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Merle Taylor, Washington taxicab operator, was fined $50 and costs yesterday for permitting ten of his cabs to transport CCC workers from Spotsylvania to Washington without Virginia licenses.

Taylor told Trial Justice R. T. Dillard he was not aware that sending District cabs into Virginia was a violation of State laws. The ten taxi drivers were arrested Friday.

Maj. Kent Sane, Judge Ordering Trial Resumed

'Important Witness' to Be Produced by Defense; Case Is Rested.

Fincastle, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Adjudged sane by a lunacy commission after 12 hours of apparent unconsciousness and incoherent talk, Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., was brought into Botetourt Circuit Court again late today as Judge A. C. Buchanan ordered his trial resumed for the kidnaping of Mrs. Mary J. Hastings.

Led into the courtroom on the arm of Deputy Sheriff J. J. Neffsinger, the defendant and his attorney, S. R. Price, went into a vacant room for a conference. A few minutes later the jury entered the court room and Maj. Kent, with his wife holding to his arm, returned to the court room.

The defense presented only four Breckenridge and questioned him about the size and personal appearance of Mrs. Hastings.

Defense Attorney S. R. Price then held a whispered conference with his client, asked the court's permission for a short conference and left the courtroom. Within a few minutes he returned with the announcement that the defense rested.

Court was adjourned by Judge Buchanan until 9 a. m. tomorrow. He said instructions to the jury would be agreed upon in chambers tonight.

The defense rested this afternoon, reserving the right to introduce testimony by a man described as "an important witness, now in Ohio." The witness was described as Lewis Burkholder, of New Market.

The defense presented only four witnesses and made capital of a triangular piece cut out of the front seat of Kent's automobile after it was seized by officers. County policemen testified that the fabric was cut after the machine was taken from Kent.

Kent Again Is Upset.

Kent has had frequent "fits" since he was arrested and lodged in Roanoke Jail, while awaiting trial on two separate indictments charging him with the kidnaping and murder of Mrs. Hastings, whose body was found near Stroudsburg, Pa.

Yesterday he collapsed as the trial opened for its fourth day, and was apparently unconscious 12 hours, although Dr. J. S. Dejarnette, of the Western State Hospital, asserted he was faking.

When it was indicated today that he could not tell the difference between a hat and a sheep, thought his personal physician was his father and that he was in Roanoke, 20 miles away, Judge A. C. Buchanan ordered the commission formed to report on Kent's mental state. In the event he was found insane it was declared that a juror would be struck, a mistrial declared and Kent placed in an institution.

Serving on the commission to fix Kent's mental condition were Dr. J. S. Dejarnette, superintendent of the Western State Hospital at Staunton; Dr. J. W. Freed, of the same institution, and Dr. George Wright. They called several witnesses who had been in contact with Kent since his arrest, then questioned Kent.

During the questioning, held in the jail, Kent told Dr. Dejarnette that he "didn't know the trial was going on," and that he "didn't know Mrs. Hastings."

"Do you know where you are?" the doctor asked him.

"I think I am in Roanoke," Kent said. "I didn't know the trial was coming up. I am very weak."

Thinks He Is Weak.

"What makes you think you are weak?" asked the doctor.

"My physical condition," the man replied. "I had a hard time fighting off an attack."

"What were you doing day before yesterday, whatever it was?" the doctor insisted.

Kent failed to answer, and Dr. Dejarnette tried another line of examination. He asked Kent to count from one to ten and the man mumbled "five, seven, ten."

He was then asked to count from ten to one.

"Ten, nine, three, one," he said.

Kent told the doctor that he had studied law in Chicago, but did not know whether he had fought in the war or not. Dr. Dejarnette asked him what his rank in the Army had been and he replied "private."

The doctor then raised two fingers and asked Kent how many he saw.

"Four," said Kent.

He then referred to hats as sheep. Kent said he remembered regaining consciousness last night.

"How did you know whether it was day or night?" the doctor asked him, "You don't know whether it is day or night now."

"What month is it?" the doctor asked then.

"June," replied Kent.

Teas at Kenmore To Resume Today

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.), Weekly teas at Kenmore, home of Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington, will be resumed tomorrow.

Hostesses will be Miss Aylmer Gray, chairman of the Kenmore Association tea committee; Miss Anna Braxton, Miss Grace V. Halsey, Mrs. W. Spencer Hutchinson, jr., and Mrs. Maude S. Farlow.

Mrs. Hutchinson and Mrs. Farlow, visiting from Massachusetts, are cooperating with the association in reorganizing the Kenmore Children's Brigade, instituted to enlist the interest of younger residents in maintaining the Kenmore shrine.

Green to Flay 'New Deal' in House Battle

Arlington County Lawyer Opposes Rep. Smith in Eighth District.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509. Clarendon, Va.

John Locke Green, Arlington County attorney and Republican nominee for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District, will open his campaign tonight in the auditorium of the Manassas High School. Green is opposing Representative Howard W. Smith, Democratic incumbent. He will speak in opposition to the "New Deal."

A delegation from the county numbering more than 100 Republicans headed by County Chairman Grayson Ahalt will leave the county in automobiles at 6:30 p. m. today to attend the meeting.

Due to a misunderstanding regarding the registration of students at the Washington-Lee High School which opens on Monday, Principal S. P. Vanderslive announces registration will be as follows:

Monday morning, students attending the seventh, eighth and ninth grades in the junior high school will report. Tuesday morning, students in the tenth, eleventh and twelfth grades of the high school will report. All classes will begin at 9 a. m. Wednesday.

Despite stormy weather more than 50 children at the St. John's Episcopal Orphans Home, located on Columbia pike, yesterday were made happy at the annual picnic held by the officials of the Arlington County Dairy. Herbert L. Marcey, one of the company officials, assisted by the teachers, distributed candy, ice cream and cake.

County Manager Roy S. Braden announces that Wilson boulevard extended to the Arlington Memorial Bridge and Harlow avenue to Rosslyn has been closed to traffic in preparation for surface treatment. The work will be done by Carson & Gruman, of Washington.

Capt. Ledrue Strobel, of the Alexandria Rescue Squad, has been designated chief judge of the hook-up and hose-laying contests to be held by the Arlington-Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association at the intersection of Pershing drive and Glebe road today at 1:30 p. m. Strobel will name the other two judges this afternoon.

A feature of the contests to be held will be the ladies' pumper contest by a team from the Jefferson Fire Department Auxiliary.

Italy, France Join To Block Hitler

standing were met with confirmation in other quarters here tonight close to leaders in both Rome and Paris.

The general opinion was that such a pact was rapidly taking form, and observers believed the French were denying it had been reached chiefly in order to save the formal announcement for the meeting of Foreign Minister Barthou and Premier Mussolini, in Rome, possibly by the end of the month.

It is known that the French and Italians have been negotiating on political and naval questions in recent weeks.

San Pedro, Calif., Sept. 7 (AP).—In 1,181 iron-bound boxes part of a $2,000,000 shipment of silver from Shanghai, China, arrived here today en route to the United States Subtreasury in New York. The silver consists of bars and Chinese dollars.

GroundBroken For M.E. Church In Chevy Chase

Corner Stone Exercises to Be Held About October 1.

Ground was broken yesterday, without ceremony, for the new Chevy Chase Methodist Church, at Connecticut avenue and Shepherd street, Chevy Chase, Md. The corner stone will be laid about October 1, with appropriate exercises.

The English Gothic one-story building will be of native stone, with leaded windows and slate roof. The interior finish will be of sand-finished plaster. There will be a divided chancel, with pulpit and lectern, provision being made for installation of a pipe organ in the future. The seating capacity will be 200, which may be increased by the addition of a balcony, when necessary.

Back of the chancel will be the pastor's study and a choir room, connecting with the present frame building, which has housed the congregation since its organization in September, 1912. The old building will be renovated for use by the church school.

Church to Cost $19,000.

The plans, which were prepared by Richard S. Johnson, architect, have been approved by the Bureau of Architecture of the Methodist Church headquarters in Philadelphia. The cost will be $19,000 and the contract calls for completion in 126 working days.

The first pastor of the church was the Rev. Dr. Lucien Clark, who served eight years without salary. Other pastors have been the Rev. J. Luther Neff, the Rev. A. S. Mowbray, the Rev. J. Turnbull Spicknall and the Rev. Edward Gardner Latch, who is now serving.

Members of the board of trustees comprise the building committee. They are Harvey L. Curtis, chairman; Alexander Ashley, Frank Simpson, William E. Springer, M. Rea Shafer, Horace E. Troth, jr., Rigel O. Belt, Walter S. Gard and William L. Orem, jr.

Other Committees.

Committee on furnishing—William L. Oren, jr., chairman; Mrs. Orem, Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Belt, Mr. and Mrs. M. Rea Shafer, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Johnson, Horace E. Troth, jr., and Mrs. Joseph Q. Edwards, president of the Woman's League.

Finance committee—William E. Springer, chairman; M. Rea Shafer and William L. Orem, jr.

The pastor is in charge of memorials and Mrs. Harriet Belt Ingersoll publicity. Paul Sleman has been legal counsel.

Edward L. Simpson, trading as the Chevy Chase Construction Co., is the builder.

Barking Dog Case Fine Is Suspended

Maryland Woman Agrees to Move With Pets.

Fine of $50 imposed on Mrs. Helena Pullman, of Gaithersburg, Md., was suspended yesterday by Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, in Montgomery County Circuit Court when she agreed to move with her barking dogs.

Mrs. Pullman was arrested by Chief of Police Alvie A. Moxley following the filing of a number of complaints by neighbors that the barking of her dogs kept the neighborhood awake. She was charged with maintaining a nuisance.

Charles F. Ricketts, of Rockville, was fined $25 on charges of reckless driving. He appealed and posted bond of $50. Richard Owens, colored, was sentenced to serve six months in the Maryland House of Correction for theft of seven chickens from Lloyd Grubb, and Fred Palmer, colored, was sentenced to 60 days in jail for theft of a watch from Charles Smith. Palmer appealed and was released on $100 bond.

Annulment Is Granted After Bigamy Charge

Annulment of her marriage to Lionel H. Smith, of Capitol Heights, Md., was granted yesterday to Mary E. Scaggs, of Washington, by Judge Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The plaintiff told the court through Attorney Albert M. Boule that she was married at Rockville to Smith January 23, 1931, and lived with him at Capitol Heights until March 3, 1931, when she discovered he had a wife and five children in Kansas.

Father of 12 Denies Murder Of Ill Veteran

Leesburg Jurymen Hear R. D. Cooper Accuse Wife's Stepfather.

A verdict of guilty of voluntary manslaughter was returned at 11:50 last night against Richard Cooper. The jury deliberated 1½ hours. He was sentenced immediately to five years in the State Penitentiary.

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Taking the stand in his own defense today, Richard D. Cooper, 56, one of the four alleged murderers of Basil Brown, 44, disabled war veteran, and the second to be tried, told a jury in Loudoun County Circuit Court that he saw Clarence Barnhouse jump on Brown and beat him to death with a club.

Cooper testified that he and Brown, who he claims had been drinking, were in an altercation on the night of July 1, when the crime was committed, when Barnhouse, who is the stepfather of Cooper's wife, appeared upon the scene.

Barnhouse interfered, Cooper said, and struck Brown several blows with the club. Later, Barnhouse dragged the unconscious man out of the yard to a thicket, where he dealt the death blow, Cooper testified.

Testimony in Conflict.

Conflicting statements marked the trial today, which was heard before a crowded courtroom. The same difference in testimony prevailed today as was noted when Clarence Barnhouse was tried on August 20. Barnhouse, who was sentenced to 15 years in the State Penitentiary, testified for the Commonwealth today.

He said today that the first of his two statements which he made to the Commonwealth was untrue. This statement had said that he killed Brown in self-defense. In his testimony today, he corroborated a subsequent statement, in which he said he came up to the house and saw Cooper and Brown in an altercation.

He said he tried to separate them and that Brown knocked him down and threatened to kill Barnhouse. Then, he said, Barnhouse got the club and knocked Brown unconscious. Then, he said, he and Cooper carried him out of the yard.

Following this, Barnhouse testified, he went upstairs in the Cooper home and went to sleep. He said he did not know that Brown was dead until the next morning, when Mrs. Cooper told him.

Body Found in Ravine.

Brown's body was found in a ravine July 2, with his skull crushed. The ravine is 50 yards from the house. Cooper, who was working on the road at Waterford, reported the death to an official.

Cleveland Harper, 49, who is also under a first degree murder charge for the killing of Brown, testified that he was at the Cooper home on the night of the killing, and that he saw Brown and Cooper fighting and that later he saw Barnhouse come in the yard and strike Brown.

He said he saw Barnhouse carry Brown's body out of the yard and that he heard several more blows and then went to sleep.

An important witness for the Commonwealth was Jesse Johnson, a neighbor who lives 300 yards from the Cooper home. Johnson testified that he heard cursing and loud talking at the Cooper home on the day in question.

He said he heard Brown call for his brother, Arthur, on several occasions. He said he heard Brown say: "Dick, please don't hit me any more. I am dying now. Please, get Arthur." He said he later heard sounds like someone beating on a board fence. Johnson testified the same as he did in the trial of Barnhouse.

$7.50 a Day Minimum Film Pay Fixed by NRA

NRA ruled yesterday that vaudeville and other performers appearing in motion picture theaters should receive at least $7.50 a day, the Associated Press reported.

Interpreting the motion picture code, NRA held the minimum wage of the pact applied regardless of the number of acts given by the performers.

EdgeGivenNice And Ritchie in 3-County Fight

the counties for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, and either Senator Phillip Lee Goldsborough or H. Webster Smith may get their convention votes for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Such upsets, however, seldom occur. Usually political machines that have successfully functioned for long periods bring victory to the candidates they are backing. One reason is that efficient organizations, when they have a choice, as now is the case among the Republicans, only pick men regarded as potential winners.

Since this section is predominantly Republican, the contest within that party is attracting the most interest. The fight there also is more intense than among the Democrats and the outcome somewhat more uncertain. In general, however, Mr. Nice seems to have the support of the younger, militant and active elements of his party.

In Garrett County, with four convention votes, Mr. Nice is supported by the majority of the party's State central committee and district Republican leaders. Lawrence and Neil Fraley, influential brothers in Garrett County, are backing Mr. Smith. Lawrence Fraley, however, is a candidate for clerk of the court and is more interested in his victory than that of the Smith ticket.

Henderson Aids Smith.

Senator Goldsborough has the help of the dry former State Senator Alonzo Naylor and Tom Dawson, George Henderson, the unopposed Republican candidate for attorney general, is working hard for the nomination of Mr. Smith. He lives in Allegany County, but has influence in Garrett. His father was a popular judge in this section. In fact, some think Mr. Henderson will have more influence in this primary in Garrett than in his own county.

Mr. Henderson apparently has not made much progress with the Smith candidacy in Allegany. His powerful ally in previous Republican fights, Nice Wilkinson, Cumberland tax collector, is for Mr. Nice. Mr. Wilkinson is the leader of the Republican City Hall faction, which perennially has battled with the faction headed by David A. Robb, former candidate for attorney general.

Mr. Robb this time is enthusiastically backing the Nice ticket. Mr. Robb is a dry and has been a close friend of Senator Goldsborough. He did not make his declaration until after the Senator entered the race and said he favored Mr. Nice because he was convinced that the latter was the only one of the Republican trio which had a chance of beating Gov. Ritchie.

Bank Failure Is Factor.

The so-called "courthouse" faction also is lined up with Mr. Nice while the party's leading figures in the Georges Creek mining section also are with the Baltimore lawyer. In this section Mr. Henderson's connection with the disastrous failure of the First National Bank of Frostburg, and with its president, Robert deau Annan, is reported to be reacting against Mr. Smith.

Senator Goldsborough's chief support comes from Charles H. Holtzman, Cumberland druggist and former collector of the Baltimore port, and Nelson Russler. The latter, however, is seeking nomination as chairman of the county commissioners and wants to make as few enemies as possible. The Tasker Lowndes newspaper is supporting Senator Goldsborough. Senator Goldsborough believes he has a chance of carrying this county and plans to return here this week-end to strengthen his fences. Mr. Robb, however, predicts Mr. Nice will have an absolute majority in the county.

In Washington County the fight appears to be between Mr. Nice and Senator Goldsborough. The latter is backed by the old guard Ridenour-Wolfinger faction, while Mr. Nice has the support of the "young Turks," led by Dr. H. E. Tabler, of Hancock; Mayor I. M. Wertz, of Hagerstown; E. R. Roulette, Hagerstown attorney, and E. B. Carl, president of the Washington County Young Republican League. Of the sitting central committee five of the seven members are supporting Mr. Nice. There have been several bank failures in the county, affecting approximately 14,000 persons and Mr. Nice is making that his issue.

Ridenour Backs Senator.

J. Frank Ridenour, chairman of the central committee, however, is supporting Senator Goldsborough. The "young Turks" are seeking to overthrow the Ridenour-Wolfinger control of the central committee. Harvey Bomberger is the second member of the existing committee for Senator Goldsborough. He is supported also by E. M. Tenney, former Hagerstown postmaster. There is a possibility that Senator Goldsborough will receive the colored vote of the county, but it does not control the outcome as in some other counties.

On the Democratic side the hottest fight appears to be in Washington County. There the organization, led by Attorney-General W. Preston Lane, is wrestling with its old enemy, led by Dr. J. Hubert Wade. The latter is one of Dr. Conley's chief supporters. Dr. Wade, one-time leader of the county, was unhorsed by the youthful Lane group after the former was dismissed as chairman of the welfare board by Gov. Ritchie some 12 years ago. Since then Dr. Wade has fought the Ritchie forces on every occasion.

The Lane faction decisively beat Dr. Wade four years ago, obtaining control of the county central committee. It is expected they will defeat the Wade insurgents again and carry the county for Gov. Ritchie. The Lane faction, instead of backing a local ticket, is concentrating on defeating every candidate indorsed by Dr. Wade, who lives at Boonsboro and is influential chiefly in the lower end of the county.

In Allegany County the leadership of State Insurance Commissioner William C. Walsh is under sharp attack from a group led by John McMullen and W. Carl Richards. The latter are known as the "anti-Walsh" faction, are making Mr. Walsh the chief target for their attacks and are supporting Dr. Conley. Mr. Richards the other night severely assailed Gov. Ritchie's democracy, accusing him of hostility to President Roosevelt and of being in league with Alfred E. Smith. Mr. Richards opposed Mr. Smith in 1928.

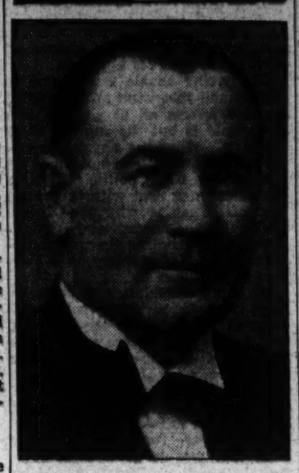
Hugh A. McMullen, for many years the recognized leader of western Maryland Democrats, but now an elderly, inactive man, issued a statement some days ago urging the nomination of Dr. Conley. His son is one of the leaders of the "anti-Walsh" movement, but the father disavowed any interest in the local fight. His newspaper, the Cumberland Times, is keeping out of both fights.

The elder McMullen's indorsement of Dr. Conley is bound to weaken the Ritchie chances. Nevertheless the Ritchie-Walsh faction is strong in Cumberland, the second largest city in the State, and among the George's Creek miners. Mr. Walsh has the reputation of being the smartest and ablest Democratic county leader in the State, demonstrated when he carried Allegany County — overwhelmingly Republican—twice for Gov. Ritchie in general elections.

Gov. Ritchie always has been popular in Cumberland and among the western Maryland miners and impartial observers of the situation in Allegany contend the Ritchie-Walsh group will win easily.

In Garrett County the Ritchie organization also is under fire from insurgents who are seeking to control the central committee. There are comparatively few Democrats in the county, however, and the edge in the fight is given to the Ritch[illegible]

Baptist Speakers



The Rev. R. F. Caverlee and Dr. W. B. F. Cole (top), of Fredericksburg, Va., were two of the speakers Thursday at the opening session of the Goshen Baptist Association at Louisa, Va. The Rev. Mr. Caverlee, pastor of the Fredericksburg Baptist Church, delivered an address Thursday and yesterday reported on the activities of the association's committee on Christian education, Sunday school, Baptist Young People's Union and religious periodicals. Dr. Cole is Commonwealth's attorney for Fredericksburg. He spoke Thursday on social service, temperance and morals.

Draft Horses In Show Today

Pony Classes and Races Features of Events at Olney, Md.

The one day of the year in which farm horses and mules seize the spotlight from riding horses will be observed today in Montgomery County, Md., when the sixth annual draft horse show is staged at Olney by the Montgomery County Horse Show Association.

Classes are scheduled for 15 classes of exhibits, most of which are devoted to draft horses, although entries are being received for several pony classes and two hunter classes. Two races also will be held in the afternoon.

The feature event of the day will be a class for farm horses owned and entered by bona fide farmers in Montomery County outside of the metropolitan area or in Howard County. This class annually draws a large number of entries.

Another feature of the show of special interest to Montgomery County sportsmen is the Redland Hunt Cup class, for which entries will be received only from members of the Redland Hunt whose mounts have ridden at least twice with the Redland hounds.

The show will start at 9:45 this morning on the farm of T. Alexander Barnsley at Olney, Md. Judges of the draft classes are Norman H. Warfield, Elmer Guyton and B. M. Hill. Lieut. John Reybold, U. S. A., will judge the hunters.

Candidate Hits Opposition by State Police

McCullough Says Force Is Campaigning for Primary Opponent.

Charging that the police of Prince Georges County were actively campaigning against him, Robert W. McCullough, a Democratic candidate for State's attorney, demanded that such activities "end" in an address at a meeting of the Brentwood Democratic Club Thursday night.

McCullough is opposing the incumbent, Alan Bowie, who was indorsed for reelection by the State central committee of Maryland. The race between these two has developed into the most interesting contest of the primary election.

Declaring that the State central committee had no right to "tap one candidate on the back and say you are a better Democrat than another," McCullough lashed out at the organization and stated that it was "their duty to elect candidates in November, not to select them in the primary."

He defied any one to say that he was an antiorganization man and pledged himself to "go down the line 100 per cent" for all Democrats after the primary, whether he was a victor in his contest or not.

Bowie Denies Asking Aid.

Bowie also addressed the meeting and denied that he had asked any of the county police to campaign for him, but stated that he "appreciated it if they did." He defended the right of the State central committee to indorse candidates, stating that they acted as a "board of directors" for the party and do have a perfect right to select candidates for the party ticket. He declared that he had no fault to find with any man who runs for office and stated that that was his privilege.

Citing his record in office and declaring that he had been a Democrat for 31 years, Bowie asked that if his record met with approval that he be reelected. He pledged himself to support all candidates in the November election whether he was on the ticket or not.

John S. White, a candidate for the House of Delegates, assailed the recent article written by former President Herbert Hoover. White declared that the article was convincing evidence that Mr. Hoover did not know how to "grapple with the problems which confronted him while in office." He asked if the treatment of the bonus army during the Hoover Administration was liberty.

He declared that the former President was like a lion in the jungle which was well satisfied with the jungle law, because he was king. "It is the liberty of the rich and his kind" that Mr. Hoover is worried about, he asserted. White, a resident of Chillum District, promised full cooperation with the people if he were elected a member of the House of Delegates.

The meeting marked the end of the campaign in Chillum District so far as the oratory is concerned. The primary election will be held September 12. E. H. Robert, former Mayor of Brentwood and president of the Brentwood Democratic Club, presided.

Other candidates who spoke included State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, L. Harold Sothoron, candidate for House of Delegates; Kent R. Mullikin, seeking reelection to the House of Delegates; Perry Boswell and Vinton D. Cockey, candidates for county commissioners; J. Guy Bell, candidate for sheriff; H. W. Cord and C. S. Ryan, candidates for membership on the State central committee; Noah Joffe and Daisy LaCoppidan, candidates for delegates to the Democratic State convention.

Lee Van Horn, a former member of the State Legislature, also addressed the meeting.

LISTENERS who relax benignly at their dials and sooth their prejudices by a mere twist of the thumb and forefinger little appreciate the hazards, perils and escapes from extinction that announcers fall heir to.

Take Jim McGrath, N. B. C.'s deft word juggler, for instance. With his genial beak athwart a mike, with one eye leveled at the ring and his body set for a quick escape from a couple of rasslers about to fall on him, Jim keeps a steady flow of glowing adjectives leaping into the mike . . . and when he doesn't know the term for some fantastic hold he makes a good one up.

A few feet away two brawny titans are cheerfully tearing each other apart . . . they writhe, grunt, howl and kick like a cat who has swallowed rat poison. Tiring of twisting they dive through the ropes and start scraping up the home plate. And Jim is right with them . . . relating with feverish avidity all the intricacies of the Australian toe-hold or the fancy splits just executed by a couple of 215-pound hulks.

After it's all over Jim picks up his emergency kit and strides down the runway. "How 'ja learn it all, Jim?" we ask. "Aw! I'll tell you some other time," sayes he as he stops to talk with Joe Turner.

HERE they are . . . the selection of local radio editors of Washington's air possibilities for that network "break" with Freddy Martin's orchestra in a Sunday afternoon show soon to appear on C. B. S.

Ernestine Gardner, runner-up in the local "Hollywood Hotel" auditions; Elsie Kraft and Ronald Dawson, WOL's dramatic actor, were the choices of one morning paper. An afternoon critic chose the duo combination of Marguerite Cromwell and Ed Steffe; Lucille Ferguson, pianist, and Marie Fowler, of Godfrey's Gazette. Our brother columnist on New York avenue picked the White Brothers, Henry Nestor, singing cop, and Phil Provost. This department's selections, chosen after an honest appraisal of their talents, are Ray Baines, young tenor heard with Shannon Allen's N. B. C. "Airbreaks;" Eddie Perkins, the singing usher; and Ernestine Gardner, who has demonstrated her mike appeal with Godfrey at the Club Michel.

WJSV will audition them all today starting at 11 a. m.

STIFF competition will meet eight of the world's best dance bands tonight when C. B. S. short waves music from Buenos Aires, London, Honolulu, New York, Chicago, Atlantic City and San Francisco to listeners at 7 p. m.

Little America, with Doc Poulter's Knights of the Grey Underwear, society's favorites of the Byrd Expedition, will be heard along with the cream of fancy orchestras. The Antarctic group has but three pieces . . . a mouth organ, a small organ and a drum made from airplane fabric and wood from a packing case.

FIFTEEN minutes more of Godfrey . . . that's the gift to listeners brought back from the Southland by your Arthur, who went to Miami to fish and came back yesterday to find that Harry Butcher, WJSV's fair-haired station manager, had added that much time to the Sun Dial.

So Monday morning when you roll over and hear Godfrey's bellowing baritone reverberate through the back alleys you'll have 15 whole precious minutes to torture your ears beyond 9 o'clock, when the Sun Dial usually signs off. Godfrey's chest is fuller by inches with stories of fish that got away.

After landing a 30-pound "bonita," trolling for mackerel and snaring a 34-pound rock bass with huge, cavernous jaws, Art visited orange groves, drank from the Fountain of Youth, ploughed his tremendous chest through the surf at Daytona Beach and arrived back home in time to sleep three whole days.

"I'll tell you, Ted," said Art, "Ya know Florida is 30 years behind us . . . the yokels!"

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
Patent applied for

WE'RE off to New York tomorrow to give The Washington Post readers a play-by-play account of what organized labor plans to do for Federal employes at the American Federation of Government Employes convention.

BAKER

An outline of convention plans and a summary of resolutions to be presented will appear tomorrow in this column. Restoration of annual leave, repeal of the remaining 5 per cent pay cut, repeal of the marriage clause, strengthening of the merit system, increased basic pay, voluntary 30-year retirement, civil service board of appeals, and other matters of vital interest to the service will be on the program.

Steward in Middle West.

On a sweeping organization trip through the Middle West, Luther C. Steward, National Federation of Federal Employes president, is encountering hearty cooperation among Government workers all along the route.

Wednesday night the employe leader will speak at a mass meeting of Federal people at the Curtis Hotel in Minneapolis. Government officials and Minnesota members of Congress will attend. Thursday night a dinner will be given in Mr. Steward's honor by the Federal employes of Minnesota with the following object: "More enthusiastic and increased membership, based on the aims and achievements of the National Federation of Federal Employes."

Another dinner and mass meeting is scheduled for Monday night at St. Paul. Last night Mr. Steward was principal speaker at an employe gathering in Duluth.

Mr. Steward reports a very satisfactory visit with Federal employes at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. Before returning to Washington, he will confer with employes in Madison, Milwaukee and Chicago.

A similar organization trip through the South will be taken by Miss Matilda Lindsay, NFFE National organizer, who will leave Sunday for Oteen, Asheville and Greensboro, N. C., Johnson City, Tenn., and other points.

A trigger mechanism for firearms has been perfected and patented by Leslie A. Skinner (*), War. The mechanism is adapted to eliminate the necessity for practicing the "trigger squeeze" on the part of recruits.

FACA Official Returns.

Adlai E. Stevenson, assistant general counsel, FACA, has just returned from an official business trip to the Pacific Coast and Hawaii. In San Francisco, early in August, Mr. Stevenson held a series of meetings with the regional boards for the alcoholic beverage wholesale industry, the brewing industry and with members of the rectifying, importing, distilling and wine industries.

The respective alcoholic beverage codes and their administration were discussed. Mr. Stevenson reports that the industries, without exception, are troubled by severe price competition caused probably by the large number of persons who have entered the various alcoholic beverage industries since repeal, together with severe competition from bootleggers.

Anxious eyes are being cast skyward by employes of County Association Unit, Corn-Hog Section, AAA, who are planning a steak fry at the home of Leonard Nordie in McLean, Va., this afternoon.

HENRY MOIR, president of the United States Life Insurance Co., has accepted the Civil Service Commission's offer that he serve as a member of the Board of Actuaries under the Civil Service retirement act, without salary, the commission announced last night.

Mr. Moir succeeds Herbert D. Brown, formerly chief of the Bureau of Efficiency, who left the board on June 30.

The other two members of the board are George B. Buck, a consulting actuary in private practice in New York, and A. S. McLeod, Government actuary under the office of the Commissioner of Accounts and Deposits, Treasury. The law provides that the person who occupies Mr. McLeod's position shall be a member of the board.

Mr. Moir was born in Midlothian, Scotland, and came to America in 1901. He has been in insurance business all his life. He was actuary and vice president of the Home Life Insurance Co. of New York from 1909 to 1922. He has been president of the United States Insurance Co. since 1922. He is a director in numerous insurance organizations and was a member of the advisory committee on the War Risk Insurance in 1917. He is the author of numerous works on the principles of insurance.

Employes' Excursion Today.

Albert M. Reising, office of the Secretary of the Interior, the untiring recorder of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes, today will conduct another of his famous all-expense trips for members of Local No. 2 and their friends in the Federal service. For several years Mr. Reising has organized and conducted excursions of Federal employes to cities and places of interest.

Earlier this summer he took a large party on a highly enjoyable trip to New York, and a year ago successfully undertook a group visit to the Chicago fair. Today the local, under Mr. Reising's direction, is offering a week-end all-expense, low-fair trip to Atlantic City. Private cars have been secured and group hotel accommodations provided for the more than 100 who have signified they will go.

The group will leave Washington at 1:25 p. m. and arrive at Atlantic City at 5:25 p. m. today. The Devonshire Hotel, on the boardwalk, will be headquarters until the return trip Sunday night, beginning at 6:45 p. m. The party will arrive at Washington at 11:30 the same night.

Harris & Ewing.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Cate (*), General Accounting Office, returned yesterday from a three weeks' honeymoon trip through the South and Middle West. Mrs. Cate was Miss Roma McEwen. The marriage, early in August, was a surprise to their associates at GAO.

HOLC Employes Honored.

Three birthday anniversaries and a departure were marked last night at a gala dinner party by employes of Correspondence Division, Home Owners Loan Corporation, at the Madrillon.

Miss Dorothy E. Barr, who is being transferred to the Detroit Regional Office, was one of the honor guests. The three young women whose birthdays were honored were Miss Mary Carroll Johnson, Miss Ellen W. Taylor and Miss Flora Snellenburg. Mrs. Annette H. McClellan, division chief, was toastmistress, assisted by Henry B. Niemeyer.

Assisting in arranging the dinner was Mrs. F. Genevieve Chase (*). Other HOLC employes attending included Mrs. Elsie W. Blackwood, Miss Viola V. Creque, Mrs. Dorothy L. Deeter, Miss Josephine W. Hillyard, Miss Ruth C. Hobbs, Miss Margaret Kushelevsky, Mrs. Dona H. Marshall, Miss Dorothy E. Meyers, Miss Norma G. Monroe, Miss Irene W. Newman, Miss Marion A. Porter, Miss Harriet Lue Simons, Miss Virginia L. Thompson and Miss Anne E. Wood.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

The Horse Throws Jenny.

You remember that Benny and Jenny had been put to bed, and were fast asleep that night when Howler came, and so they didn't know he was there till next morning when they came to breakfast. They were certainly glad to see him, and he was just as pleased to see them, for while he had lived up there he and the cubs had become great friends. Many a time they would both climb up on his back, and he would trot around with them just like a horse.

One day he thought he would have a little fun with them, and he trotted so roughly that they nearly fell off, and in trying to hold on, they had stuck their claws in so deep that the joke was turned on Howler, and he both howled and stopped, and told them to loosen up with those claws.

After that he had never tried to get funny with them while he took them for a ride. But here he was back with them, and they all expected to have some more frolics. Bettie had a nice breakfast, and it took them as long to eat it as it did Howler to eat his supper the night before, for Grandpa and Bettie just couldn't keep from asking questions and questions about what had been doing down on the creek. So much had happened that it took Howler a long time to tell just a part of it, and so it was away in the morning before they got through breakfast. After breakfast Grandpa asked Howler to smoke a pipe or two with him while they talked some more about things down on the creek. The truth is that Grandpa had come mighty near running away from Mountain House and going down to visit the boys for a while, for he had such a good time when he went with them before that he just couldn't forget it.

He had talked about the trip lots of times, but whenever he said anything about going back, Grandma would tell him that he was too old for such foolishness, and that he had better settle down and stay right there at home. He didn't like being told that he was old, and so that day when the cubs came in to beg Howler to give them a ride, Grandpa told them that one of them might ride on his back. So off they started down to the lake. You may remember that there was a narrow place in the lake, and that there was a long log lying across it that made a nice bridge. It seemed that a big rabbit had taken a notion to cross on this log, and he was about half way across when Howler came in sight. It was Howler's special business to catch rabbits that day, and when he saw that one on the log, he forgot all about having Jenny on his back. He humped his back like a bucking mule, and started after the rabbit.

He stopped so quickly that Jenny didn't have time to stick her claws into Howler's back, so up she went in the air, and then down she came "kersplash" in the lake. When she hit that cold water, she let out one loud "woof," and started swimming for the shore. Grandpa and Benny were laughing, but Jenny didn't notice them as she struck out for the house.

Prison Buys Vegetables, Ending 'Bean Revolt'

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 7 (AP).—They ended the "bean revolt" at the Stateville and Joliet Penitentiaries today with vegetables.

It seems the drought has played no end of havoc with the prison gardens and that the convicts had breakfasted quite frequently of late on beans. One of the principal dinner courses was beans. The piece de resistance at supper, too, was beans. After prisoners threatened a cook, Warden Frank Whipp ordered $2,500 worth of fresh vegetables.

Woman Shot to Death; Former Husband Jailed

Tulsa, Okla, Sept. 7 (AP).—Miss Billie Johnson, 38, Sand Springs beauty shop operator, was shot to death at the door of her shop today. Floyd Ellis, 44, surrendered and was brought to jail at Tulsa for safekeeping when a crowd collected. Officers said Ellis tried to commit suicide.

County Attorney Holly Anderson said Ellis and Miss Johnson had been married, but the woman left Ellis when she learned he had not been divorced.

3 Bears Flee, Fourth Claws Wyoming Man

Mammoth Hot Springs, Wyo., Sept. 7 (AP).—Gunnar Fagerlund, member of a park survey crew, was in the hospital at Mammoth today recovering from a broken bone in his left foot and severe claw wounds on his leg inflicted by a grizzly bear.

Fagerlund met four grizzlies yesterday. Three ran away. The fourth attacked and caught his leg and foot as he climbed a tree.

Pneumonia Threatens Actress.

Hollywood, Sept. 7 (AP).—Dolores Del Rio, film actress, who recently was sent to bed with a severe cold, is threatened with bronchial pneumonia, it was learned today.

Westbury Shirtfrocks

We introduced Westburys to Washington this summer in cotton. Since then we've had so many enthusiastic calls for fall Shirtfrocks that we persuaded the manufacturer to make up a new batch.

You're going to be crazy about them because they're distinguished by the same smart tailoring, the same attention to details (look at the buttons and buckles and cuffs), the same built-in fit that you liked in the first ones.

They're made of a WASHABLE (and what a comfort that is) rayon and cotton fabric that looks like wool challis. The patterns are the important tie silk designs, polka dots, stripes and plaids in heart-warming fall colors. Sizes 14 to 20.

You'll want at least two—to wear to the office, to pack into that college trunk, to wear to the movies, to play bridge in, to LIVE in!

A Transportation Policy?

A move towards development of a National Transportation Policy, replacing present destructive competition between uncoordinated transportation agencies, is seen in the conference which the President has held this week with Joseph B. Eastman. This meeting has given rise to belief that the plans on which the Federal Coordinator of Transportation has been working have at last reached the stage where their presentation as a legislative program may soon be anticipated.

The need for such unification is overdue. The cross-purposes at which our various transportation agencies are now working is in nobody's interest. For the railroads, whose prosperity is so essential to that of the Nation, unfair highway and waterway competition have been proving a substantial bar to recovery. The Railway Age estimates a diversion of freight traffic to these agencies which "may represent well over one billion dollars in gross revenue" for 1933 alone.

This competition is properly called "unfair" because the water highway is largely untaxed and the roads rarely contribute, through gasoline taxes and license fees, anything above their upkeep cost. Railways, on the other hand, are heavy contributors to the general support of government. Such variations in the regulation of different forms of transport are obviously inequitable. They strongly suggest the desirability of placing all forms of transportation under the regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Clearly this is the appropriate Federal agency to exercise control over interstate rates and service.

Hostility to this trend need not be expected from the new consolidation of railway executives which is being discussed as a desirable outgrowth of present forms of collaboration. From careful development of a National transportation policy the railways have little to fear and much to hope.

Federal authority is already paramount in the case of the railways. It is not a matter of afflicting them with more regulation, but rather of making the regulatory machinery more uniform so that one form of transportation is no longer penalized to National disadvantage.

Statesmanship.

It is a little worse than ridiculous that the two foremost dictators of the world, in whose hands lie the fate of millions, should be guilty of such childish utterances as have this week come from the lips of Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini. They remind one of two youngsters engaged in a backyard boasting contest.

Hitler, in Germany, announced as his conviction that the Nazi regime will last for 1,000 years.

Mussolini, in Italy, sneered at Germany, saying: "We can look with contempt on the doctrine of a certain race which did not even know how to write when we had Caesar, Vergil and Augustus."

The little German boy boasting; the little Italian neighbor shouting him down with equal pretension. "My father," says one, "can lick anyone in the world, I betcha." "You're a liar," says the other; "my father's the biggest, strongest man there is and he can lick your father any day."

Amusing, when overheard in a backyard. Obnoxious, when heard in the Halls of State. In either case, the vainglorious words are apt to lead to blows. Only children scrap it out for themselves. Dictators order others to do it for them, and solemnly announce that national honor is at stake.

Good News From Cuba.

On Monday of this week the trade treaty with Cuba became effective. The State Department has already announced an immediate flow of trade from this country to Cuba as a result. It expects that future trading in both directions will be greatly increased. All this is good news, but no better in its way than the pledge of safety given Americans and other foreigners who have invested money in the sugar business and other industries of the island. It appears that the Mendieta government has both determination and popular support behind its efforts to bring political peace and economic improvement to Cuba.

Cuba's Secretary of State, Dr. Cosme de la Toriente, in an interview in New York spoke highly of the new trade pact with Washington and predicted that American companies would soon be in a position again to make money. He said that the chief aims of the Mendieta regime have been to strengthen the international position of Cuba, by the abrogation of the Platt amendment, and to restore economic well-being through the commercial treaty. With both these objectives achieved he sees a rosy future.

The sane and cooperative attitude of the Secretary of State contrasts pleasantly with the hostile and somewhat vindictive position toward American interests in Cuba which was earlier perceptible there. It makes one feel that stability and self-control are being restored in the troubled island. Certainly it appears that the new regime is doing all within its power to remain friendly with the United States, on the assumption that renewed trading will aid all the people of Cuba, including the working people, whose lot was so unfavorable under the Machado regime.

The pledge of safety to foreign investors and the rush of business engendered by the commercial treaty are bright spots in the news from our island neighbor. If the government maintains order at the elections in December there is no reason why Cuba's relations with this country should not remain completely amicable, and result in the beginning of a new prosperity for the island. Thus is the decision to cut the leading strings in which we held Cuba, through the Platt amendment, justified.

In The Right Spirit.

In the militant credo of the American Liberty League there are expressed two beliefs that merit wide attention. One of them, at least, goes back to the days when the Constitution was in the making. There might never have been a Constitution, certainly not one as successful as that which the present League has been formed to "protect," if it had not been for the searching analysis carried in the pages of The Federalist. It is a resumption of those discussions that the League now calls for in its effort to take the Constitution out of academic hands and place it before the people, whose "rights" and "liberties" it was drawn up to protect.

The League says, in the first place, that it proposes "to see to it that the people of our country know exactly what the Constitution requires and what it does not permit of every branch of government." This will entail a broad educational program and one fraught with difficulty, for it must not be forgotten that even the framers of the Constitution differed as to its meaning at times and that even simple words and declaratory sentences are sometimes difficult of universal translation. Definite though the Constitution may seem, it must also be remembered that in their wisdom the authors gave to a third department of government, the judiciary, the high responsibility of interpretation.

The danger of bias in "explaining" the Constitution is apparent, but the League confronts this difficulty in the second of its really important beliefs. It says "If some of the legislative undertakings . . . are to be made acceptable as permanent reforms, then the honest thing to do is to give the people an opportunity to pass upon those reforms in constitutional conventions duly called for the purpose of subtracting from or adding to the powers . . . of government."

The program, therefore, calls for widespread discussion of, and interest in, the Constitution. If the League can bring public attention once again to bear intelligently upon this document, it will not have been formed vainly. The results may not be favorable to any particular party, class or individual. But they will be in tune with the high purpose, which is to "defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States."

In his radio speech last evening Jouett Shouse declared that "the letter of the Constitution should be read in the spirit of the Declaration of Independence." Many people will in consequence recall that part of the latter document which says: "Whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."

The League, by suggesting the use of constitutional conventions, points the way in which such changes could be made in orderly and thoroughly straightforward fashion. It shows that it is not opposed to change. It is opposed only to that insidious undermining of traditions which works surreptitiously and by deceit.

As Maine Goes.

The most easterly State of the Union is in throes of great excitement. Monday is election day. And, as is generally the case when Maine votes in National election years, the eyes of the Nation are turned to the upper right-hand corner of the map. The old saying is "As Maine goes, so goes the Nation." But, like many another adage, the facts do not always bear it out. Will they, this year?

Observers who have been seeking to determine the political trend in Maine find, as is not surprising, that the New Deal is not the only issue. There are local situations to be taken into account. Gov. Louis Brann, Democrat, who has been quite successful in attracting Federal attention and aid to his State, has been carefully sidestepping the New Deal. He is content to rest on his personal laurels, with which is interwoven the substantial share of Federal funds which has come to Maine.

Up Augusta way they take their politics mighty seriously. Thus they are experiencing what one reporter says is the hottest election campaign since the Civil War. This is the period during which the saying about Maine as an indicator has been current. Yet, during that length of time, Maine failed to show the way in 1916 and in 1932, when the rest of the country went Democratic. In 1912 the Republican vote was split between Roosevelt and Taft. Wilson, the victor, received but 40 per cent of the State's vote. A careful study of gubernatorial elections shows that in only seven of these since the Civil War could National results have been predicted from the Maine results. In seven others the National result could not have been forecast; and, in three, third-party tickets invalidated any comparison.

Thus the actual results of Maine's election will not be so important as the percentage of votes received by the various candidates for office. After working this out, and after taking into consideration Republican desertions to the camp of the Democratic Governor, and a revolt of old-line Democrats who have gone over to the Republican side in opposition to the New Deal, one may perhaps be able to forecast the National trend fairly accurately. While the old adage may not always be truthful, as a political seismograph the voting in Maine is worth most of the analysis which it receives.

Mind—The Only Reality?

Sir James Jeans has once more revealed one of his delightful excursions into the imponderables of physics. As the headlines tell it, he has concluded that mind is the only reality. But a closer analysis of his address, delivered before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, leaves one with the impression that he may be placing limitations upon the mind rather than upon the universe.

There is nothing new, of course, in Sir James' departure from the Newtonian conception of a materialistic universe. Since the discovery of the electron, physicists have concluded that matter is in reality electrical phenomena. And this conception has given rise to Einstein's theory of relativity and Jeans' belief that the universe consists of "little more than constructs of our own minds."

According to Sir James, the mind can be acquainted with things inside itself, but not with things on the outside. "Thus," he says, "we can never know the essential nature of anything, such as a centimeter on a wave length." Apples and bananas, atoms and electrons are mere "clothing that we ourselves drape over mathematical symbols—they do not belong to nature, but to the parables by which we try to make nature comprehensible." In another instance he refers to things as we perceive them through our senses as mere stage scenery.

The assumption that matter exists in time and space, he says, can not be scientifically justified, because "there is clearly no reason why the whole material universe should be restricted to the narrow framework along which messages strike our senses." To the modern physicist the universe has become "a stormy sea with the sea taken away and only the abstract quality of storminess left—or the grin of the Cheshire cat, if we can think of a grin as undulatory."

On reflection, we can scarcely think of a grin as anything else. It is undulation which gives a grin its essential characteristic of grin-ness. But what, Sir James would ask, puts the idea of a grin into our minds and whence does the idea come? And there you have us.

All this, we are the first to admit, is somewhat confusing to the layman. Sir James appears to be saying that the material things about us are delusions—that they are figments of the imagination. But his theory may be regarded from another angle. The fact that science does not know the exact nature of a wave-length, for example, does not mean it is unreal, but that it remains incomprehensible to the finite mind of man.

A few decades ago science was attempting to fathom the universe. Now, as Sir James points out, physicists have set before themselves "the more modest task of reducing to law and order the impressions that the universe makes on our senses;" they are concerned with "appearances rather than reality." It is the objective of science, of course, and not the nature of the universe that has changed. What Sir James is really saying is that science has recognized its own limitations in the discovery and explanation of reality.

Does this mean that mind is the only reality, or merely that our conception of the universe may be inadequate or distorted because of limited experience? It is comforting that Sir James is not too positive. For after all, his conclusions may be only a "wave-parable," or to use another of his expressions, a mental framework of his own construction.

His Life In His Hands.

Memories of the Message to Garcia are stirred—in a measure—by the thrilling news from Nice. The yacht Mairi sank on a reef near Corsica; but, though everything else was lost except lives, the manuscript of playwright Noel Coward's forthcoming autobiography was retrieved, somewhat damaged, for the future delectation of his not inconsiderable public.

The cabled details leave much lacking. They do not tell precisely how this thrilling rescue was effected. They only reveal, as anticlimax, that the author himself was ashore at the time. Nevertheless, those dispatches do show us the playwright walking 20 miles along the coast, to the nearest inn, with his precious parcel clasped close; taking his life in his hands, so to speak.

Carlyle said that there was a book, presumably an instructive autobiography, in every man. But that old stay-at-home, who knew something of the perils which beset unfinished manuscripts, would never have recommended a yachting cruise as the time and place to do the writing.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE LATEST INFORMATION concerning German troop movements was that they were neglecting Paris and moving in a southeastern direction toward the Marne. The second German army, after taking Rheims, was advancing on Chateau Thierry. The fourth German army was in the vicinity of the Argonne.

THE LIGHT CRUISER Pathfinder, of the British navy, was blown up by a mine in the North Sea. Many lives were lost, but the total loss was not definitely known. German mines were responsible for the sinking of nine neutral vessels at different times. They included five Danish, two Dutch, one Norwegian and one Swedish vessel.

GERMAN AND AUSTRIAN consular officials were ordered by British authorities to leave Egypt at once.

VIOLATIONS OF THE 12-mile-an-hour speed law in Rockville, Md., were charged to Preston Hewitt, who operated a motorcycle, and to Edward Deets, both of whom deposited $5 for their alleged offenses.

The Same to You!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post is a "joy forever." I say this from a wide reading of daily papers each week, from various parts of the United States, and not always the same ones. The Post is now the best all-round newspaper in the United States.

The Post's editorials, for vigor and clarity, brevity and scholarly treatment, statesmanship and broad and tolerant viewpoint, are unexcelled in this country. The page opposite the editorial page is a liberal education in itself. The special articles used in the National news section each day equal the best in any daily paper—this is said without giving consideration to politics.

The daily press service articles are condensed, yet are so comprehensive that they do not lose the essential story and picture in the telling. Sports, styles for men and women, and household departments, are all that one could ask for. The illustrations and pen portraits of public characters are superlatively superior. The "funny strips" are clean and very human. Lastly, typographically, The Post is a masterpiece of the print craft.

More power to The Post—and thanks. GROVER AYERS.

Choosing Deputies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Almost all of us who study the biographies of successful men—successful in the political, industrial, financial, commercial, educational, or in any sphere where executive ability is required, as well as great leaders in war—have been obliged to observe that in all such cases a conspicuous element of greatness is ability to select for important positions men who can and do make good.

All of our really great Presidents have exhibited that ability, without exception. All great generals have had such a faculty, as well as the chief executives who have been considered great of all large institutions. Yet it has been noted that those who have opporunity to and do criticize adversely the present Federal Administration in public addresses and in newspapers or magazine articles usually qualify their criticisms with statements to the effect they are finding no fault with the President himself, but with the men the President has named for certain responsibilities.

Is not that rather paradoxical? We seem to be expected to accept the idea that the Chief Executive has no responsibility in the lack of efficiency of the men he has appointed to positions in administering public affairs, thus permitting him to sidestep the well-established principle that the appointing power is responsible for his appointees.

JUST AN OBSERVER.

Washington, Sept. 4.

The Worker's Feelings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In event of a strike or any kind of labor trouble, in most cases troops are called out to protect property and its owner, and machine guns and rifles are trained on strikers and sympathizers.

In many cases the strikers and sympathizers are shot down and gassed unmercifully, and the public is always used in the battle cry to throw the blame on the strikers for causing the public to suffer, which is just a slight inconvenience compared to the suffering of the working man in his battle for justice.

Now, may I ask, is the working man not a part of the public, and is he not entitled to a little consideration from the public? May I ask further, have soldiers ever been called out to protect the working man's home? Have machine guns ever been mounted atop of the strikers' homes to protect them against hired thugs throwing women and children into the streets and then firing into them with sawed-off shotgun and gas?

If a working man expresses himself a little freely, he is called a Red or a Communist, but the Reds and radicals on the employer's side can shout as loud as they wish and the public is always used as a background for their argument. There is much talk about organized labor cleaning house and throwing out the radicals and Communists, but there is nothing said about what is to be done with them when they are thrown out, but it can easily be seen that when they are thrown out of the union and allowed to remain citizens of America, they can always be relied upon as strikebreakers and gunmen for the employers.

If a man is undesirable in the union, I would think him undesirable as a citizen, so why not deport them where they belong?

A Cry From the Heart.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would you please let us know when and how those cigarettes that your paper collected will be given out? Are they to be given out by the case-workers? If so, God knows we will not get any, because our case-worker will not give us 1 quart of milk for our four little girls, aged 4 months to 8 years.

We can understand why we won't get any cigarettes. But our little babes do not understand why they can't have a glass of milk once a day. We are unable to buy a newspaper because my case-worker says a paper is a luxury.

Please put this letter in your paper and receive the thanks of a needy family.

Referred to H. L. H.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a reader and also a lover of The Post. The Post is my favorite paper and has been for more than ten years. It has the best editorial page in the whole city of Washington; it is, altogether, the best paper out!

Since Harry L. Hopkins has returned from Europe safe and, apparently, in good health and courage, it is a joy to take up The Post and read about him and his work, and to hear what he has to say, even though it be a cursed word.

Let America produce a thousand more "Harry L. Hopkins!"

"Too Much Johnson."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How long will The Post and the other Washington papers continue to bore their readers with the antics of one Mr. Johnson of the NRA, a person who would never interest me vastly in any event? Why the recent headlines "Johnson in and out Again,"—all this free advertising of a man who is playing with the industries of the country like a 6-year-old experimenting with a game of blocks, while the newspapermen stick around admiring and applauding his futile efforts, with which they will make front-page stuff next morning to punish their readers. Please give us some real news. Too much Johnson is boring me to tears. ONE CITIZEN.

Henry George.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the communication of Henry Ware Allen, in your issue of September 5, I would like to add that on Henry George's arrival in London, there was a vast concourse of trades-unionists, with the London Society of Compositors (wearing frock coats, white vests, lavender trousers and tall silk hats and carrying walking sticks) in the van. When Henry George got into the cab which was waiting outside Euston Station, the horse was taken out of the shafts and men dragged the cab to the hotel at which he was to stay. A special train brought a large number of shoemakers from Northampton.

At Edinburgh, Scotland, he was also met by a large crowd, headed by the Edinburgh Society of Compositors. In London, the gist of his speeches was: "To make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before."

SYDNEY J. HAMILTON.

Washington, Sept. 6.

Well, How?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Labor Day's broadcasting was both interesting and amusing. The plea was made for shorter hours, increased pay and old-age pensions. Fifty years ago, the late Henry George was fighting for the very same thing. Fifty years ago Australia had the shorter workday and no child labor. Later labor—organized and unorganized—had and has now the old-age pension. How come? S. J. H.

As Others See It.

An Adaptable New Deal.

If the opponents of President Roosevelt's policies and measures worked out their tactics in the early summer on the assumption that the New Deal was definitely fixed, solidified and mapped out for all time, they must have been somewhat disconcerted by several of his announcements shortly before he set sail on a vacation through the Caribbean and the Panama Canal on his way to Honolulu. The President's warning to Congress that a new program of social insurance was to be launched was followed by his appointing an interdepartmental committee to prepare specific projects for its realization.

In the meantime he set up his industrial emergency committee, under the chairmanship of Donald Richberg, general counsel of the National Recovery Administration, for the purpose of surveying the past operations of the NRA and working out a new program in that field. This program is to be broad and fundamental. It is to "disclose a formula for permanent industrial planning, particularly as that planning involves the knitting together of all industry into a National economy." The committee is "to tell Congress and the the country frankly" the nature and degrees of Government regulation necessary to provide greater stability in industry, avoid the calamities of booms and depressions and assure relief to the victims of periodical crises.

In other words, defenders of the President's policies during the fall campaign were given authority for saying that mistakes are to be corrected and the new measures are on the way to realization. Thus the targets at which critics must shoot are swiftly moving and the difficulty of making center shots is increased. Besides displaying a resolve to attack the underlying causes of periodical crises in economy, the President's strategy was "good politics"—that is, politics highly distracting to opposing forces.

The Post Impressionist

An Unknown Mary Austin.

Postoffice, Saturday.

MARY AUSTIN, who died the other day, died before more than a few of the reviewers got around to reviewing her last book. Then the obituary writers considered her as a vastly "advanced" person, in the sense in which that word is applied, by similarly advanced people, to people who have advanced so far as to have got back to the time when mankind didn't have any religion worth mentioning.

And yet this last book of hers, which Farrar & Rinehart publish, offers an answer to its title, "Can Prayer Be Answered?" And that answer is an affirmative.

Of course, Mrs. Mary Hunter Austin had written other books touching on religious themes. But those were not the books of hers that her admirers admired. Her admirers had early selected her for their admiration in two exclusive capacities: for her studies in American Indian and Hispano-American lore, which, indeed, should alone make her long remembered; and for her writings in the cause of feminism, which are already pretty well forgotten.

Now, when you are an author with a special public, or two special publics, your readers endow you with a personality which is of their own creation, though based upon those specialties. They hedge you with befitting limitations and they just won't hear you when you move out of that character or those limitations. So Mrs. Austin's last book will not be greatly mentioned among the lovers of "The Land of Little Rain" or "Woman of Genius."

Not that there is much in this last book of even an unconsciously orthodox nature. But its 55 pages are interesting because they came from a person generally regarded as wholly unorthodox, and because, through unorthodox byways, they do now and then draw near to the place where orthodox journeys end.

Its author had lived 66 busy years. She lectured. She wrote. She was a club worker. She searched out the remotest corners of the American Southwest. Yet for 35 of those years she had, she tells us, been thinking about theories of appeal to supernatural power—"the method and philosophy of prayer," she calls them—and, like the practical woman she was, taking and codifying notes of her experiments and experiences.

Back there in '89 she reached a crisis in her life that seemed to her to require more than human aid. With Christian forms of prayer she had been out of touch; other forms she had never known. But she was familiar with something of the religious side of her neighbors, the Piute Indians, and now she sought one of their wisest medicine-men.

Could prayer, she asked, be answered? He told her it could be—by "a principle existing in all created life, accessible to man, responsive to him . . . 'the Friend of the Soul of Man.'" Then how should one pray? Not by remaining where you were, but by climbing upward.

That was Mrs. Austin's starting point. She learned the symbolism of the Indians' religious dance, and makes much of it—a portion of this little book that recalls both the dancing acolytes in the Cathedral of Seville and that Cappadocian dancer whom St. Basil the Great rebuked.

But Mrs. Austin learned more later. She studied the prayer-life of saints of the early Church, both Eastern and Western. She was not converted to Christianity, but did, she believes, acquire at least a portion of their ability to gain thorough inner detachment from material concerns—with results that surprised her.

Just how she did this, and the effects of it, as she sees them—she, among the most practical of women—make an amazing history. Perhaps her thesis has been best expressed by the New York Times' critic, one of those few who did review the volume before its author's death. Her thesis is, says he, "that man can get in touch with an all-pervasive, all-powerful force which is able to help him mightily toward well-being and the realization of wholesome, unselfish desires."

And to What or Whom did she pray?

It wasn't, apparently, the Force to which those Piutes prayed. She owns that she has "never taken the whole measure"—a measurement which, indeed, even this persevering woman might find somewhat daunting. "I do not," she says, "know its one unchanging name. Nevertheless, she adds: "Whatever I, being sincerely moved by the need of it, pray to, it works. I think if somebody who is seriously studying evolution would come through with a clearer notion of what it is that, at the very core of livingness, evolves, I might know what to call what I pray to. Whatever it is, . . . it is tied up with all our processes of being and becoming."

Just there is what strikes us as the queerest and most compelling thing about this queer but compelling book. Mrs. Austin was in such trouble to find a name for that to which she addressed her prayers—that which, she proved fervently confident, answered them!

* * *

Well, we don't pretend to be an expert upon theological nomenclature, but we do feel that almost anybody could suggest a name which would, at least theoretically, meet all the requirements of the case. It wouldn't have been altogether unfamiliar even to Mrs. Austin's ears, either. It——

In short, it's "God."

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

Russia!

MOSCOW.—I rode from the boat to the hotel in Leningrad with a public school official of one of our Eastern States. Neither one of us spoke for several minutes. We were both trying to take in the incredible picture before us. Finally he observed as if to himself:

BARGERON

"With the exception of China, there is no place in the world where you would see this."

He reflected my sentiment exactly. My impression then and one that has not been changed by my subsequent stay, but which on the contrary is shared by every American with whom I have talked, whether he be a tourist or has lived in the country for several years—was that there is not a section in our country, in the impoverished coal fields, among the poor farmers of the South, or in our breadlines, where the living standard is any lower if as low.

Indeed, the diet of our breadlines seems to be the average national diet here—vegetable soup and bread.

• • • •

I have a feeling of disgust even now when I recall one of the first placards I saw upon landing at Leningrad. It was a telegram of congratulations from the International Labor Defense, or whatever it is, in the States, to the Communists upon the occasion of their celebration last May 1. It congratulated the Communists upon their progress, their eradication of unemployment and expressed the hope that the United States would soon catch up.

Those who sponsored that telegram were either pitifully ignorant or just plain nuts. I might say in passing, though, that they have undoubtedly excelled over here in eradicating unemployment. Such great progress have they made in this respect, in fact, that they have women digging ditches and doing manual labor on buildings. That to me seems to be eradicating unemployment with a vengeance. The babies, however, are still unemployed.

• • • •

None of this is intended to bear on what the Russians are doing for themselves. It is written in the light of the amazing number of Americans who are toying with all kinds of "isms" these days. And those who are so rampant for communism might first wait and let it be adopted here. It hasn't been yet. What they have is a dictatorship as severe as any czaristic government. The floggings of the serfs have been cut out. Outright killings are more the order now.

My attitude and the attitude of those with whom I have talked, foreign residents and foreign visitors, is not one of criticism, however. It is one of pity that there should exist such a backward people on the face of the globe, and we visitors come away with about as much feeling against the czars as the Russians have. And with this, we share in varying degree the hope of the Russians that they are now on the road to working themselves out of the darkness, a possibility of two generations hence at the earliest.

My own lasting impression will be that of hordes of animal-like people with expressions on their faces that defy description—a mixture of stupidity, passiveness, despair and a slightly dawning ray of hope—hanging on street cars like flies or scurrying from the path of tooting automobiles, scurrying like rats frightened, as they are not yet used to these newly introduced agencies of death.

Up until a few months ago, I am told, automobiles were confined to government use. They may now be purchased by the public, but with the low incomes of the people one can imagine how long it will be before privately owned cars make their appearance in any appreciable numbers. The only privately owned cars I have seen during my stay in Leningrad and here were those of the foreign newspaper correspondents. They all have Fords with two chauffeurs apiece. Sheer luxury!

All of the government cars, including those used by Intourist, carry red flags, and the correspondents' cars carry the flags of their countries. They push their way through the crowd tooting their horns incessantly and but seldom slowing down. The crowd breaks off from in front and to the side of them as they would shed water while sloughing through a stream. The explanation is that the crowd is so unaccustomed to cars that one must simply push his way through.

Air Mail Prober Given U. S. Post

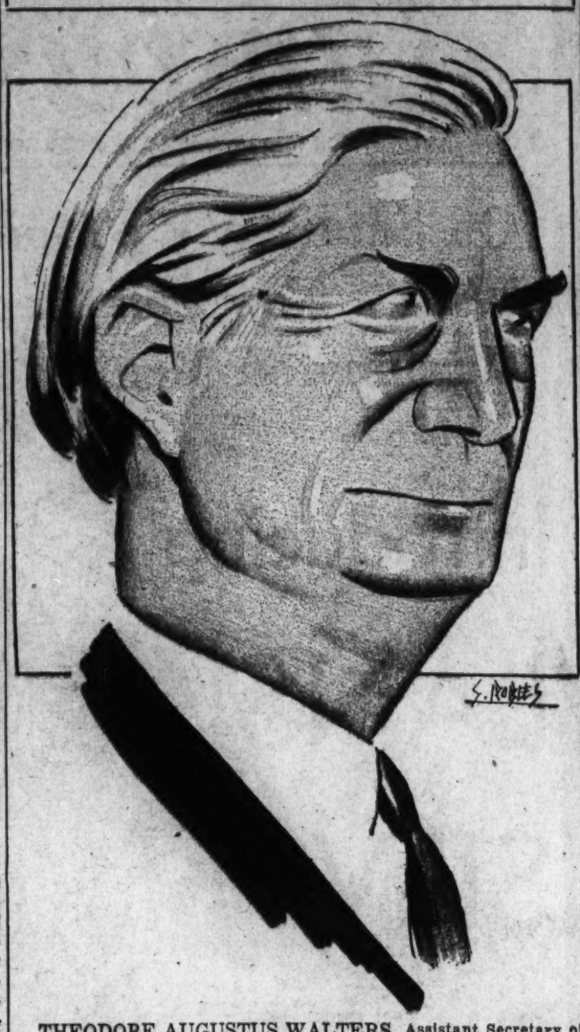
Patterson Director of Unit Making Phone Inquiry.

A. F. Patterson, chief investigator for the special Senate committee which investigated ocean and air mail contracts, yesterday was named director of the telephone division of the new Communications Commission, which is conducting an inquiry into interstate telephone companies. The appointment was reported by the Associated Press.

Patterson, a native of Alabama, was president of the Public Service Commission of that State for two years and has held other public posts in Alabama. He came to Washington in April of 1933 to assist Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the investigating committee.

Patterson will take office Monday.

The National Gallery



THEODORE AUGUSTUS WALTERS, Assistant Secretary of the Interior. He hails from Idaho, where, due to his rapid method of speaking during campaigns, he earned the sobriquet of "Rapid Fire Orator of Idaho." After a round of State offices, an unsuccessful candidacy for the governorship, and service as delegate to conventions, he became president of the State board of education, which office he held at the time of his appointment here by Roosevelt. Past master, A. F. and A. M., all his children are college graduates. Opens his mail dutifully and attends with robust avidity to routine matters. Big, tall, with broad, hulking shoulders, he smiles effusively, shakes his longish gray hair and flashes his bulging eyes. Likes to dance with the young ladies and the orchestra stops too soon. Hobbies: Fungi or mushrooms.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Mead Is Latest Entry In Speakership Race

A. F. Beiter Presents Name of Colleague From Buffalo, Describing Him as a 'Pronounced Liberal, but Not an Extremist.'

By Raymond Clapper.

There's always room for one more candidate in a Speakership fight and last night Representative James M. Mead, of Buffalo, N. Y., permitted—without resisting very hard—his friends to enter his name.

Since the late Speaker Rainey died half a dozen candidates have appeared and indications are that by the time Congress returns in January almost everybody on the Democratic side will be working tooth and nail to have the honor of the Speakership thrust upon him.

Leading candidates now include:

Majority Leader Byrns, of Tennessee, who had opportunity during the last Congress to do a good many favors which ought to bring dividends in the Speakership balloting, and who, in addition, stands by tradition in the role of heir apparent, it being unbroken custom to promote the majority leader to the chair.

William Bankhead, of Alabama, coauthor with his brother of the Bankhead cotton control bills, and nosed out of the House leadership in 1933 by a hair's breadth.

Rayburn Handicapped.

Sam Rayburn, of Texas, bald and merry, one of the old Garner dynasty, popular and able but suffering from the feeling in the House that Texas has enough already with the Vice Presidency and six major House chairmanships, more than any other State ever had on one platter.

Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, dean of the House by virtue of longest service, fond of comedy on the floor, and suspected now of gathering up a bloc of votes which he can trade to advantage in the showdown.

John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, one of the bonus-inflation leaders.

John J. O'Connor, of New York's Tammany.

Maybe Robert Crosser, of Ohio, friend of railroad labor, will get into the free-for-all. He has said the Speaker ought to come from the Middle West and that's where Ohio is.

Beiter Presents Mead.

Representative Mead's announcement was made by his friend, Representative A. F. Beiter, of New York, who described his candidate as "a pronounced liberal, but not an extremist, firm in his convictions, but not a quibbler in matters where there is a difference of opinion." The world also is advised by Representative Beiter that his candidate is "industrious and aggressive" and is "highly intelligent." He also is for the Administration, although the statement doesn't recall that during the air-mail fight, Representative Mead, who was chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, refused to follow blindly the Administration recommendations and sponsored a compromise which he thought would avoid some of the drastic and hastily adopted features of the White House program.

Speakership fights are a lot of fun, for it's the one time that the members get a chance to forget worries of their constituents and play politics among themselves. Candidates trot out so-called issues. But for the most part the whole fight is a personal one like a lodge election and the alliances are those of good fellows, those who have done little favors for each other, or sometimes just the mutual attraction of congenial drinking companions.

There is perhaps one exception to this general statement in sight. Byrns and Bankhead have announced they favor abolition of the rule by which 145 members can sign a petition and pull a bill out of pigeonhole. They want to go back to the old rule by which a majority of the House must vote before a committee chairman can be forced to pull a buried bill out of his pocket and let it come before the House for a vote.

Break for Minority.

The present 145-signature rule gives the minority a break—one of the few which it gets under the rigid House rules. Those who want to knock it out say that it obstructs Administration legislation. It enables minority groups to trade with each other and trot out all sort of embarrassing measures and force House members to go on record when they don't want to. They say that such tactics hold up the business of the House, and that it was such a situation that at the end of the last session forced the majority to impose the most drastic gag rule of all time—one which permitted the Speaker to recognize any one he wished. Czars Reed and Cannon never got away with anything as rough-handed as that.

It may be that enough Democrats will resent any attempt to further curb anti-Administration legislation in the House to oppose the election of Byrns or Bankhead on that ground. But that would involve a more widespread revolt against the Administration among House Democrats than appears likely from the record at the last session.

As for the Republicans, they have no hope of being in the majority next winter, so they are just looking on, hoping that the fight on the other side will be a mean one with plenty of biting and gouging.

Quake Destroys Town; 5,000 Made Homeless

Algiers, North Africa, Sept. 7 (U.P.). A terrific earthquake tonight destroyed the town of Carnot. Five thousand were reported homeless. Many dead and injured were feared from the picture presented by early reports from the devastated zone. Carnot is about 125 miles south of Algiers, near Orleansville.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Washington Irving and Walter Scott.

In 1815 Washington Irving sailed for Europe—we still say SAILED though we don't do it—expecting to be gone for a short time. He stayed 17 years and returned a famous man, receiving a tremendous welcome. At a critical moment in his financial affairs, Walter Scott induced the great London publisher John Murray, to undertake the regular publication of Irving's works; and Irving's fame and fortune were made secure. He never forgot Scott's kindness; but before this friendly act happened, he visited Scott at Abbostford and wrote from that place of enchantment to his brother on September 1, 1817 giving a fine pen portrait of his host.

"On Friday, in spite of sullen, gloomy weather, I mounted the top of the mail coach, and rattled off to Selkirk. It rained heavily in the course of the afternoon and drove me inside. On Saturday morning early I took chaise for Melrose; and on the way stopped at the gate of Abbotsford and sent in my letter of intrduction, with a request to know whether it would be agreeable for Mr. Scott to receive a visit from me in the course of the day. The glorious old minstrel himself came limping to the gate, took me by the hand in a way that made me feel as if we were old friendes; in a moment I was seated at his hospitable board among his charming little family, and here have I been ever since. I had intended certainly being back to Edinburgh today (Monday), but Mr. Scott wishes me to stay until Wednesday, that we may make excursions to Dryburgh Abbey Yarrow, &c., as the weather has held up and the sun begins to shine. I can not tell you how truly I have enjoyed the hours I have passed here. They fly by two quick, yet each is loaded with story, incident, or song; and when I consider the world of ideas, images and impressions that have been crowded upon my mind since I have been here, it seems incredible that I should only have been two days at Abbotsford. I have rambled about the hills with Scott; visited the haunts of Thomas the Rhymer, and other spots rendered classic by border tale and witching song, and have been in a kind of dream or delirium.

As to Scott, I can not express my delight at his character and manners. He is a sterling golden-hearted old worthy, full of the joyousness of youth with an imagination continually furnishing forth picture, and a charming simplicity of manner that puts you at ease with him in a moment. It has been a constant source of pleasure to me to remark his deportment toward his family, his neighbors, his domestics, his very dogs and cats; everything that comes within his influence seems to catch a beam of that sunshine that plays round his heart; but I shall say more of him hereafter, for he is a theme on which I shall love to dwell."

U. S. to Permit Relief Profits

Hopkins Says Firms May Charge for Processing Aid Articles.

(Associated Press.)

The Government's relief chief sought yesterday to assure business that manufacturers who turn drought purchases into usable articles were expected to make a reasonable profit out of the operation.

At a press conference, Harry L. Hopkins emphasized, too, that the Government had no intention of having such commodities manufactured in relief workshops—except where necessary.

It was made perfectly clear that FERA's activities in this connection would continue. Hopkins said only enough farm animals in the drought area would be purchased and killed to leave sufficient margin of forage for those remaining.

He reported the FERA was starting another drive to clean up its relief rolls so that only those actually in need would get Government aid. Total families on relief in July, he said, were 3,830,000, and they received $132,000,000 from Federal, State and county governments.

The Government is taking title to the hides and skins obtained from drought animals, Hopkins said, adding that shoes and other wearing apparel, as well as the leather itself, would be so distributed as not to disturb the market for these commodities.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Life Among the High-Brows.

BREAD LOAF, Vt.—The four of us—Freeman Lewis, his wife, John Page, and myself—hadn't been in Bread Loaf two minutes before we met Bernard DeVoto and his wife coming down the street, and had glad reunion. And we hadn't been there five minutes before we all went up to Hervey Allen's for highballs before dinner.

"Aren't you a bit clique-y?" I asked someone of a baker's dozen w. k. names sitting around on three beds and a chair in the Allen's quarters. There wasn't a Bread Loaf pupil in the crowd.

"We have to be—in self-protection," came the answer.

• • • •

You find that defensive division in any teaching community. The teachers like to get off by themselves and undo, so to speak, their mental stays; it is very tiring to be a great man or a great woman on exhibition.

But most of all, I suspect, you find it in the strange, hopeful, and pathetic business of teaching composition. Especially if the teachers have around them that aura of fame which results from having published, actually having published, a book. Nothing is quite so glamorous to the would-be writers—if they are yearning dilettantes, they flock around the feet of the idol; if they are earnest and serious, their adoration is none the less pressing. And it is from just this crush of eager souls which our w. k. names must, on occasion, escape.

The directors of the Bread Loaf Writers' Conference are canny. For two weeks at the end of August, after Middlebury College's summer school of English, they gather the literary lights at this mountain inn. To be sure, they muffed it with Robert Hillyer. Though an old-timer at these conferences they thought they could dispense with him this year, and they didn't invite him. Then Mr. Hillyer won the Pulitzer Prize, and was Bread Loaf's face red!

But on the whole they collect an impressive group of writers and publishers. How the scheme works, and what benefit the 60-odd pupils gather from the exposure, I'll mention tomorrow. Now we are watching the author of "Anthony Adverse" fill a row of highball glasses on the mantelpiece.

• • • •

How like Theodore Dreiser he looks, or will look in 16 years! Large, hulking, slow, in a gray shirt and white pull-over sweater, Hervey Allen has the same heavy, impassive face, the same flat, pale eyes, the same brushed-back comb of hair. You can, if you will, add the same endless, tireless length of their books. Mr. Allen is not yet quite so ponderous or "editorial," but I think he will be.

He is, he says, at work on three or four things—he may even go back to poetry for a while. I mention a Washington report that "Anthony" should be pronounced with a "t" sound. "I don't care how they prounce it!" he exclaims with a touch of asperity. Apparently he is a bit sick of his astonishing brainchild.

The point is plainer when his two lovely little tow-headed girls come in and curtsey around—he turns warmly to speak of his more private life. With his wife (blonde and gracious, who performed the Herculean labor of typing "Anthony" twice), his children, maid, chauffeur, sedan, and station-wagon, he is going on to Cazenovia, N. Y. "A nice, quiet house there," he says. "I want the kids to have a more natural life than they've been having."

• • • •

John Farrar, of Farrar & Rinehart, sits talking animatedly to Avis DeVoto. He is red-headed, high-keyed. Few people have so many "natures." He is a poet, and shy. He is a critic and essayist, and sharp. He is a publisher, and effusive. Every writers' gathering in the East sees Mr. Farrar present, and he is Hervey Allen's particular "fidus Achates."

His able wife, by the way, is the woman who started the cross-word puzzle craze.

• • • •

Bernard DeVoto sits humped over on the floor. He is fond of that. To paraphrase somebody or other speaking of Mark Hopkins on a log, it is a liberal education to sit on a rug with DeVoto at the other end. Of all the people present, his eyes see most.

His novel later this month, "We Accept With Pleasure," will show that.

• • • •

The minute young lady with the shock of brown hair and the large, troubled brown eyes wide apart, sitting on the bed with her feet curled under her, is Laura Gilfillan. After the success of "I Went to Pit College," she is at work on a novel.

She watches everything closely, and says very little. What she does say is usually arresting enough to stop the company.

• • • •

Gorham B. Munson, Humanist critic of letters, and representative in this country of "Social Credit," sits back doing excellent small-talk.

Do you remember Edmund Wilson's Joycean extravaganza, "Gorgonzola; or the Future of Literary Criticism," in that elsewhere less hilarious book: "Whither Whither: or After Sex What?"—Wilson is writing of three "limperary crimples"—"And there is old Borem B. Bunsen, the moth theriouth of the three, with his mustachio cocked so waxy and his duomo waxed so parquet." But Mr. Munson's mustache isn't waxed, and his noble bald head doesn't shine, and he is really the pleasantest of men.

• • • •

Maxwell Aley, editor of Longmans Green, white-headed, pink-faced and sweet-voiced, sits talking with another young lady with eyes wide apart, this time of an astounding blue.

She is Josephine Johnson, of Willow Grove, Mo., whose first novel, "Now in November," has already sent its advance critics into paeans of praise. She talks of Cyril Clemens, president of the International Mark Twain Society, and of Mary Austin. Someone said to Mrs. Austin: "It must be nice to be a great author!" To which the reply: "Yes, but it is so lonely!"

• • • •

The very spruce, very young-looking man is Raymond Everett, American head of the famous literary agency, Curtis Brown, Ltd. He tells us of a game current in New York called "Dead-Ends," which consists of thinking up remarks to make to your dinner partner of such a thorough flatness that nothing more can be said and you may go on with your soup. "Such," says Mr. Everett, "as—'When I was six I wore a size four.'"

"Or," adds Mr. Page, "'I used to know a little girl who was fond of dog biscuit.'"

That was that, and then there was dinner, with Julia Peterkin very sweet and grave. You would never know that she had received a wire just that day that her friend and collaborator, Doris Ullman, had died in New York. Miss Peterkin had kept on with every one of her duties that day, and went on to New York by the night train.

• • • •

Practically everyone in this same crowd went down to William Hazlitt Upson's in the evening. He writes those humorous tractor stories in the Satevepost, and lives summers down the road from Bread Loaf, though he is not connected with the conference.

Mr. Upson is a short man, with sharp Yankee features and a pindot bow-tie. Almost at once he brought out his accordion, and proceeded to play "Dinky-Dinky-Parley-Voo." Everything else he played had the same tempo—as if a cook fond of cayenne pepper should put it in biscuits.

"Bill," asked Avis DeVoto, "do you think you could teach my husband to play the accordion?"

"I don't see any reason why not," said Mr. Upson. "It takes soul, not musical ability."

Another Letter From a Dad To His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise: So your guest of an hour bored you? Well, in this particular case I think you had reason to be bored. Nobody can find much entertainment in an empty gourd.

But the habit of being bored by fellow humans is one that can be very costly, and I must warn you against it before it takes root.

The pleasure and profit you get out of life will depend in large measure on ordinary people, and one who is unable to enjoy the kind of people that chance introduces is like the unfortunate guest who finds nothing but hash on the table and doesn't like hash.

Being bored is not proof of superiority, as many suppose. It indicates nothing but lack of interest. And lack of interest often results from lack of ability to appreciate.

As it was said of one great man, that not to know him was to confess one's self unknown, so to be bored by certain people is a confession of stupidity.

One who knows nothing of music may be bored by the playing of a great violinist, and Einstein doubtless bores people who can't count above ten.

Another point to remember is that a brilliant player never does his best in competition with a child.

If a brilliant man finds himself in the company of a clod, he makes little effort to appear at his best. It takes both steel and flint to generate a spark. Finding the clod unresponsive, the brilliant one takes refuge in silence. And doubtless the clod is bored.

I don't mean to intimate that boredom is always an inability to appreciate superiors. More often the opposite is true.

But the clod himself may be interesting to one who is blessed with intellectual curiosity. Even bugs are interesting to a scientific mind.

We are selfish by nature and prefer people who will entertain us without a corresponding effort on our part. But that kind of people don't waste their time on the dull. They also hate to be bored.

The safest plan is to cultivate an omnivorous appetite, so you can get along with spinach when there isn't any cake. Love, DAD.

Fechner Hopes For Permanent Forest Camps

Director, Back From Tour of West, Will Submit Plan to President.

Continuation of the CCC camps "in some form" on a permanent basis will be recommended to President Roosevelt by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, he said yesterday on returning from a nine weeks' tour of Western camps.

"I am convinced that the work is worthwhile and that the results have justified the expense," he said.

A marked change in the attitude of residents of communities adjacent to the camps, particularly business men, was noted by Mr. Fechner.

Boys Win Friends.

"A year ago, when we first started these camps, there were many protests against having them located near the towns," he explained. "The people seemed to think the boys would be riff-raff and have no regard for the peace or laws of the community.

"Now they are all hearty in their praise of the men's personal conduct, and many business men told me they hired youths from the camp in preference to taking men off the street."

In the National parks the boys are invited into the best hotels and mingle socially with the guests, Fechner said.

The director is mapping plans for the winter work and intends to make suggestions for changes in operation when he reports to the President upon the latter's return to Washington.

Maps Winter Work.

"There will be no let-down in the work this winter," he said.

The appropriation for the regular camps will expire on March 31, 1935.

Fechner said he was particularly pleased to find such "a splendid morale" among the boys in the camp and to see them so healthy. The Surgeon General's office of the War Department, he said, told him the health of the CCC youths is better than that of the enlisted men.

Fechner said that military features will be kept out of the camps in the future as in the past.

The training that the youths have been getting in building roads, bridges and the like is proving valuable in helping them find jobs, Fechner said. An average of 10,000 a month are being absorbed by industry, many of them before their year's assignment ends. This compares with about 5,000 a year ago.

Securities Board Scans Stock Drop

Exchange Asked to Learn Cause of Decline.

The securities and exchange commission has asked the New York Stock Exchange to investigate the rapid drop in the price of the stock of United States Smelting, the Associated Press reported.

The commission has no power to investigate such matters until certain portions of the securities exchange act become effective on October 1, but it was decided to obtain information on the matter.

Commission officials said they had been informed there was no short selling in this security.

Roosevelt Names Two For Veterans' Board

Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, announced yesterday that the President has appointed Pleasant D. Gold and Dr. Ovid C. Foote as members of the Board of Veterans' Appeals.

Mr. Gold is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, the law school of the University of Richmond and the Pulitzer School of Journalism, Columbia University. Most of his experience has been in the insurance field.

Dr. Foote is a graduate of Wake Forest College, North Carolina, and received his medical degree at Johns Hopkins in 1912, later pursuing special courses at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester. He served as a medical officer of the Navy from 1913 until 1924.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

BACKSEAT YACHTING.

(Mrs. T. O. M. Sopwith is to sail on the Endeavour as timekeeper.—News item.)

When the tall, white yachts do battle
For the bloomin' mug this year
On the British yacht a lady,
Mrs. Sopwith, will appear;
It will be an innovation
And we'll all watch anxiously
To observe if backseat driving
Helps a fellow much at sea.

By "Tom" Sopwith at the tiller
Mrs. Sopwith she will be,
Ever eager to assist him
In his search for victory;
Gallant lady, she will try to Guide him true and straight and far,
But we fear some for the skipper—
For we know how women are!

When he tries a certain tactic
And it simply doesn't go,
Will the little lady whisper,
"Well, my dear, I told you so!"
When he makes a quick decision
And the breeze turns pretty flat,
Will he hear the biting comment,
"Humph! I could have told you that!"

When he sets the big ballooner
And beholds it flop and shake,
Will an old familiar voice say,
"What a terrible mistake!"
When the breeze he goes in search of Proves a vacuum intense,
Will the missus sigh and mutter,
"Can't you use a little sense?"

When he jockeys for a start and
Is outsmarted, will he hear,
"Well, I think it's simply awful
How you do such dumb things, dear!"
When he does some tacking cagy
And stays just a bit too long,
Will he wince beneath the statement,
"Why, I knew that tack was wrong!"

When a slight miscalculation
Costs him quite a helpful breeze,
Will he have to bear the comment,
"Don't be foolish, darling, please!"
When he errs about the currents
And the moments slip away,
Will he crumple as the lady
Cries "I don't know what to say?"

If the Rainbow gets off winging
And goes skimming o'er the deep,
Will he hear the accusation,
"Why, they caught you fast asleep?"
If the Rainbow proves a winner
Ani Endeavour's Number Two,
Will he hear, "You just ignored me
When I told you what to do?"

No; we think it's quite unlikely
There'll be comment of this sort,
For we know that Mrs. Sopwith
Is a good and gallant sport;
So we wish him nice, smooth racing
With no words that bite and jar
And we hope for no post mortems—
But we know how women are!

BY INFERENCE.

Art Franklin's ankles are in such a swollen and bruised condition that he has concluded his bridge partner plays a bang up game.

When two lady tennis finalists fly into a temper, Sam Gevins hopes the referee doesn't have to tell them to keep their shorts on.

"There's one thing you can say about stratosphere flights," opines Sidney Glickman, "they're always on the up and up."

Declaring Love, Myers Relates How Coed Died

Sweetheart Breathed Last in His Arms, He Tells Jury; Case Nears Close.

Norman, Okla., Sept. 7 (AP).—Neal Myers, 21-year-old University of Oklahoma junior, testified on cross-examination at his murder trial today that Marian Mills died in his arms, but denied he killed the campus beauty queen in an effort to avert motherhood.

Myers told of his efforts to revive his 19-year-old sweetheart when she became unconscious after taking medicine in the apartment of Mrs. Hazel Brown, fraternity cook and student confidante.

Myers reiterated that he loved the girl, asked her repeatedly to marry him and that he had opposed the attempt to prevent maternity. As he left the witness stand he slumped over a counsel table and sobbed violently.

Myers' testimony, with that of seven character witnesses, closed the evidence in the trial, and District Judge Tom Pace instructed the jury after denying a defense motion for an instructed verdict of acquittal.

Under the charge to the jury, one of three verdicts—the death penalty, life imprisonment, or freedom—is possible. Judge Pace denied a State motion for an instruction on manslaughter, which provides a penitentiary sentence of four years to life.

Argument to the jury, due to last until late tonight, began at once, with County Attorney Paul Updegraff speaking first.

Judge Pace said the attorneys would have unlimited time for their final arguments, and that court would continue in session tonight.

The youth testified he and Marian were "sort of" engaged to be married and that she wore his fraternity pin.

He said she refused repeatedly to marry him, but finally agreed she would if the quack remedy she was taking "didn't work." Myers insisted he fled only to keep from disgracing his family. As her son testified, Mrs. P. B. Myers, wife of an El Reno doctor, sobbed bitterly. Her gray-haired husband wept, too, for the first time during the trial.

The youth said he met Miss Mills during his first year at the university—he was a junior in pharmacy last year—and that the first intimation they had "something was wrong" was last March.

Mary Pickford Signed To Star in Radio Plays

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Mary Pickford disclosed tonight she had signed a contract to star in a series of plays, to be presented over the radio, begirming October 3.

Miss Pickford plans to leave for Hollywood tomorrow to help organize a stock company and select material for the productions. A food concern is sponsoring the programs.

Girl Freed at Chicago In Killing of Parents

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—Anna Maletta, 15, who killed her father and mother, today was released in custody of a relative after a Cook County grand jury was reported to have refused to indict her.

A coroner's jury, hearing testimony from Anna that she intended to kill her father, James, a psychopathic case, after he had beaten her mother, had recommended that she be held for murder. The mother was shot accidentally.

Editor's Killers Hired by 'Reds,' Friend Charges

Threats of Communists Revealed by Guilford's Former Co-worker.

Minneapolis, Sept. 7 (AP).—Communist activities were under the scrutiny of police tonight following a charge that Howard Guilford, 40, former publisher of sensational Minneapolis weekly papers, was slain by assassins "hired by Communists."

The authorities also were investigating a revelation by J. M. Near, former co-publisher with Guilford, who made the charge that a threat had been received by Near for anti-Communistic attacks.

"The murder of Guilford undoubtedly was the work of gangster gunmen hired by Communists," Near asserted. "Of course, Guilford had plenty of personal enemies, but I'm positive they had nothing to do with his murder."

Personal mail and sheets of a press clipping service were studied by police in the hope of finding a clew to the motive for the crime.

Guilford was shot while riding in a coupe to his South Minneapolis home early Thursday evening. Two gunmen drove alongside. One poured shotgun slugs into Guilford's head and body.

Seven years ago he was wounded by unidentified assailants under similar circumstances.

The clip sheets were sent to the Country Press of Minnesota by the Guilford Co. and contained scathing attacks on communistic activities in Minneapolis, particularly in connection with the recent truck drivers' strike.

Near and Guilford also had been attacking the present State Farmer-Labor administration. They formerly published the Saturday Press and the Pink Sheet. Guilford had become widely known for his personal revelations of lives of public officials and private citizens.

Guilford and Near received National prominence when Gov. Floyd B. Olson, then Hennepin County attorney, suppressed the Saturday Press they were publishing in Minneapolis. Gov. Olson invoked the 1925 Minnesota newspaper suppression law. The State Supreme Court upheld the law, but it was declared un-Constitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

Seagle Studio Draws Pupils From Capital

Miss Tirrell, Debutante, One of Voice Colony in Adirondacks.

Townsends Are Summer Neighbors of Noted Music Master.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

At least one Capital debutante has improved the golden hours of summer by turning her thoughts to more serious things than golf, tennis and dancing.

Miss Dorothy Tirrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, who was presented to society last winter at a delightful reception given by her parents in their home on Wyoming avenue, spent the summer at Olowan, the studios of Oscar Seagle in the Adirondacks, where under the tutelage of this famous teacher she continued the training of her fine voice.

Miss Tirrell, after working hard under the inspired leadership of Mr. Seagle, has left the Adirondacks for Greenwich, Conn., where she will visit for a short time, and later will join her parents at their summer home in Natick, Mass.

Miss Thorpe Goes Abroad.

Miss Jane Thorpe, talented daughter of Col. and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, was a student with Mr. Seagle two years ago, and last winter continued her vocal training in Paris. Miss Thorpe has been with her parents at the Chevy Chase Club this summer, and only recently sailed for Europe to spend another season. Mrs. Thorpe paid a visit to Olowan after she had seen her daughter sail, and has now rejoined Col. Thorpe in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend have a summer home, Beacon Hill, adjoining the estate of Mr. Seagle, who is a close friend of Mrs. Townsend, Washington's greatest patron of music. Mr. Townsend was a close friend and admirer of Jean de Reszke and the association has continued with Mr. Seagle, who was the first pupil of the famous Polish tenor.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, who are the guests of Miss Florence Clarke, at her beautiful island-home, Isola Bella, were also recent visitors at Mr. Seagle's studio.

Voice Students.

Others who have been studying with Mr. Seagle this summer are Miss Rebecca Tarwater and Miss Margaret Hamby, of the King-Smith School in Washington, and Mr. Stanley Franck, son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Luther Franck. Dr. Franck is rector of the Emmanuel Episcopal Church here, and his son, with Miss Hamby, has been among the soloists at the weekly concerts given by the artist pupils.

The Seagle colony is becoming more and more a mecca for music lovers. Interest in the studio concerts is often heightened by visits from former pupils who have attained success and who graciously give their services. Sunday vespers given in the studio theater, with a chorus of 60 voices, is an interesting innovation at the estate, and the services attract an audience of several hundred people each week from neighboring resorts on Lake George.

Most interesting people gather at this little center of art, and during the summer some of the really great artists of the country visit there to join the convocation of talent and to enjoy the natural beauties of the country as well.

Miss Franchot Becomes Bride Of Mr. Minter

State Department Staff Member and Bride Tour South.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Wisner Franchot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Franchot, to Mr. John R. Minter, took place at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents in Cleveland Park.

The Rev. Hugh R. Murchison, an uncle of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony. The drawing rooms were decorated with gladioli in the autumn shades.

Mr. Franchot gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore a gown of white satin made on long simple lines, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Bridal Attendants.

Mrs. Maurice Makepiece, sister of the bride, and Miss Elsa Glaser, of Staten Island, N. Y., were the attendants. They wore gowns of soft crepe in a deep bittersweet shade and carried armfuls of flame-colored gladioli and blue asters.

Dr. C. C. Minter, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. F. P. Hibbard and Mr. LaVerne Baldwin, both of the diplomatic service and now on duty in the State Department.

The bride is a cousin of the popular Franchot Tone, moving picture star.

On Southern Trip.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Tone, of Niagara Falls; Miss M. Louise Kelly and Mrs. Seelye W. Little, of Rochester; Mr. T. L. B. Lister, of Niagara Falls; Mr. Hugh Minter, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. W. Denning Stewart, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. H. R. Murchison and Mr. Colin Murchison, of Columbia S. C.; Mrs. Mary Coleman and Mr. Lee Coleman, of Baltimore, and Mr. Maurice Makepiece, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Minter will return to Washington after a fortnight's motor trip through the South and will make their home in Georgetown, where they have taken a house.

Mr. Minter is in the Division of Western European Affairs of the State Department.

McClenahan Wedding Set

Philadelphia Girl Becomes Mr. Stevens' Bride September 22.

The marriage of Miss Elisabeth Lee McClenahan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McClenahan, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Sydney Gilman Stevens, of Westfield, N. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney G. Stevens, of Lynchburg, Va., will take place Saturday afternoon, September 22, at 3:30 o'clock, in Holy Trinity Church, Philadelphia. The Rt. Rev. Paul Matthews, Bishop of New Jersey, will perform the ceremony.

The matron of honor will be Mrs. Hollis French, of Boston, Mass., and the bridesmaids will be Miss Mary Stewart Hodge, of Philadelphia, and Miss Elizabeth MacLaren, of Princeton, N. J.

Mr. John Hoffman Stevens, of Ithan, Pa., brother of the bridegroom, will serve as best man, and the ushers will be Mr. John McClenahan, of Villa Nova, Pa., and Mr. Richard McClenahan, of New York, brothers of the bride; Mr. Lawrence Levengood, of Princeton, N. J.; Mr. Harper Dowell, of New York; Mr. Wallace Rucker and Mr. Everett Smith, of Westfield, N. J.

A small reception at the Warwick Hotel will follow the ceremony.

Miss McClenahan was graduated from the National Cathedral School in Washington, and made her debut in 1928. She is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Stevens was graduated from Princeton in 1930, and is a member of the Court Club.

Todd-Foote Bridal Today

Mother of Bridegroom Is Hostess at Dinner After Rehearsal.

Mrs. Morris Cooper Foote, of New York City, entertained at a dinner party at the Shoreham last evening following the wedding rehearsal for her son, Maj. William Cooper Foote, U. S. A., and Miss Harriet Stewart Todd, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry D. Todd, jr., who will be married this afternoon at the Army War College.

The dinner guests included the bride and bridegroom-elect; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Todd, Maj. Archer Dorst, U. S. A., and Mrs. Dorst; Maj. Laurence Weeks, U. S. A., and Mrs. Weeks; Maj. Clarence H. Danielson, U. S. A., and Mrs. Danielson; also Maj. Foote's brother, Mr. Francis C. Foote, of Pittsburgh; Miss Elizabeth Huey, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison T. Todd, Mrs. Nancy Stone, and Mr. Wister Huey.

Judge Marion De Vries entertained informally at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton.

Mr. George J. Schaller, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, is at the Carlton for a few days. Mr. George L. Harrison, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Mr. E. R. Fancher, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, are also at the Carlton.

Mr. Frederick William Wile had friends lunching with him yesterday at the Carlton.

Mrs. Mary Davis Gilles, of New York, is passing some time at the Carlton.

Capt. Edwin J. House, of the Air Corps, is at the Carlton for several days.

Mr. Hibbard Sails Soon for Liberia

Assigned to Be Charge d'Affaires at Monrovia.

Another of Washington's popular bachelors is making ready to leave the Capital for foreign shores.

Mr. Frederick P. Hibbard, of the State Department, has just received orders to leave early next month for his new post in Liberia, where he will serve as Charge d'Affaires. No appointment has been made for a Minister to that country, so Mr. Hibbard will be the United States chief of mission in Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, which derives its name from the author of the Monroe Doctrine.

Mr. Hibbard will go first to England and visit in London while waiting to embark at Liverpool for Africa.

Army Society Learns of Two Engagements

Sloan - Fernander and the Hubbert - Lincoln Troths Told.

Society in Washington and at Army posts throughout the country will be interested to hear of two recent engagements..

Mrs. Frank Anderson Sloan, widow of Lieut. Col. Sloan, has announced the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Hilda Sloan, to Lieut. Walter A. Fenander, Air Corps, U. S. A., son of Mr. Kaarlo Fenander, of Oakland, Calif.

Miss Sloan attended St. Mary's School for Girls at Garden City, Long Island, and was graduated from Miss Fuller's School at Ossining-on-the-Hudson. Later she studied art at the Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago and at the Vesper George School in Boston.

Marriage to Be Quiet.

Lieut. Fenander is a brother of Miss Eleanor Fenander, who makes her home in Clarendon, Va. The young officer attended the University of Southern California and was graduated from the Army Flying School at Kelly Field, Tex., in 1928.

The wedding will take place Thursday with only the immediate families and a few intimate friends attending. After October 1, Lieut. Fenander and his bride will be at home at Scott Field, Ill., where he is stationed.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael M. Hubbert, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret A. Hubbert, to Lieut. Rush Blodget Lincoln, jr., U. S. A., son of Col. and Mrs. Rush B. Lincoln, of Wellesley, Mass.

Bridal on Wednesday.

The wedding will take place on Wednesday in the chapel of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. A reception and breakfast for the families will be held at the Hubbert residence following the ceremony.

Miss Virginia Lincoln, sister of the bridegroom-elect, will be the bride's only attendant. Lieut. Frank S. Besson will serve as best man, and the ushers will be Lieut. William F. Powers and Lieut. George Kumpe.

Miss Hubbert attended the Finch and Lenox Schools. Lieut. Lincoln was graduated from West Point with the class of 1932 and received his commission as second lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers.

Attaches Attend West Point Fete

The Military Attache of the British Embassy, Col. Maurice Fitzmaurice Day, and the Military Attache of the French Embassy, Col. Emmanuel Lombard, spent Thursday at the United States Military Academy at West Point, where they attended the celebration of Lafayette-Marne day. Maj. Gen. William D. Connor, superintendent of the academy, made the welcoming address, and the Commercial Attache of the Belgian Embassy, M. Raoul E. L. Grenade, also spoke.

Following the ceremonies, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Osborne entertained the honor guests and members of the arrangements committee at luncheon in their home at Garrison, across the Hudson River from the academy.

Anne Smaltz Becomes Bride Of Mr. Vogel

Wed at Takoma Lutheran Church; Couple Depart on Honeymoon.

The wedding of Miss Anne Elizabeth Smaltz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar J. Smaltz, to Mr. Leonard J. Vogel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Vogel, took place September 4 in the Takoma Lutheran Church, at high noon.

The church was decorated with white roses and palms and ferns. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry J. Whiting, who was a classmate of the bridegroom at the University of Maryland.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She had on a gown of antique satin made on princess lines with a quilled jacket. The flaring skirt ended in a train. She wore a cap of the satin and her only jewel was a small cross of pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of white gladioli and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Smaltz was her sister's only attendant. She wore a gown of salmon-colored satin with hat and slippers of the same shade and carried a bouquet of salmon-colored gladioli and blue delphinium.

Mr. Richard Vogel attended his brother as best man, and the ushers were Mr. George Phipps and Mr. George Skelton.

Following the ceremony a breakfast was served for the two families, members of the bridal party and intimate friends at the Iron Gate Inn.

Later Mr. Vogel and his bride left by motor on a wedding trip. Mrs. Vogel was wearing an ensemble of honey dew crepe with matching hat and accessories. After touring in the North they will go to Fort Wayne, Ind., where the bridegroom is associated with the General Electric Co.

They found kidnaping more dangerous than

MURDER!

When members of the underworld turn to kidnaping, they find to their surprise that it is more dangerous than MURDER!

"Hundred Grand!" is the latest serial from the pen of Erle Stanley Gardner, author of "The Case of the Howling Dog" and other best-seller mysteries. In this up-to-the-minute, inside story of the kidnaping racket, Gardner, who happens to be a criminal lawyer, as well as mystery story writer, dramatizes the story back of the headlines. There is a feeling of reality in the kidnaping of 5-year-old Annette Morton, adopted daughter of a millionaire, the ransom demands ("Hundred Grand!"), the difficulties of effecting "contact," the other gang chiseling in, the murders which inevitably follow, the dramatic finish as the criminals are tracked to their hideaway.

Bona Fide Style in Men's Clothes Is Worth Care to Avoid Shoddy

Demanding Genuine Materials Repays Buyer in Satisfaction

Here Are Tips to Guide Shopper in Selecting Authentic Fashions and Goods in Choosing Autumn Wardrobe.

MOST MEN have a dread of freak attire. They want to be well dressed, but do not want to be made conspicuous by their clothing. Leading men's wear experts agree that the sooner the public learns between authentic fashions and overzealous designers' exaggerated ideas of "what would look nice" the better will be the relationship of customer, merchant and manufaturer. Remember this:

Worsteds are intended for dress clothes, and not sports clothes.

Fancy backs in double-breasted models are nothing short of ridiculous; the combination of the two is similar to wearing a red necktie and a green shirt with a dinner jacket.

Buckskin shoes for sports wear are perfect in rich brown shades and silly in all other colors.

Fantastic overplaids and colored leather buttons were never any good.

Polo coats with raglan sleeves and easy-swing backs are like tailcoats with waterproof collars—no good.

Hour-glass waistlines, angular shoulders, extremely full sleeve heads and squarish fish-mouth lapels are signs of freak fashions—avoid them.

Avoid anything that looks "sporty" or "improved." Casual ease is the keynote of good fashion.

Here are the six leading suits in rough wear that are authentic style:

Lounge jacket of homespun, casually fitting, with slightly longer coat than was worn last season, and three buttons. There's a slight, graceful break in the waistline when middle button is buttoned. Lapels have rounded fishmouth. Trousers are full through thigh and taper gracefully to break at shoetop. Good in cluster checks, minute plaids and solid tones. Good in single and double-breasted models.

To test for pure wool content, apply caustic soda to swatch. All wool is eaten away and cotton or rayon remains.

Above is the Shetland lounge suit. Excellent in herringbone, wide wale patterns. Dark-brown bone buttons only. No fancy pleats in front and avoid bellows pockets. Real Shetlands are woven by hand abroad and are fine in texture, and rich in color as well as soft to the touch. They may be distinguished by the nubs and flecks that add to the charm of the pattern. American mills duplicate British Shetlands so that only an expert can tell the difference. These are good, and reasonably priced. However, if the fabric feels "boardy" and stiff . . . keep away from it . . . it's shoddy and you're being cheated.

Above, Harris tweed overplaid lounge suit. Aside from the luxurious colorings and "soft hand," this tweed, either in its original British hand-loomed state or in authentic American replicas, can be distinguished by its "sea-weedy" peat odor. This odor is retained even after the suit is dry cleaned. It is caused by the smoke used in brewing the pure vegetable dyes on the virgin wool. Harris tweed is sometimes nubbed. Cheap imitations of this gaily flecked fabric flood the market. Feel the cloth, smell it and examine it closely. If there is anything you have doubt about, reject it. You'll know a good Harris when you see it. Best patterns are checks, herringbones and clear heathery mixtures. Best colors are lovat, browns and glen grays.

This is an easy-swing coat as it should appear from the back. It is purely a sportswear garment and should always be single breasted. It has a full bellows back and the half belt gracefully tapers the fullness of the back at the waistline. Patch pockets and never any flaps. Dark brown leather buttons or bone buttons to match. Horn buttons are smart and expensive. This coat is good in Shetlands, Harris, Donegals (an Irish tweed in which the diagonal weave is pronounced) or homespuns.

Note the side view of the yoked back coat above and the back view below. The pleats have a purpose. They're to give fullness and free play to the wearer without the bulk of a bellows back. Make sure that the pleats are full and not half-baked puckers put in for the sake of ornamentation. The half belt gathers in the surplus fullness at the waist and gracefully allows it to skirt out below. It never is "hour-glass" shape. Bellows pockets allow a man to cram golf balls, tees and pipes and what-have-you, into them without spoiling the lines of the coat or restricting free play and comfort. No darts on this jacket or trick weltings. It's excellent in any of the tweed group of fabrics for which tests are mentioned above. In place of a back vent, it may have two side vents. Beware of "fanciness." It means your going theatrical. Clothes are made for the man . . . not to mock the man.

(Note: The editor of this column will be happy to advise you where you can obtain any of the merchandise mentioned in this column if you will address him in care of The Washington Post.)

Next Saturday, the editor will discuss smooth fabrics, and the dress-business suit in detail, giving the authentic picture for Washington together with a list of pitfalls to avoid.

Half-Sized Hot Dog Launches Paris Fad

Serving "Puppies" Smart From 5 to 7 o'Clock.

Baby hot dogs, just half the size of ordinary hot dogs, have recently invaded the ritzy hotels of Paris, even the Hotel Ritz itself.

These hot dogs, sometimes called puppies, are served between diminutive buns between 5 and 7 o'clock. Mustard is available, and the consumer drinks whatever he likes.

While hot dogs have long been known in France, they have never been so popular as in America. But now they are available in hundreds of cafes. Attractive posters in English, French and German invite the passer-by to eat the baby hot dogs at 2 francs to 50 centimes a pair.

Women Lose Army Jobs; Failed to Keep Secrets

Women can not keep secrets, says Gen. Chi-Tang, commander of the First Group Army Corps in Kwantung Province. And for that reason he has ordered that all women already on the pay rolls of armies in South China be discharged at the earliest opportunity.

Women have long been employed by Chinese armies for intelligence work, clerical work and in other capacities. But the General will have no more of them.

"They can't keep military secrets," is the General's only explanation.

"Personality Girls" Must Be Original

A sense of fairness, originality, liveliness and a pleasant voice are the characteristics of what is popularly called a girl "of great personality," heard the American Psychological Association at their recent meeting at Columbia University.

Dr. Edwin G. Fleming, who made the report, did his research by finding high school girls regarded as "personalities" by their schoolmates. He then had each girl rated by three or more of her teachers for possession or absence of standard qualities identified in the latest character inventories devised by psychologists. All the girls possessed the four qualities Dr. Fleming decided were the fundamentals of personality.

He also named eight "personality types": the entertaining, the brilliant, the culture-talented, the just, the pretty, the good fellow, the good neighbor and the diplomat.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion, without being foppish, is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette of conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the when, what and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Shirts and Ties.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: What are some good shirt and tie combilnations to go with a greyish green single breasted suit? J. C.

SIR: Depends on your own coloring. However, tan shirt, white collar and solid plum tie; blue ground British stripe shirt with tannish stripes and green, brown and blue spittalsfield pattern tie or white shirt with knitted tie of dull wine and brown. Keep to wines, plums and tannish cast for contrast, green, grays and blues for harmony.

Snap Brim Preferred.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Is it correct to wear a derby hat with a belted polo coat? T. McM.

SIR: Since the polo is a sport coat suggest you wear a snap brim felt or tweedy mixture hat. A Tyrolean type looks well on some types, but avoid derbies and other dress type hats with polo coats.

White Spats Only.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Is it correct to wear spats with formal clothes? TWENTY.

PILLAR TO POST

Bride of Harry Bingham Minds Him Without a Murmur—or Did!

THE romance of Harry Bingham, son of the former Senator, and Miss Rose Morrison, niece of Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, may have set a bad precedent when they met in London last summer. As third secretary of the American embassy, it was Mr. Bingham's duty to tell Miss Morrison what to do when she was presented at court. They are going to be married tomorrow at Waycross, Ga., and it could not be learned whether the word "obey" was going to be used in the service. Nevertheless, the circumstance of their first meeting might indicate that Harry would be telling his bride what to do ever after.

* * * *

This reputation for "telling 'em what to do" has been bestowed upon all the young secretaries in the past who have had to give a little talk at a get-together tea at the embassy just before the presentation at court takes place. The girls listen very attentively, and take it as seriously as "though they were about to get a letter for football," one of the diplomats observed.

* * * *

Their mothers take it even more seriously. Picture Harry Bingham, Yale's star all-around athlete, getting up to tell the girls that their trains must be not more nor less than 18 inches long, that they must wear ostrich tips in their hair, long white gloves, and by no means will they be allowed to carry handbags of any kind. This last rule, prescribed and supervised by the court chamberlain, means that if their noses become shinny after they enter the throne room nature will have to take its course because no compacts, lipsticks or rouge can be smuggled in.

Smugglers, Outside!

Woe to the girl or woman who does not follow these regulations, for the court dignitaries are on hand to see that they are carried out to the letter. A number have been barred even after they have surmounted all the hurdles and reached the inner door of the Court of St. James.

* * * *

Evidently Harry Bingham handled his difficult and thankless job of steering the American women who wished to be presented through all the necessary channels very well, for he certainly made a pleasing impression upon Miss Morrison, who had accompanied her aunt to London. It was a swift-moving romance, for she was not in the British capital long. Soon after she returned to this country he followed her and his father was very much surprised to receive a telegram from New York apprising him of his son's presence.

* * * *

Miss Morrison is tall and willowy, with lovely dark eyes and golden brown hair. Several artists who have painted her pronounced her a beauty. She is from a very distinguished old family of South Carolina and is eligible to the Society of Colonial Governors. One of her ancestors was sent to govern by the King of England. Some of her ancestors were Huguenots.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF September 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

Guard against dilatory tactics upsetting your plans on thisdate. upsetting your plans on this date. important matter may cause a disarrangement in your time that might prove difficult to make up. There may be an influence at work that may produce a state of inaction if you do not counteract it by energetic activity. An amount of definiteness should be back of your planning on this date. A person may try to have you make an admission regarding a personal matter that later on he might use unfairly, so be careful how you answer questions involving private affairs. This day should prove auspicious for excursions by land or water. Light-fingered gentry may be very active plying their trade, so exercise care with voluable persons. Care should be exercised in extending and accepting invitations of a social nature, for unless discrimination is used in both, an undesirable mix-up with uncongenial people is possible to result. Married and engaged couples will be wise to avoid inviting Old Man Jealousy to visit them on this date. Circumspection in conduct is a preventive for this evil. If in love, a demonstration of your feelings, through some special little attention, might prove advantageous.

If a woman and September 8 is your natal day, soft words, love expressed and the developing of a sympathetic understanding of the problems of others, may prove stepping stones to greater happiness than you have yet experienced.

The child born on September 8, as a general thing, when it reaches its teens, may develop a sarcastic streak and fiery temper, but both can be easily corrected.

If a man and born on September 8 you may be too readily influenced by environment and people for your own good. Make up your mind not to be and the progress which may result from this effort may surprise you. Eventually you may make a good deal of money. Married life should appeal to you and bring happiness into your life.

Fall's Advent Changes Role For Perfumes

Richer Scent Than Light Summer Fragrances Needed Now.

By Frances Mangum.

Satins, woolens, furs are calling now for a heavier, richer perfume than the sweet and light summer scents.

When flower gardens were in bloom and their fragrance filled the air, women wanted a subtle perfume. Hot, humid weather made any other kind oppressive. But now with winter advancing, and clothes of heavy luxurious fabrics being worn, perfumes must be chosen in accordance.

Women select perfumes with different ends in view. Some choose scent which they make a part of their personality by consistent usage. Others choose a perfume to suit their costumes, their mood, or the occasion. There are those who prefer two perfumes, one for winter, and one for summer.

Bountiful Variety.

The perfume manufacturers of both Europe and America have provided a bountiful store for selection. They offer a pure flower scent such as lilac, gardenia, or jasmine to those who prefer a simple yet distinguished sweetness. There are blends, bouquet, a spicy musk, or woodsy fragrance for those who seek a scent with a hint of mystery.

From all this variety it is possible to select a faint odor for morning, a little heavier one for afternoon, and a rich perfume for evening. There is even one which is the ideal for sportswear as it suggests the fragrance of the woods in the early morning.

Half the charm of perfume lies in the way it is applied. Too much of any scent is always bad. This is something all perfume lovers must remember.

Perfuming the Hair.

They accustom themselves to a fragrance, and are likely to err by putting on too much at once. They may not be able to tell this themselves, but others can who must endure the stifling sweetness.

If one's perfume bottle has the long glass stopper it is best to apply a drop behind the ears or at the back of the neck, and on either hand. If an atomizer is used, a spray over the hair and on either shoulder should be just right.

A perfumer suggests spraying a bit on the hairbrush and then brushing this through the hair.

1. Day-bo-SHAY—a drunkard.
2. FOR-ay—to plunder or ravage.
3. Lo-RET. A woman of questionable character.
4. MAK-ron. A mark over a vowel to indicate it is long.
5. PAR-ve-new. One raised by the acquisition of wealth beyond his place in society.

Many Lipsticks at Once.

One of the newest and most effective tricks in make-up is the use of several shades of lipstick at once. If the lips are too thin, an application of darker rouge around the edges and lighter in the center produces the illusion of a full mouth. Different effects may be achieved, depending on how the lipsticks are wielded.

Culbertson on Bridge

Deceptive Tactics.

A favorite trick which has existed ever since the day, almost 40 years ago, when Bridge Whist first became a factor in the history of the Whist family, and yet has lost little of either its popularity or effectiveness, sometimes makes it possible for a Declarer to slip through a trick with a singleton King. The play is very crude and very obvious, yet there are several million Bridge players who can still be depended upon to fall for it constantly.

It is well known that when Declarer leads from Dummy toward an assumed King-Jack combination or its equivalent in his own hand, Second Hand, if he holds the Ace, should play low. His hope is that Declarer, who can win a trick with the King if the Ace is on his right, or establish his King for the next round by finessing the Jack if the Queen is on his right, will make the wrong guess. The purpose of Declarer must therefore be, when his King is unguarded, to create the impression that he plans to finesse. When the cards are placed as follows, he may gain the trick:

Dummy
♡ J 10 6 3
♡ Q 9 5 2 — ♡ A 8 7 4
Declarer
♡ K

Assuming that some other suit is trump, South could lead from Dummy, not a small heart, but the Jack. East is as likely as not to play low, hoping that South will let the Jack go through to West's Queen. Even when Dummy does not hold the Ten, the Jack should still be led, at times with gratifying results. Inasmuch as North must be prepared to lose a trick in any case unless some such extraordinary measures as these prove successful, it costs nothing to try.

Another means of avoiding a losing finesse is still more likely to succeed, because the defensive player whom Declarer is trying to deceive has no accurate means of telling just what sort of mistake the Declarer hopes to lure him into making.

East, Dealer
North-South vulnerable

	♠ A Q 8 2 ♡ 10 8 6 4 ◇ A 8 2 ♣ Q 10
♠ 6 4 3 ♡ 9 ◇ J 7 6 5 4 ♣ 8 7 3 2	W E S	♠ K 10 9 5 ♡ A 3 ◇ K Q 10 ♣ K J 9 4
	♠ J 7 ♡ K Q J 7 5 2 ◇ 9 3 ♣ A 6 5

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♣	1♡	Pass	3♡
Pass	4♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

After South becomes Declarer at four hearts, West opens the club deuce, the suit East bid. South plays Dummy's Ten, East plays the Jack and South the Ace. In planning his play, South can see that one heart trick, one club trick and one diamond trick must be lost and that he has a further probable loser in spades. This last may be eliminated by means of a finesse, in which case the contract will be made. But because of East's bid, South assumes that the finesse will lose, and that he will be set. There is a way of avoiding the losing spade finesse, however, by turning it into a trap into which East might well fall. The seven of spades is led to Dummy's Ace and the deuce of spades returned. Now East has no reasonable basis by which to decide on the correct play. He may know what South is doing, but South's play would have been proper in either of two cases. If South had a singleton spade and East plays the King, South can ruff and obtain a discard for a losing diamond on Dummy's spade Queen. If South holds the spade Jack, failure by East to play his King will cost him a trick. South by this means turns a losing finesse into a situation which has as good a chance of succeeding as of failing.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: When a woman is burdened down with the care of three little children, all her housework and washing, no help of any kind, and no money to spend on clothes, how can she expect to hold her husband's love? I know my husband is losing, if he hasn't already, lost his affection for me.

* * * *

He never wants to stay home of an evening, never asks me to go out with him, but, of course, I couldn't go if he did, since there's nobody to stay with the children. He's always off to a bowling alley or a pool hall or to the moving pictures, just to clear out until things get quiet, he says.

* * * *

But he didn't used to be like that. I have a great fear he may be interested in some other woman. He's the only well dressed member of the family. He has to keep up appearances in his work, and whenever there's a cent to spare over and above, it goes for things the children need.

Please, what can a woman do under such circumstances?

EDNA L.

Take Your Just Share.

DEAR EDNA L.: Yours is the old story of self-sacrifice and self-denial carried to the point where it defeats its purpose. I'm sure everything you've done has been directed toward keeping your home together, easing your husband's burden as a wage earner and proving yourself an indefatigable and unselfish helpmeet and parent.

* * * *

But you've gone at it the wrong way. No purpose is ever served by letting one's self down. You are entitled to the same consideration and the same portion that other members of the family expect and receive.

Moreover, the average man is happier—whether he realizes it or not—going shabby in the service of a cheerful, rested, attractively dressed wife who keeps his home in pleasant order than he is with a wife whose neglected attire, tired face and endless preoccupation with work never quite finished, budget never quite balanced and children whose wants and needs are never quite met constitute a constant reminder of his failure in the role of provider, and protector and drive him in sheer desperation into the streets in search of companionship, forgetfulness and salve for his injured ego.

* * * *

Many a man with no particular qualifications for success has doggedly climbed the ladder of financial security and come to rest at the top, simply because some serene and normally selfish woman expected and required as much of him.

Since your budget probably doesn't balance anyway, I suggest you list yourself as one very important item on it. Insist on having the heavier laundry and cleaning work done. Get yourself some clothes. Have a girl in to stay with the children on occasional evenings, and, if you don't do anything else—sit down and rest, or read, or think, or manicure your nails and cream your face and study new ways of doing your hair.

Don't make it necessary for your husband to apologize for your appearance and your weariness. Far better for the preservation of his interest that he should apologize for his own. It may seem a harsh alternative, but it's sound. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Scanties Become Moral, Then Briefly Decorative

From the Floppy Unappealing Panties of the Late 1800's, They Evolve by a Series of Revolutions Into Their Present Alluring State.

Scanties grow moral, grow voluminous, then hit their alluring hey-day in this, the last of a series of articles on these important feminine accessories.

By Irene Hasbrook.

"I NEVER suspected she was that kind of girl. She wears drawers!"

"I never suspected she was that kind of girl. She doesn't wear drawers!"

The first might have been exclaimed, and undoubtedly was, in 1850. The second, likewise, somewhere around the 1870's. So do fashions in morals change and styles of women's dress.

When scanties appeared women may have longed secretly for the old code, which decreed no drawers for the respectable, for this new style was hardly comfortable. Drawers as they wore them then did not caress the figure as today's advertising copy says they should.

They Did Not Flatter.

They were stiff. They were stiff enough to begin with and when the washwoman had finished with them they were starched to a painful degree. The fashionables of the late 1800's had plenty of freedom of movement as far as scanties were concerned, for they were quite loose and uncumbersome. But sudden contact with their uncompromising material, scratchy with starch, is said to have produced no desire to move freely.

Scanties were most unscant then. Much material went into the making of their loose floppiness which descended as far as the knees, usually to a ruffle. With all this fabric to work with, designers (sewing women who "came in") still achieved no graceful lines. In fact, drawers were about the most undecorative and even ludicrous articles of clothing women had ever conjured up for themselves. The excess of modesty in this period when high respectability was the prime aim is better understood when one considers the drab aspect of feminine underthings.

A Dreary Style.

Panties remained cast in this dismal mold on into the early twentieth century. At least panties for regular wear did. Other articles called bloomers became fashionable with the athletic girl of the 90's who took her strenuous exercise on a bicycle, probably letting her fiance do all the pedal work. It is from these bloomers that knickers probably evolved for all-around wear.

The beginning of this century was to start a series of rapid revolutions in scanties and in the attitude of the public toward them. The innovation of silk was brought in then; before, silk was thought the underwear property only of ladies a bit too gay. But silk was too great a fashion stride to take so suddenly, and first of all cotton crepe created the sensastion. Fashionables, feeling wicked as they did so, wore sheer cotton for a few years and then were suddenly faced with the more sensuous idea of silk underthings. Again they felt wicked and again they bought.

More revelations as to what naughtiness underwear could descend came out in 1907 when colored underthings appeared. "Nice" girls hadn't worn anything under their dresses but white for so many years that women were astonished and a little worried when pale peach and pink tints came into style. They were worried, but they wore them.

Figures Were Recognized.

Around this time underthings started to come into closer contact with the figures under them. The form-fitting idea was generated by the hobble skirt, that contraption which influenced street cars to the extent of a new lower step, made so women could embark and disembark without splitting their skirts and breaking their necks. The whole fashion silhouette was coming closer to the figures, and underthings were forced to follow.

Then came the war. It turned a mode of life completely inside out; one of its more obvious influences was the change in behavior and dress of women. Freedom became the cry of the war generation—and freedom it received, at least as far as scanties were concerned.

In a few years panties were hard to recognize as offspring of the ponderous drawers. Shorter and shorter, filmier and filmier, more and more decorative they became. There was one more surprise left, though, and that was burst on an unsuspecting feminine world, a little blase by this time, in the form of black scanties. Black scanties! Surely nothing more sinful had ever been conceived by fashion.

But were they worn? Need you ask!

How to Keep Well

Nose Bleed.

The mucous membrane of the upper air passages bleeds easily. Most cases of nose bleed come from the mucous membrane of the septum, which is a thin, flat piece of cartilage and bone that separates the two nostrils. Ordinarily bleeding from the nose must be considered an abnormal process.

We many enumerate briefly some of the causes and their significance. We are familiar with the bleeding that follows blows or injuries to the nose externally and that bring about tears in the mucous membrane. Injuries may occur without external violence. For example, dust particles that lodge along the border of the cartilaginous septum sometimes form crusts, the removal of which is attended with hemorrhage. Sometimes dust particles carrying bacteria may set up local irritation with ulceration and hemorrhage.

Various types of inflammation may so erode the thin mucous membrane that bleeding will follow violent blowing of the nose or sneezing. Occasionally foreign bodies carelessly introduced into the nostrils may cause inflammation and bleeding. Fibrous tumors in the nose and pharynx, in addition to causing mechanical obstruction to the passage of air, frequently give rise to hemorrhage. Nasal polyps rarely bleed. Most malignant growths are richly supplied with blood vessels and bleed easily. Acute infectious diseases, particularly rheumatic fever, typhoid fever, and influenza predispose to bleeding.

Lee Hurd has called attention to the good results that follow the use of strips of fat salt pork in the bleeding nostril. Thin strips may be inserted one after the other until the plug exerts moderate pressure against the bleeding site. The success of this treatment may be due to the high concentration of salt contained in the strips, or to the fact that the pork contains some substance that stimulates the clotting of the blood. Hurd states that pork strips are easy to introduce and are very much more comfortable than the type of packing so frequently employed. The patient may complain at first of the smarting caused by the salt.

In the presence of nasal hemorrhage the patient should sit erect with the head thrown back. This relieves the pressure on the veins of the neck. Now and then bleeding will persist in spite of all that can be done and it will be necessary to secure expert help.

A careful nose specialist can so completely pack the nostrils as to cause sufficient pressure to check the hemorrhage, unless some blood disease complicates the picture. In this event consultation must be secured and occasionally blood transfusion resorted to. The use of calcium salts or some extract from the blood platelets sometimes increases the clotting power of the blood.

Many instances of nose bleed may be prevented by the simple, hygienic precaution of placing each day two or three drops of clear, neutral mineral oil in the nostrils. White vaseline serves the same purpose. This will keep the mucous membrane soft, will prevent the formation of crusts and scabs and hence ulceration. If there is a tendency to repeated nasal hemorrhages a thorough examination made by a competent physician will usually determine the organic cause, if one exists.

Spicy Dishes Crowd Salads Off the Stage

Spanish Store Suggests Answer to Needs of Autumn Menu.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NOW that fall's chilly finger is in the weather pie, housewives are putting by their salad and cold plate recipes and turning their attention to foods warmer and spicier. Numbers of them lament that novelties in food lines are mainly for summer dishes, and now they say they can't think of a thing for varying the menu.

If they visited a novel Spanish store on Seventeenth street their lamentations would change to "oh's" and "ah's" of delight, for here the shelves are lined with hot, highly seasoned foods, which very rarely appear on the American table. There is some Mexican chile, put up in vinegar sauce, as tropical a dish as one could want. Served steaming in an earthenware bowl, it would warm the coldest heart and tempt the most recalcitrant appetite.

There are also some Spanish sausages, strange rough-hewn looking things, cram full of flavor. One customer very aptly remarked, "They may not look very good, but the taste makes up for that!"

Those who like their meats pepped up with a little fiery sauce should purchase a can of mole (pronounced molly). Three portions of hot water or broth to one portion of this turns out a sauce that's fairly kindled.

The proprietor highly recommends some of his South American tea for anything that ails you. He vows and declares that all tea lovers who swear by any other tea but this simply haven't tried it.

Mixed Vegetable Wafers.

Here's a whole meal in one wafer! Or, if not exactly that, the ingredients of a vegetable dinner all neatly done up in a single wafer!

They're called the whole wheat vegetized wafers and they come in a large box that costs only 25 cents. Each wafer contains, besides the whole-wheat mixture, a concentrated form of celery, tomatoes, carrots, spinach and lettuce.

As long as the children must have something to nibble on between meals, why not give them something like this? One or two in the lunch box, and then all they want in the cookie jar, and a child is eating vegetables and not even minding (or knowing).

Maple Pecan Tempters.

Some maple pecan wafers are irresistible tempters to children and adults alike. These have that mellow maple flavor which predominates slightly over the flavor of fresh, rich pecans. By the time the whole concoction has been put out in a crisp wafer form it's enough to tease your appetite no matter how jaded.

Hostesses who have tried these say they are very light and delicious to serve with ice cream for dessert. Others vouch for them at tea time. Late in the afternoon cake really ruins one's yen for dinner, but a light wafer is just right.

Macaroon "Krisps."

Rivals to these in popularity are some macaroon "krisps." Those who like the macaroon flavor will find that these touch the spot! They are nice, too, to serve with ice cream or at tea time, but they're especially nice to keep around to nibble on at any time.

They come in a large tin that keeps them fresh for as long as they last.

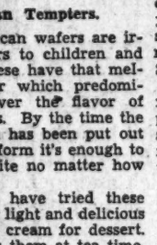
Cup Measuring Set.

If you chance to reconnoiter in the kitchenware department of a downtown store do take time out to see a trifle that every kitchen needs, and yet surprisingly few possess. It's a measuring cup set that includes four sizes, the one-fourth cup, the one-third cup, the one-half cup and the full size cup. All of these have convenient handles with holes to hang them by.

The complete set costs only a quarter.

Help for Novice Cook.

The bride who is still struggling with steaks and learning to cook them neither too little nor too much will find a broilerette a big help. She will also find it a great relief when dish-washing time comes. The labor of cleaning the oven broiler needs no description. This broilerette, however, is as simple to wash as a plate. It has two compartments. The top one is a perforated metal tray that is placed over the main pan. The meat is placed on this and as it cooks the juices go down in the holes to the bottom where they steam up through the meat, enriching its flavors all the while.



Real Southern Biscuits.

Genuine Southern beaten biscuits aren't easy to find, but there is one small shop that carries them all the time. They come wrapped in a cellophane bag, 6 for 15 cents, or they may be bought in bulk.

"These are homemade and handmade and absolutely all they're cracked up to be. Just ask for the Maryland beaten biscuits."

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

WHEN the excitement was over, Deborah had slipped away. Impatiently Bryn waited for her return and then set out to make the rounds of her favorite haunts to find her. He went down the path toward the brook with long, quick steps, and came at last to the solid ring of trees that formed the back of Deborah's most hidden sanctuary.

Bryn rapped lightly on a tree trunk nearby.

"May I come in, Deborah?" he asked.

She dropped her lashes. "If you . . . wish," she said in a low voice.

He squeezed through the opening and came down the slope toward her.

"Haven't you forgiven me?" Bryn asked.

The dark lashes lifted. "Forgiven you?" she repeated. "For what?"

Makes No Difference.

"For not telling you that Grandmother knew! I don't blame you if you haven't. It was what I should have thought of the moment we drove in. I think . . . I thought I had told you."

"You did try to tell me. You said I needn't worry. You said it was all right, and I knew you meant something special. But oh . . . that doesn't matter. It wouldn't have made much difference, even if I had known, because I wouldn't have been sure she could stand it."

Bryn put out a hand and touched a fold of her dress. "Tell me," he begged.

"What do you want me to tell you?"

"Tell me what's troubling you, Deborah. It's all over, now. All the fears and worries are gone, dear."

Bryn moved closer to her. He tried to take her hands, but she pulled them away. "I don't understand," he said miserably. "Oh, tell me, sweetheart. You're tearing me to pieces. What have I done to you? What is making you so unhappy?"

She swallowed. Then "I wish you'd go away," she said under her breath.

"Go away?"

Others Going.

"The others are going today. After dinner. They are going to drive back in the moonlight. You could go with them."

He looked down at Deborah's bent head. "That's final, then?" he asked quietly. She did not answer.

"Sorry," he said after a moment. "I suppose I was a fool to think that you could possibly care about me. You're so exquisite and so fine, and you're not made out of ordinary stuff like the rest of us. I might have known from the beginning that it wasn't any use. I think I did know, Deborah, so you needn't reproach yourself. I've always been scared stiff inside about the whole thing."

She was gazing up at him, still with that anguished look in her eyes. Bryn managed a smile. She held his hand out. "Shake hands?" he inquired. "If you don't mind, Deborah, I think I'll go now instead of waiting until tonight. Perhaps you could . . . perhaps there is something you can tell Grandmother. Tell her the truth, Deborah. She'll understand."

She got to her feet slowly. Her face was as white as chalk. She put her hand in his. "Good-bye," she whispered, and he stood for a moment looking into her eyes, then turned away.

Decision Reversed.

"No," Deborah said clearly. "No. It isn't any use. I can't let you go." She was beside him, her hands on his arms, her face upheld to his. "I can't let you go," she said. "I don't care what you think about me. I don't care if I am only a new kind of toy to you. I don't care if this is only a part of an adventure to you, an adventure that will be over . . . tomorrow, or in just a little while. I don't care about anything, or what happens to me, or even what happens to Grandmother, only I can't let you go away from me. I haven't any pride or any strength left."

Bryn stood, motionless, staring down at her in bewilderment. She gave his arms a little shake. Her face was wet with tears. "Don't you understand?" she cried again. "I . . . I love you."

"Love me?" he repeated incredulously.

She nodded, her lips pressed together, her tears unheeded. One of them splashed on his sweater.

"You mean," Bryn repeated, with dawning understanding, "you mean, you love me?"

She lifted her wet lashes and looked at him. With a little groan he moved his arms at last, and closed them tight around her. He bent his head, and put his lips to her eyelids. He kissed them, and kissed her white forehead, and her soft cheek, and then he bent and kissed the pulsing hollow of her throat.

Believed Pilar.

"Did you believe what that fellow said? I didn't think you even heard."

"Pilar said it too."

"Did you believe Pilar?"

She bit her lip again; her mouth quivered. "Not until I found out who you are. And if you are . . . if you have so much money, you didn't marry me to get paid for it. That wasn't your reason."

"No."

"It must have been what they said it was. You were walking along the wharf, and there I was, frightened and . . . and queer, and dowdy, and not like the beautiful lovely girls you know."

"Not a bit."

"And you saw me, and maybe at first you just helped me the way you help everybody, but afterward . . . that very same afternoon, when I told you about everything, that very afternoon you suggested that I marry you. There . . . there wasn't any reason for it. You said you needed the money, but you didn't. Why did you do it?"

Bryn gathered her closer. Her lips were very near to his. He did not take his eyes from her face. "There wasn't anything else to tell you that would make you marry me, Deborah."

"But that's what I'm talking about, why you married me. That's what I mean. Pilar said it was just another new adventure, that you'd done everything else, and I know you're quick and kind and impulsive. You help everybody. You wanted to help me, I know, and there wasn't any other way, I suppose. So there were two reasons why you might have married me, because it was a new kind of adventure, or because you were anxious to help me and it was the only way you could."

Kiss Was Sweet.

Deborah was listening. Her cheeks were pink, now, and the tears had gone away, although one round cheek was still stained with them.

He put a hand beneath her cheek, and turned her head again. His eyes looked down into hers, and grey clung to violet again, but there was a new expression in both. Then, slowly, he bent his head, and put his lips down to hers, so soft and young and innocent.

When he lifted his head at last she struggled up in his arms, and sat upright, facing him. "Is that the way you kiss people when you love them?" she whispered.

"Just you, Deborah."

She slipped off his knees and curled herself in the grass beside him. Her face was grave, thoughtful, wondering.

He took her hands, those two small white hands with their tapering fingers and rosy nails. He lifted them to his lips.

"Deborah," he said gently, "I love you. You're the only girl in the world, as far as I'm concerned. I think you're everything that's wonderful and sweet and lovely, and if you had sent me away there wouldn't have been anything that I cared about any longer. Deborah . . . will you be my wife?

Had Another Ring.

She caught her breath. She drew her hands away from him and touched her wedding ring. He shook his head.

"That doesn't mean very much," he said. "All it means is that if the time ever comes when you really want to be my wife, we won't have to go through another ceremony. What I'm asking now is whether or not you think some time you might love me enough really to be my wife."

He reached into his watch pocket and drew out a small square box of beaten gold. He put the box on her knee, and opened it.

It was a ring box; inside, in the velvet padding, were spaces for two rings; one of them was occupied. Bryn drew out the ring lying there. He lifted Deborah's hand, and slowly, his eyes upon it, drew off her wedding ring. She gave a little gasp when he took it off and slipped it into the box, but said nothing. He slipped the new ring on the finger where the wedding ring had been, lifted the hand and put it to his lips. "That's your engagement ring, dear," he said.

Was His Mother's.

Deborah looked down at it. It was a great gleaming pearl, flushed the palest rose, and set exquisitely in thin gold filigree. "It's . . . lovely," she breathed.

"It was my mother's."

"Why did you take off my wedding ring?"

"My dear child, you can't have a wedding ring before an engagement ring. It isn't done. As you wore it, your wedding ring wasn't a wedding ring. It would be . . . different now," Bryn replied. He stood up and lifted her to her feet. "We've started over again at the beginning," he said. "You've known me nearly six weeks, now. That's pretty good going, to be engaged to a man you've only known that long. It's rather too soon to marry him, I think. You want to be careful about these things, Deborah . . . you know the old saying: Marry in haste and repent at leisure."

"I think I would like to wear my wedding ring, too. I've . . . I'm used to it now. It's the first time it's ever been off my finger."

"Well, I don't think you'd better wear it," Bryn said hastily. He dropped the box, with the ring inside it, back into his pocket.

Deborah looked up at him.

Just Engaged.

"When you want your wedding ring," Bryn went on carefully, lifting a curl on her temple, "when your're sure of me, and positive that you're making no mistake, and when you get to know that you feel about me the way I feel about you—as nearly as you can, of course . . . and can't live without me, I'll be very glad to put it back on your finger. As far as I'm concerned, Deborah, I never did approve of long engagements."

Immediately after dinner, Tubby and Madeline and Simon and Sally were going back to San Francisco in Tubby's car, to drive out to the coast and follow along the ocean by moonlight. They were all sorry to go, but the best of friends must part some time, as Tubby put it with such originality. But, of course, they would meet again soon. This was July, and Bryn and Deborah and Grandmother would certainly be coming down to San Francisco to spend the winter in the city.

"Not a chance," Bryn said to that. "We're going to spend the winter right here unless I am moved by feminine tears to reconsider. We are going to get a radio and two very fat kittens . . . if you happen to notice any, Tubby, you might mail us a couple . . . and we are going to sit in front of an open fire of logs, and have soft music from the radio, and Deborah is going to knit."

Time to Go.

It was time at last to say good-by. Sally and Madeline got into knitted dresses and Simon and Tubby into knickerbockers, and their bags were put into the car, and Grandmother had insisted on having Gary pack a basket of fruit for them and at last they were gone.

The night was very still. The moon was round and full, and the world was hung with a silver veil. Up on the hill a bird sang a low thrilling song; the brook purled contentedly over its stones, and gurgled through the shallows.

Nice to Be Alone.

"I loved them all," Grandmother said dreamily. "But it is delightful to be alone again, my dears."

Bryn, sitting beside Deborah's low chair, was holding her hand. He lifted it shamelessly to his lips.

"Me, too, Grandmother," he said.

"I am very happy," Grandmother went on, half to herself. "Life seems very beautiful. When my beloved Anne was taken from me I felt that life was ugly, and terrifying, a thing of darkness and moving shadows. Now that is all forgotten, and I know that I was wrong. There are shadows, but they pass with the sun. When I look ahead," she finished, "I see nothing but joy and peace and deep content." She rose. "I am tired tonight," she decided. "I was up very early, for me, and it has been an exciting day. Lend me your arm, my boy, and I will go up to bed. Good-night, Deborah, my darling."

"Good-night, Grandmother," Deborah said, and kissed the wrinkled cheek tenderly.

"Tell Me Again."

Deborah, when they had gone, sat down again in a low chair near the door, and looked across at the moon. It poured down over her with clear silver brilliance. She looked up at it and smiled, waiting for Bryn to come down to her again. He came, rather slowly, it seemed to her. Tall and slim in his black dinner clothes, he stepped out through the door and stood before her. She rose to meet him; he took her hands and held them at his breast. "I was almost afraid to come back," he said. "I can't believe that you're real, and that you love me, and that we're here together, alone. Tell me again, Deborah."

She told him again, and they sat together in the moonlight and the still summer air, alone together in a great shining beautiful world. And when Deborah looked at him she knew that she loved him for always, and when he spoke his voice rang in her heart.

Not Engaged Long.

He bent and kissed her white shoulder.

"Good-night," he said, and went toward his own door. Deborah stood where he had left her, head bent, in the flood of moonlight pouring through the open window. She twisted the pearl on her finger. She slipped it off, and held it in her hand.

Bryn came out in a moment, with some clothes hanging over his arm. He started across the room toward the hall. Deborah looked up. "Where are you going?" she asked in her soft voice.

"I'm . . . moving down the hall," he told her. "Back to my own room."

"Why?"

He came back to her. He dropped the clothes over a chair arm and put his arms about her again. "Don't make it harder for me, darling," he begged. "I've got to go. I couldn't say he so near to you now."

"Why?"

"Oh, Deborah!"

"I don't know why," she said. "Simon stays with Sally. Always. Doesn't he?"

"Yes, but . . ."

She stood on tiptoe and put her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Bryn, you are a big silly," she said contentedly. She kissed the cleft in his chin, and put her palm against his cheek. "I thought you didn't approve of long engagements?"

Oyster Loaf Recipe Wins Weekly Prize

Mrs. Susan Morton Takes First Award in Post's Competition.

MANY unusual and delicious oyster recipes were received from all sections of the country for competition in last week's recipe contest.

The first prize, $3, was awarded to Mrs. Susan Morton, of Haymarket, Va., for a most unusual dish, New York Oyster Loaf.

Second prize, $2, was won by Mrs. Anna B. Long, of 127 Thirteenth street northeast for her Friday casserole dish; and third prize, $1, by Mrs. S. M. Rossen, of 3304 Warder street northwest, for the delicious brown fricassee recipe.

Honorable mention is awarded to Miss Annie M. O'Brien, of 2216 Wyoming avenue northwest; Miss Edna Zemer, of 1940 Calvert street northwest, and Mrs. Cleo Busley, of 11 Second street northeast.

The first and second prize winning recipes follow. The third will be printed on Monday.

New York Oyster Loaf.

One loaf stale bread, three tablespoons butter or substitute, one quart milk, flour, one pint oysters, pepper and salt to taste.

Cut the top from the bread and remove all the soft crumbs. Break them up very fine and fry until a light brown in the butter. In the meantime, heat the milk, reserving one-half a cup. When it reaches the boiling point, add the flour, mixed with the cold milk, until smooth, seasoning and the fried crumbs.

Put a layer of this mixture in the bread shell, then a layer of oysters, and so on until it is filled. Fasten the top of the loaf with toothpicks; butter the top and bake in a slow oven 40 minutes.

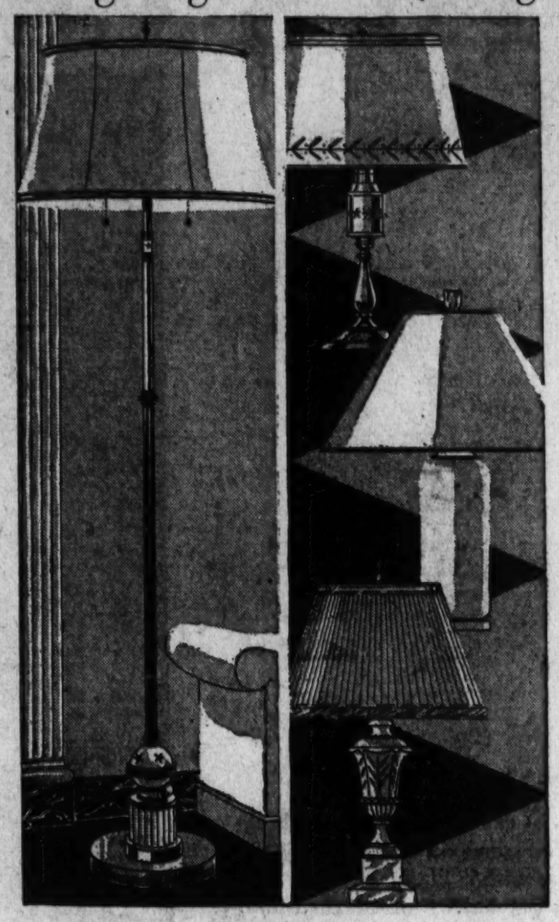
Two tablespoons each of finely chooped celery and green pepper can be added to the filling if desired.

Friday Casserole.

One quart oysters, 2 cups celery, 2 cups of cream sauce, 2 tablespoons chile sauce, 1 tablespoon parsley or green pepper, buttered crumbs.

Drain the oysters and see that they are free from tiny pieces of shell. Use one cup of the oyster liquor and one cup of milk for the cream sauce. Add the chile sauce and parsley to the cream sauce. Use the outer coarse pieces of celery, cut in inch lengths and cook in a very little water until tender. Arrange the celery, oysters and cream sauce in alternate layers in a buttered casserole. Cover with the crumbs and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

New Lamps Embody Efficiency In Lighting Plus Good Design



By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Days are getting shorter and evenings longer. (And folk in sections where daylight saving is in effect are going to realize that with a bang not very long hence.) Which makes it a logical time to talk about fashions in the lamps which are being lighted earlier and earlier.

Another fine fashion in lamps, one which is growing more and more popular every day, is that of harmonizing the lamp with the kind of room it is to be used in.

Table lamps, too, recognize the growing importance of this classic fashion. And there are many which utilize the well-known column and urn motifs. An alabaster urn lamp is sketched at the center right.

Going to the other extreme from modern, the sketch at the top right shows a modern copy in brass of an old New England pewter candle lamp (which, of course, did not burn electricity!). It is designed for a colonial interior.

We have information on lighting for you . . . in a new leaflet . . . illustrated, too, to show the proper placing of lamps. The filled-in coupon and requested inclosures will bring it to you.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

WE ALL know the 4-year-old who makes himself obnoxious by slapping, tickling and hair-pulling. How did he get that way? Probably because he was applauded for similar behavior when he was 2.

The baby inadvertently slaps father, and the family is delighted with the cute trick. "Hit him again," cheers small brother, and slapping soon becomes a favorite pastime.

When he is a year older, he retains the habit. It is no longer funny, for now he slaps hard enough to hurt, and he makes a nuisance of himself with his persistence.

The solution is simple; don't let him start these annoying traits. This does not mean that the family is to be denied the pleasure of enjoying baby's cute tricks. It is just as cunning to see him stroke father's cheek and say, "Nice Daddy." Teach him to stroke and pat instead of hit. Everyone will be happier all around and he will be saved a lot of grief when he meets his first kitten if he strokes it gently instead of pulling its tail.

Pickle Recipes Called in Post's Next Contest

Now is the time to stock up the pantry shelves for the winter months with jars full of good things—especially pickles.

Next week's Post contest will have as its subject anything in pickle form, fruits or vegetables.

There are no formal rules to make this contest difficult. Simply write out the recipe and mail it in time to reach this office by Thursday morning.

Address the letter to Susan Mills in care of The Washington Post, and watch for next Saturday's Post for announcement of the winners.

American Buyers Favor Molyneux First in Paris

The house of Molyneux is the most popular dressmaking establishment with American buyers this year. This establishment obtained nearly 20 per cent of the business during the recent Paris openings. Judging from the sales, the next in line were Vionneet, Schiaparelli, Lelong, Mainbocher, Chanel and Lanvin.

French dressmakers did more business this year than they expected; the orders were only slightly below those of last year.

Fight Facing Delay Until Tuesday

Ross - McLarnin Battle Set for Tonight Unless Rain Intervenes.

Foes to Weigh In Again; Challenger Worries; Champion Fit.

By Edward J. Neil.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—The weather man tossed a beautiful feint in the form of sunshine at Jimmy McLarnin and Barney Ross today, then crossed them quickly with a neat downpour that forced the second straight postponement of their return duel for the welterweight championship in Madison Square Garden's big bowl on Long Island.

Barring continued opposition from the man who pulls the strings on the water buckets, the show will try to go on again tomorrow night, and if that's not possible, a fresh start will be made next Tuesday night.

Complications Bob Up.

All sorts of complications bobbed up meanwhile. Now McLarnin, who weighed 145¾ pounds yesterday at the official scaling, and Ross, who nudged an even 140, will have to do it again tomorrow afternoon on the New York State Athletic Commission scales.

In order to make sure of keeping at or under the 147-pound class limit, McLarnin was out tonight on a 7-mile jog around the reservoir in Central Park. Ross, meanwhile, took an hour's limebring up workout at Stillman's Gymnasium. Ross, of course, will have no worries about the class limit, but McLarnin may have not a little trouble in cutting himself down to it again.

Storm Is Due.

More troublesome than this even was the threat of a southern storm sweeping up this way and due here tomorrow. If the fight must go over into next week, Monday night is out because Ross, an orthodox Jew, will be celebrating Rosh Hashana that day.

Of the two, Ross seems least affected by the postponements. He is carefree and debonair by nature and will put on little weight, while McLarnin, more of a recluse, is more inclined to worry. Ross spent the day striving to win $20 from his managers at pinochle, while McLarnin remained in seclusion at his hotel. The last time Jimmy had an outdoor fight postponed on him here, he gave one of the poorest displays of his career trying to lift the lightweight title from Sammy Mandell in 1927.

$130,000 Now in Till.

With $130,000 in cash in the box offices, the show appeared to be suffering no financial blight due to the delays, and bright weather tomorrow, an unusual day for a fight, was expected to send the gate receipts up around $175,000, somewhat under the receipts for the first engagement here in May.

There was little wagering on the match and odds on Ross held firm at 7 to 5.

Fritzi Stifel Winner In West Virginia Golf

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Fritzi Stifel, seven times West Virginia's women's golf champion, defeated Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., today to win the Mason and Dixon golf championship. Shooting a consistent game, Miss Stifel overwhelmed her opponent, 11 and 10, in the 36-hole final-round match over the "Old White" course.

Overlin and Remus Clash for Navy Title

By Bill McCormick
(Post Staff Correspondent).

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—With a weather eye cocked toward the weeping heavens, some 45,000 gobs from the Pacific fleet and those of the Atlantic fleet fortunate enough to be here are standing by for the Ken Overlin-Frankie Remus ten-rounder for the middleweight boxing championship of the Navy, which will grace Bain Field tomorrow night—if Jupe Pluve dries his tears.

Rain tomorrow night may delay the important proceedings for one week, as the Pacific fleet has some other important proceedings on hand in the Atlantic Ocean next week from which they will not return until next Friday. It is possible that Remus may be excused for the shore engagement with Overlin, but it is hardly likely that he or the promoters would care to hold the fight without the moral and financial support of his ship and fleet mates.

Remus to Be Ready.

Wild rumors to the effect that Remus was overweight and that a substitute would make passes by proxy against Overlin were rife today. Their rifeness was allayed when it was learned definitely that the emissary from the U. S. S. Tennessee would be on hand tomorrow at 2 p. m., prepared to weigh not

Cubs' Warneke Beats Giants Sixth Time

Turns In 20th Victory of Season as Hubbell Is Charged With Loss.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—Lonnie Warneke, who has halted the Giants so often this season that it's almost become a habit, turned the trick today for the sixth time in seven attempts, and the Cubs won the third game of the series, 4 to 2.

The victory didn't help Chicago's waning pennant hopes to any great extent, as they had lost the first two games and were still eight games behind the pace setters after today's contest. As the St. Louis Cardinals were idle at Brooklyn, New York's margin was reduced to 6½ games.

Rain, which fell through the greater part of the game, didn't seem to hamper Warneke's effectiveness as he won his twentieth victory of the season. He yielded nine hits, most of them in the late innings, but was able to bear down in the tight spots, and he walked only one

Hubbell Is Beaten.

Carl Hubbell, also seeking his twentieth victory, started for the Giants, and met his downfall through Gabby Hartnett's nineteenth home run of the season. That blow was the third and last hit Hubbell gave, but it followed a single by Riggs Stephenson in the fifth and gave the Cubs a 2-to-0 lead. Hubbell was removed for a pinch hitter in that same inning, when an error and a single put two runners on base, but Frank O'Doul, who was chosen for the job, fouled out. Johnny Salveson finished on the slab.

Dykes' Double In 9th Beats Yankees

Gomez's Streak Ends at 10 in Row as White Sox Cop 6-5 Verdict.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP).—The last-place White Sox injected themselves into the American League pennant race far enough to deprive the New York Yankees of a big chance to gain on Detroit's league leaders. The Sox pulled out a 6-to-5 victory over the Yanks in the ninth inning when Manager Jimmy Dykes doubled to bring home Luke Appling from first.

As Detroit lost a double-header, the Yanks picked up a half game. Had they won, it could have been 1½, and they would have been only four behind.

Gomez's Streak Ends.

Lefty Gomez, who took the slab in the eighth, was the victim of Dykes' blow and met the end of a ten-game winning streak.

Aided by Lou Gehrig's forty-third homer, the Yanks picked up a 4-1 lead in five innings, only to fall behind when Chicago drove Jim Deshong out and hammered Johnny Murphy for three runs in the seventh. New York tied it up again in the eighth.

Legal Booking, Lottery Urged In Maryland

Grand Jury Recommends Approval Under Supervision of State.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Legalization of race bets by bookmakers in Maryland and legislative approval of a State lottery for raising funds for the relief of the unemployed was urged today by the retiring grand jury in its report to the bench.

"The gambling instinct is apparently inherent in the average American," the grand jury's report said, and it urged that the State lottery and legalized bookmaking be approved and so operated "that the normal gambling urge may be reasonably satisfied."

State Supervision Urged.

It was urged that both the lottery and race horse betting be taken over wholly by the State and operated "under conditions susceptible to honest and responsible management, with the tariff accruing to the State for the relief of suffering and the furtherance of public welfare."

During the past year the establishment of a State lottery has been repeatedly urged by various leading citizens of Maryland, with E. Lester Muller, president of the city council of Baltimore, as the most active sponsor of the plan. The proposals have been that the State lottery be modeled after the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

Brunswick Conquers Middletown by 5 to 3

Brunswick, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Brunswick defeated Middletown in a county league game before a large crowd at Scheer Stadium, 5 to 3. The curtain will fall on the season Saturday when Brunswick meets Union Bridge. If Brunswick wins the county championship will go to Frederick by a half game. In the event Union Bridge wins the latter and Frederick will finish on even terms and an extra series of three games will be necessary to determine the county title.

Annefield Cup Races Are Slated on Oct. 31

Berryville, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—The Annefield Cup races, Virginia's rival to the Maryland Cup races, will be run at Annefield, home of William Bell Watkins, near here, on October 31.

Three events, with the possibility of a fourth, will constitute the afternoon's card. Events include the eighth running of the Kentmere Steeplechase, 2 miles over brush, for 4-year-olds and upward; the ninth annual Old Dominion Cup, 1¾-mile flat course, for 3-year-olds and upward; and the Annefield Cup race, 3½ miles over fair hunting jumps, for 4-year-olds and upward. If sufficient entries are received there also will be a maiden timber race of 2½ miles.

Ryan Forces Shields to Five Sets

Unranked Player Wins Two of First Three in U. S. Title Tourney.

Allison Also Forced to Extend Self to Score Over McDiarmid.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—America's preferred tennis stock—Frank X. Shields and Wilmer Allison—took a big drop and then rallied strong at the finish today as the first and second nationally ranked stars fought great uphill fourth-round battles to keep their places in the fifty-third men's National singles championship.

Shields was extended to five sets before overhauling left-handed Robert Ryan, an unranked performer from Signal Mountain, Tenn., 9—7, 3—6, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2, while Allison recovered after the first set to eliminate John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, Tex., 3—6, 6—2, 10—8, 7—5.

Berry Also Advances.

Four other players joined Shields and Allison in advancing to the quarter-final round. They were Fred Perry, the British holder of the title; Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles; Clifford Sutter, of New York, and Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York.

Perry squelched Edward F. Feiblemman, of New York, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2; Stoefen eliminated John W. Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., 6—3, 6—4, 6—4; Sutter conquered Berkeley Bell, of New York, 6—3, 7—5, 6—4, and Wood defeated Marcel Rainville, veteran Canadian Davis Cup player, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4.

Roderic Menzel, the giant Czechoslovakian, defeated Gregory S. Mangin, the little Newark, N. J., star, 8—6, 4—6, 3—6, 8—6, 6—3, and Donald Budge, promising Davis Cup prospect from Oakland, Calif., registered an upset in his elimination of Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—8, 6—3.

Allison Plays Stoefen Today.

Both matches were carry-overs from yesterday's uncompleted third-round program. As the result of the day's play, two quarterfinal matches will be played tomorrow with Allison meeting Stoefen and Perry encountering Sutter.

The balance of the program will be made up of the fourth-round matches between Budge and Vernon G. Kirby, of South Africa, and Frankie Parker, the Lawrenceville, N. J., schoolboy sensation, and Menzel. The remaining six quarter-final matches will be played on Sunday.

New Windsor Winner Over Thurmont, 9 to 6

New Windsor, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—New Windsor eliminated Thurmont as a pennant contender in the final game of the county league season, 9 to 6. Thurmont outhit the winners almost 2 to 1, but errors proved costly to the Mountaineers' game.

Crowder Bows in Second After Johnson Hits His 30th Clout.

DETROIT, Sept. 7 (AP).—Aided by Jimmie Foxx's forty-first home run of the season and Bob Johnson's thirtieth, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the league-leading Tigers in both games of a double-header today. The scores of the two games were identical, 5 to 4.

It was the first time this season Detroit had lost both games of a bargain bill, but the damage to the Tigers' pennant chances was slight. As the second-place Yankees lost to Chicago, they gained only a half-game, remaining five behind Detroit.

Bridges Is Routed.

Foxx's blow was the clinching hit of the first game. It came in the third inning and drove Tommy Bridges to the showers after he had been nicked for three scores in the second. Bing Miller provided what proved to be the winning run when he rapped Luke Hamlin for a homer in the seventh. The Tigers came back to drive Roy Mahaffey to cover with a three-run burst in the ninth, but Bill Dietrich stopped them short of a tie.

Joe Cascarella outlasted three Detroit hurlers in the afterpiece, giving only six hits, while the A's got twice that number. Johnson's circuit swat came off "General" Alvin Crowder, who started, and started a two-run rally that sent him to the showers and won the game.

Lasts Until Ninth.

The A's first burst in the opening game came from walks to Miller and Mahaffey, singles by Doc Cramer and Dib Williams and an error by Mickey Cochrane. That provided a lead that lasted until the ninth, when Bill Rogell singled, Hank Greenberg doubled and Gerald Walker clouted a home run.

The Big Norfolk Fight

Complete Coverage in

The Washington Post

Frankie Remus, U. S. S. Tennessee, vs. Ken Overlin, U. S. S. Idaho, at Bain Field, Norfolk, Tonight for the Middleweight Championship of the Navy.

The Post will bring to its readers in Virginia, the Pacific and Atlantic Fleets, a blow-by-blow description of this epic naval sports event as seen through the eyes of Bill McCormick, Washington's leading boxing writer. McCormick, who has covered more nationally important fights than any other commentator of clout in the Nation's Capital, also will paint a vivid picture of the entire card, and provide readers of The Post with a summarization of the championship bout. Remember, your Post tomorrow will have the complete round-by-round description of the bout.

Sington and 5 Others Purchased by Nats

CLARK GRIFFITH, president of the Washington Baseball Club, yesterday set about mending his fences for the 1935 American League pennant race by purchasing Freddy Sington, slugging Albany outfielder and prize package of the International League, and five players from Chattanooga. None is scheduled to report until spring.

From the Lookouts Griffith obtained two pitchers, Leon Pettitt and Andy Cohen and a right hander, Orville Armbrust; catcher Sam Holbrook and Second Baseman Johnny Mihalic. Cohen is not actually a member of the Chattanooga Club, but was obtained earlier in the day from Minneapolis. The Millers added $5,000 to Cohen in exchange for outfielder Johnny Gill.

Star Cost Plenty.

Griffith refused to name Sington's purchase price, though he admitted the former Alabama football star "cost plenty." Sington received a trial with Washington in the spring but was released to Albany. With the Senators his batting average was better than .370 and he led the circuit in runs driven in with more than 150.

It was reported that Outfielder Dave Harris, Catcher Eddie Phillips and Pitcher Ed Chapman would be sent to Albany as part payment for Sington. Griffith, however, denied that Harris and Phillips would go.

Armbrust is the most promising of those obtained from Chattanooga. A youngster, he won 11 and lost 8 games this season. Cohen failed miserably at the start of the season, but was restored to good grace through the medium of a seven-game winning streak. He won nine and lost nine. Pettitt won 12 and lost 8.

Had .291 Average.

Holbrook batted .291 with the Lookouts and is considered an excellent batter with men on base. His runs-driven-in average is among the best in the loop. Hallock is a rookie in the development stage, and Griffith bought him along with the rest to keep him under Washington's eye.

Several other major league clubs, including the New York Giants and Boston Braves, had made bids for Sington's services, but the close relationship between Joe Cambria, Albany owner, and Griffith resulted in his sale to the Nationals.

Guzman Battle With Covelli "Natural"

So Says Ahearn, Who Cites Both Boys' Victories Over Burton.

WITH Baby Joe Guzman already on the scene of battle and Frankie Covelli expected tomorrow, Mons. Goldie Ahearn, major-domo of the Riding and Hunt Club boxing department, last night was back in his old habit of dishing out rash predictions concerning Tuesday's program.

Guzman, who is completing his training at the Mohawk Club, must be good, says Mons. Ahearn, because Chief Perry Knowles is listed as one of his victims and the chief was Goldie's pride and joy about a year ago. But even more convincing than his victory over the Indian is a string of 17 consecutive triumphs which Baby Joe hopes to extend by one when formally introduced to Covelli.

Both Beat Burton.

Mons. Ahearn believes the bout is a "nachural" because both boys hold decisions over Bucky Burton, who rates as the South's outstanding featherweight in Ahearn's book. Covelli whipped Sarron for the edification of local fans, and Guzman won four consecutive battles at the Twin City Arena last summer.

Tony Lopez and Benny Tressitto, two little sticks of dynamite, tangle in the eight-round semifinal. Mons. Ahearn's extra-special added attraction is Bobby Britten, son of old Jack Britten, who meets Wild Bill Bullock in a six-rounder.

Al Parks vs. Petey Bevens and Carey Wright, who is making a comeback, vs. Frankie Caris, both six-heat engagements, complete the program.

Wright, Millers Star, Sold to Indians for '35

Minneapolis, Sept. 7 (AP).—Abby Wright, star Minneapolis Association left fielder, has been sold to the Cleveland club of the American League for delivery next spring, President Mike Kelley announced today.

The Millers will receive cash and two players to be turned over at the close of the season. Dutch Holland, now with Toledo on option, may be one of the players. Wright, fourth in league batting with .360, leads the league with hits and total bases.

Moralist Romps Home to Easy Victory in Sloppy Going at Rockingham Park

Below Cost 3 Lengths Victim

Brass Monkey Is Third; Winner Leads From Start; Pays $6.80.

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 7 (AP).—Moralist, one of the heaviest campaign race horses on the American turf, found the sloppy going at Rockingham Park to his liking today and romped off with the 1⅛-mile claiming feature.

The 4-year-old son of Crusader, which has faced the barrier 35 times since January 1, stepped along in front all the way to score by three lengths in the silk of L. Luckey. Mrs. R. T. Flippen's Below Cost was second, beating Miss L. C. White's Brass Monkey by a length.

Moralist, the lukewarm choice in a wide-open betting field, ran the distance in 1:54 4-5 and paid $6.80 straight.

Noelwood Chicago Victor.

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—Paul Keester continued his winning streak at Lincoln Fields today by piloting Noelwood, which races for Oros and Sigman, home in the seven-furlong best event.

Keester, who scored in the first race with Kwamudi, hustled Noelwood into the lead in the first few strides and kept him there without difficulty. Noelwood had a margin of six lengths over G. Gorbet's Lillian Z., the favorite. E. P. Baxter's Sergeant D. finished third in the heavy going.

An outsider in the wagering, Noelwood rewarded his backers with $10.34 for $2 straight, and raced the distance in 1:30 2-5.

Enigmatic Wins at Detroit.

Detroit, Sept. 7 (AP).—Enigmatic, from the stable of Guarneri Bros., came from far behind today to win the sixth and feature race at the Detroit Fair Grounds track, beating Max Way by three lengths. Fritter Circle was third, five lengths farther back.

Enigmatic was fifth in the back stretch, but collared Max Way as they turned into the stretch. The time for the mile and a sixteenth, run over a sticky track, was 1:50. Win tickets were worth $4.80 for $2.

Nats Divide

reach second, was converted into the Brown's first run on an infield out and Pepper's liner to Manush.

Bejmas double, following Clift's single, accounted for another St. Louis marker in the eighth and this pair duplicated their act in the ninth for the fourth run.

Score in First, Third.

Washington seemed well on its way toward a clean-sweep of the afternoon's program, which would have placed the battered Nats within a half game of sixth place, until Hemsley tapped his homer. The Nats scored a run in the first inning on hits by Bluege and Manush, separated by a wild throw and infield out, and another in the third on singles by Stone and Bolton, interspersed with a passed ball and another infield out.

Clift scored St. Louis' first run in the sixth inning on his single to center, a sacrifice and Bejma's only hit of the game.

D. C. Grid Officials Hold Rule Meeting

The Washington District Football Officials will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock Monday night at the office of C. A. Mosier, 1107 Vermont avenue northwest. Interpretations and changes of the 1934 football rules will be discussed. Coaches of local colleges, prep and high schools are invited to participate in the discussion.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VACILLATE, $6.80, $3 60, $3.10; HASTY PETER, $6.60, $4.60; LAURETTA NASH, $5.40.

VACILLATE, at home in the going, had the most speed from the start and was never in danger. HASTY PETER, restrained early and never far back while racing on the outside, moved up gradually when called upon and held on courageously to the finish. LAURETTA NASH, away slowly, closed a big gap. COCAY, in closest pursuit the first half-mile, weakened in the stretch run. WISE REVUE went evenly. HAPPY SURPRISE tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds; maidens. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:07. Winner, H. M. Howard's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BON MOT, $9.10, $5.20, $3.90; YENOOR, $24 60, $11.30; SUNDROPS, $10.30.

BON MOT moved up fast on the outside in the opening quarter-mile and gained the command. He increased his advantage rounding the far turn and dominated the running for the remainder of the way. YENOOR moved up stoutly after racing restrained for the opening quarter-mile, saved ground at the stretch head, and held on gamely. SUNDROPS, prominently placed from the start, held on with good energy to the close. GOOSE CREEK went well. MISS VINCE lacked speed to keep up early, but came with good speed in the stretch run. VALISE was unable to enter into serious contention. PAY RACK had early speed, but tired.

THIRD RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:37. Winner, Miss L. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORNOCH, $4.50, $3 00, $2.50; CASH SURRENDER, $3.60, $3.20; DECORATE, $4.00.

DORNOCH moved up steadily on outside leaving back stretch, wore down the pacemaker after passing the furlong pole, and drew clear at the end. CASH SURRENDER outbroke his field, shook off CABOUSE, which elected to fight it out for the lead and held on gamely to the finish. DECORATE dropped back slightly after leaving the back stretch and closed determinedly in the stretch run. CHAIN was unable to reach the leaders. ST. OMER, away slowly, was outrun early, but made up ground in the last three-sixteenths. CABOUSE went to the front, but was unable to shake off CASH SURRENDER and stopped utterly the last furlong.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Cheshire Claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:08½. Off at 4:10. Winner, Brannastle and Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOUD SWEEPER, $8.60, $4.80, $3.10; MORNING MAIL, $3.60, $2.60; SAND CLOUD, $2.70.

CLOUD SWEEPER, never far from the leaders, took command at the far turn, drew away into a good lead and was in hand at the end. MORNING MAIL moved up gradually through the opening quarter-mile, obtained clear sailing on the inside leaving the back stretch, closed in determined fashion, but was unequal to the task of menacing the winner. SAND CLOUD, outrun for the first half-mile, closed stoutly on the outside through the last furlong. WESTYS DUKE and JESSIE D. M. fought it out for the lead in the opening five-sixteenths and both faltered when the real racing began. NEW FLAG was always far back.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:37½. Off at 4:38. Winner, Miss L. Luckey's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORALIST, $6.80, $4 00, $2.60; BELOW COST, $5.40, $3.20; BRASS MONKEY, $2.80.

MORALIST, revelling in the going, went to the front at once, drew clear in the run to the first turn, war steadied along under slight restraint, withstood a determined bid from BELOW COST and drew out through the stretch. BELOW COST, restrained early, made a determined effort after leaving the back stretch, but was unable to keep pace with the leader in the closing test. BRASS MONKEY, a trailer, closed with a rush in the last furlong. LOFTY LADY, restrained early, moved up steadily when called upon, loomed up threateningly near the far turn, but weakened in the last five-sixteenths. COLD SPILL tired.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, ridden out. Went to post at 5:08½. Off at 5:13½. Winner, B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSTIGATOR, $5.00, $3 00, $2.30; BOOCAP, $3.10, $2.30; VESTED POWER, $2.40.

INSTIGATOR went to the front in the run to the first turn, drew clear and, rated along through slight restraint, drew out fast through the last furlong. BOOCAP worked her way up gradually in the last half-mile and closed with good courage, though no match for the winner. VESTED POWER, under steadying restraint while following in near pursuit of the pace, made his bid leaving the back stretch, but was not good enough and dropped back. POLLY CEE faltered after going five furlongs. TENLESS trailed all the way.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:43. Off at 5:46½. Winner, Mrs. J. Burks' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING DON, $6.90, $4.20, $3 20; MINT DE MIE, $9.70, $5.10; MEROVECH, $3.20.

FLYING DON, at home in the going, was steadied along in close attendance of the pace, moved up fast when called upon, wore down MEROVECH, and drew out steadily with a rush through the stretch. MINT DE MIE closed stoutly on the back stretch, MEROVECH went to the front straightening out on the back stretch, was steadied along, but was unable to keep pace when challenged and weakened in the last three-sixteenths. ON SIR, restrained early, moved up on the outside nearing the far turn, but was unable to improve his position thereafter. DONT BLUSH made up some ground.

44 Youths Seek Hagerstown Grid Posts

Prospects Are Promising; Season Opens on Oct. 6 With Penn Avenue.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Forty-four candidates for the Hagerstown High School football team have reported to Coach Eddie Semler, former University of Maryland star, and prospects for a winning team are promising. Hagerstown is a member of the Cumberland Valley Football League.

The local high school has been represented by a weak team for several season.

Semler's line men average around 168 and his backfield 147 pounds this season.

The local season opens on October 6 when Hagerstown meets Penn Avenue of Cumberland.

Homer Miller has been elected manager of the team and the following are candidates for the team:

Brownell, Higgins Clash Today for District Junior Golf Title at Indian Spring

Manor Star Victor Over Johnson

Wins by 6-and-5 Count; Bannockburn Youth Upsets Shea.

CONTINUING his blasts of near par golf, Bobby Brownell, wee Manor golfer and medalist in the District Junior tourney, wended his way yesterday into the finals with Jack Higgins, of Bannockburn, and will fight it out this morning in the rain-postponed finals at Indian Spring.

Brownell's semifinal match with Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, developed into a rout and ended on the thirteenth green while Higgins was supplying the first upset of the tourney when he eliminated the co-favorite, Billy Shea, young Congressional star and runner-up last year.

Is 7 Up at Turn.

Brownell won the first hole from Johnson with a par 4 and the second was halved in buzzard 5's. From here to the ninth Brownell's streak of pars was broken only by a birdie on No. 7. The ninth was halved in buzzard 4's and Brownell left the turn with a 7-up margin. A par 4 in the tenth gave the young Manor star a lead of 8 up. Johnson won the next two holes in par figures, but a pair of par 4's on the short thirteenth gave Brownell the decision, 6 and 5. He had par in for a 75 over the water-logged course.

The Higgins-Shea match was more closely contested, although the favorite was always fighting to keep even, never enjoying a lead over the Glen Echo lad.

Squared on Fifth.

Higgins won the first hole with a stymie and the next three were halved. Shea squared the match on the fifth, but lost the par 3 sixth and remained 1 down at the turn. Higgins made short work of his junior opponent on the second nine as the steady downpour seemed to bother Billy.

Higgins went 4 up on the thirteenth hole, but had a slight lapse on the short par 3 fourteenth and set what is believed to be a local record on the water-logged green when, after reaching the green with a lusty 2 iron shot, proceeded to take seven putts and finally holed out in 8. He won the fifteenth with a par 5 to conclude the match, 4 and 3.

Brownell and Shea will meet this morning at 9:30 in the 18-hole finals providing the rain relents and the course is reopened for play.

Kann's-G. P. O. In Series Tilt Monday

Yesterday's Rained Out Game Opens Big Week in Week-Day Series.

MANAGER VICTOR RISTON'S pennant-winning team from Kann's Department Store and the crack Government Printing Office nine, Departmental League representative, were forced by yesterday's rain to forego their scheduled debut in The Post Association interleague week-day championship until Monday afternoon on the Ellipse. Play as usual will be called at 4 o'clock.

The Kann's-G. P. O. clash will be the opening attraction of the week's battles for survivorship among the champions of the seven week-day leagues, which played through the current season under the banner of The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association.

Heurich Brewers, Industrial League champs and a strong favorite to gain interleague honors, make their first appearance in the series Tuesday against the fast Acacia nine.

Injury Jinx on Trail.

The injury jinx, which has haunted the Brewers throughout their campaign, has robbed them of much of their team strength, but Manager Bill Flester is hopeful of putting a winning combination on the field.

Navy Fight

over the required 160 pounds against Overlin. Should either Remus or the punch pusher from the U. S. S. Idaho tip the beam at more than 160 pounds, he will immediately become $250 poorer, as they have both posted that amount as a weight forfeit.

Betting odds still inclined sharply toward the Pacific Coast representative, who ruled anywhere from a 3-to-1 to a 10-to-4 favorite—verbally. No wagering has been done on the fight, however, because there has been no Remus money available up until the present time. It is said that the Tars from the Pacific Fleet have organized a monstrous pool with which they will flood the city tomorrow morning. It is generally expected that the flood will be rapidly absorbed by pro-Overlin wagerers who have a lot of what it takes to sponge it up.

The attendance is expected to reach the 10,000 mark if the fight is held tomorrow night. A delay in the proceedings may cut the gate sharply, as the contest originally was scheduled for tomorrow night to follow the Navy pay day closely.

Jimmy Walsh, Remus' heavy-hitting sidekick, will meet Bob Turner, of Norfolk, in a 6-round semifinal of great promise. Walsh gave Remus several tough engagements on the Pacific Coast before finally bowing to him and Turner is fresh from a stirring knockout win over Otto Kushmer in Washington.

East and West Resume Polo Matches

More Than 30,000 to See Initial Battle Today of 2-out-of-3 Series.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—With all the panoply of the great sporting event it is, the East-West polo matches will be renewed tomorrow, weather permitting, before a crowd of 30,000 to 40,000 spectators at Meadow Brook's famed international field.

Officials of the United States Polo Association said the first match would start at 3 p. m. (E. S. T.). The series is on the best two-out-of-three basis, with the second match slated for next Wednesday and the third, if necessary, on the following Saturday.

Relies on Youngsters.

With Thomas Hitchcock, jr., its one 10-goal star, on the sidelines because of a fall several weeks ago, the East is relying on a team of youngsters, the oldest only 28, to defeat a higher-handicapped, favored Western four led by the world's two other 10-goal stars, Cecil Smith and Elmer J. Boeseke, jr. The Western side has a 36-goal rating, the East 30.

Riding on the Eastern four will be Michael Phipps, Jimmy Mills, Winston Guest and Billy Post, in that order, with Guest the only regular from last year's team, and the only one with international match experience. Guest and Mills are listed at 8 goals each, while Post and Phipps are handicapped at 7.

Pedley at No. 1.

At No. 1 for the West is Eric Pedley, generally admitted the world's leading goal-shooter. Boeseke will be at No. 2, Smith at No. 3 and Aidan Roark at back. They composed the team which sank the East 12 goals to 6 in the deciding third match last year.

Against this formidable array the young Eastern four must rely on its youth, dash and teamwork.

Combs May Leave Hospital Next Week

St. Louis, Sept. 7 (AP).—Earle Combs, veteran outfielder of the New York Yankees, who has been in St. John's Hospital here for two months, may be discharged next week.

Combs suffered a skull fracture and a broken collar bone when he ran against the center-field wall at Sportsman's Park while chasing a fly ball. In a critical condition for some time following the accident, he rallied, and his condition is now such that hospital attaches say he may be able to leave the hospital Monday or Tuesday for his home at Richmond, Ky.

Combs recently predicted he would be able to play next season.

Patroni's 138 Glens Falls Leader

Tops Laffoon, Macfarlane by Stroke; Houghton Cards 75-71.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—Duplicating his par-cracking 69 of yesterday, Jack Patroni, assistant professional of the Wykagyl Club, of New Rochelle, today paced a field of 111 shot-makers through the second round of the sixth annual Glens Falls Open which saw par blasted 10 times and equaled 11.

Rolling home in one of the last threesomes of the day, Patroni nosed out Ky Laffoon, Denver, and Willie Macfarlane, of Tuckahoe, former National Open titleholder, by a single stroke for the half-way mark lead.

Finishes With Birdie.

Laffoon, who shared the lead at the end of the first round yesterday with Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J., at 68, had to bag a birdie 2 on the home green for a par 71 to tie for second place with Macfarlane, who added a 69 to his 70 of yesterday.

Clark required a 73 today for a total 141, good for a tie with H. G. Picard, of Charleston, S. C., in eighth place. Picard had rounds of 72 and 69.

Two shots behind the leader, between the Laffoon-Macfarlane combination in second place and Clark and Picard, were Billy Burke, of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, former winner; Willie Klein, of Williston, Long Island champion; Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., and Johnny O'Connor, of nearby Bolton Landing. All four shot subpar golf to post the 36-hole aggregate of 140.

Houghton Cards 71.

Al Houghton, of Kenwood Club, Washington, D. C., came through today with a par 71 to add to his 75 of yesterday for 146, with a good chance to end up in the money.

All of the leading masters of the game entered in the 72-hole medal classic were among the 68 survivors with 36-hole totals of 150 or better who battle it out tomorrow over the final 36 holes.

230-Pounder at Hampden-Sidney

Burleigh Mears, Reports, Son of Former Star.

Hampden Sidney, Va., Sept. 7 (AP). Coach Yank Bernier, of the Hampden Sidney Tigers, rubbed his eyes in amazement here today as 18-year-old Burleigh N. Mears, jr., a freshman from Bellhaven, Va., reported as a football squad candidate. Mears tips the beam at 230 pounds and is but 5 feet 9 inches tall.

A search of the equipment lockers failed to reveal the oversize moleskins Mears needs so the hefty lad sat on the bench today. Tomorrow, or maybe the next day, he'll be at work with the squad. There's tradition behind his football aspirations.

Twenty-seven years ago his father, Dr. B. N. Mears, played for Hampden Sidney, as a teammate of present Coach Bernier.

Hampered by the loss of backs and center through graduation last year, Bernier is getting his squad into shape. Light scrimmages are scheduled for next week by which time at least three more prospective back field men will be on hand.

Goubeau Faces Welsh Today In Tourney

Is Only Match Scheduled in Army-Navy Tennis; Rain Delays Start.

BARNEY WELSH, the Rockville college boy who went to the third round of the National tennis championships at Forest Hills only to fall in five sets Thursday, arrived here yesterday to participate in the Army and Navy Country Club's Invitation Tournament, but rain forced cancellation of all matches.

Welsh will play Maurice Goubeau at 2 o'clock in a first-round match today. The Rockville player is seeded No. 1 in the singles and he and Ralph McElvenny, Public Parks, doubles champions, are seeded at the top in the team event.

Dooly Mitchell and Frank Shore are listed second, Maurice O'Neil and Frederico Sendel, No. 3, and Allan Blade and J. A. Dorst, No. 4.

The Welsh-Goubeau fracas will be the only singles match today.

Cumberland Will Send Legion Junior Nine to World Series

CUMBERLAND, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—With $2,000 set as the goal for rewarding Cumberland's American Legion National junior baseball champions with a trip to the major league world series next month and the purchase of clothing for each member of the team that won the junior world series at Chicago last week, subscription lists have been placed at 16 different business houses in this city for those who wish to donate.

The party to go to New York, should the Giants win, will be limited to 16 persons—the 12 players used at Chicago, Manager W. Earl Brooks, Coach Frank Zahradka, Mascot Harold Hipsley and a member of the post.

A poll of the boys yesterday showed all of them in favor of the series as a reward. They will, however, receive sports jackets and plans for a banquet are under way. The words, "Cumberland 1934 World Junior Champions," will appear in gold letters on the back of each jacket with the American Legion seal on the left arm and the name of the player on the pocket.

To send the boys to games in Detroit, providing the Tigers win, as well as the contests in New York would entail too much expense, but American Legion officers hope to put over the New York trip with a flourish.

Part of the fund will be raised next Monday night when the American Legion team will meet a Cumberland all-star club at Community Park at 8:15 in a benefit game.

$25,000 Lawrence Draws Weak Field

Five of Lesser Lights to Vie for Stake Today.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—With the ranking 3-year-olds, including Cavalcade and Discovery, either ineligible or not in condition to run, the Lawrence Realization will be renewed at Belmont Park tomorrow with five of the lesser lights seeking the $25,000 purse in the 1¼-mile journey.

The field is one of the weakest that has met in the famous stake since its first running 42 years ago. Heading the quintet with the top weight of 126 pounds and the probable even money choice is Morton L. Schwartz's Observant.

Carry Over from the Wheatley Stable and H. C. Phipps' Cleves, which will run coupled as the trainer James Fitzsimmons' entry, was held at 2 to 1. Each will carry 116 pounds as will Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Good Goods, the outsider at 5 to 1. C. V. Whitney's Collateral, a 5-to-2 shot assigned 123 pounds, completes the entry list.

Jr. Horse Show Due Today at Warrenton

Ten Classes Scheduled in Second Annual Event On Gaines Estate.

WARRENTON, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.). — Tommorow afternoon the Warrenton Junior Hunt is holding its second annual pony show at Stonlea, estate of Miss Mildred Gaines, secretary of the Warrenton Junior Hunt, who is managing the show.

There will be ten classes with silver cups for first prize and ribbons for second, third and fourth places. Mr. Courtland Smith, of The Plains, Va., and vice president of the Warrenton Horse Show Association, will be the judge, assisted by Mr. John Gaines.

Ten Classes Listed.

The program follows:

Class No. 1, lead class, judged for suitability as child's mount; No. 2, beginner's saddle class; No. 3, beginner's jumping class; No. 4, junior horsemanship, riders under 10; No. 5, senior horsemanship, riders under 16; No. 6, saddle ponies under 12 hands; No. 7, saddle ponies over 12 hands; No. 8, jumping class, ponies under 12 hands; No. 9, jumping class, ponies over 12 hands; No. 10, matched pony pairs, 13 hands and under.

There is also a prize for the boy or girl displaying the most general sportsmanship during the show. A grand championship and a reserve will be awarded to the ponies winning the most points.

Harrison and Betty Leigh Nesbit and Peggy and James Hamilton, members of the Warrenton Junior Hunt, have entered the ponies which won ribbons in the Warrenton Horse Show last week.

Other members with entries are C. Patricia Downes, Elizabeth Welburn, James Murphy, Hope Wallis, Anne Batcheler, Harcourt Lees, Cornelia and James Hodgkin, Martha and John Cutting, Jack Summerville, jr., Clark, Jane Polly and Liggett Baldwin and Betsy, Sally and Barney Brittle.

McBride to Coach D. C. Pro Gridmen

Signs for Two Years; Lee and Capt. Palmer Aids.

Jack McBride, one of the great college fullbacks of the past decade, and all-American selection while at Syracuse University in 1925, has been signed to a two-year contract as coach of the Washington Federals pro football team.

McBride will be assisted by John Lee, all-American tackle at Oklahoma in 1929, and line coach at George Washington last year, and Capt. Hoke Palmer, of the United States Marines, former Marine grid coach. Both Lee and Palmer were given two-year contracts.

With McBride as head coach, Lee will do the line tutoring and Palmer will handle the backfield.

The former Syracuse ace stands today as one of the foremost placekickers of all time. His sure foot, together with an accurate throwing arm and devastating off-tackle talent, made him not only a great college star, but also one of pro football's outstanding players for the past seven or eight years as a member of the New York Giants.

Hawks Hold Grid Meeting.

The Brentwood Hawks Football Team will hold its second meeting of the year Monday night at the home of Harry Kaske, 3718 Fenwick street, Brentwood, Md., at 7:30 o'clock. New candidates will be welcomed and may notify Manager W. Fellner, Decatur 0418-W. The Hawks will play the Richmond Arrows, October 7, at Richmond.

Rival Groups Clash.

The Chevy Chase Grays will play the Mount Rainier Grays in what promises to be a tight battle Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock on Mount Rainier's Field.

Sunday Game Sought.

The Rex A. C. is seeking a game for Sunday with an unlimited team on the Rex diamond. Call Potomac 2334-J.

Palace Gridders Drill.

Palace A. C. gridders will hold their initial drill at 10:30 tomorrow morning on the Tidal Basin field. Palace, last season's 150-pound champs, will compete in the unlimited ranks this season.

Lightest Bats for Tigers.

The Detroit Tigers use the lightest bats in the American League, the St. Louis Cardinals the lightest in the majors. Individually, Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth swing the heaviest, 38 ounces.

Shorey Is Out Of National Amateur

District's List Cut to Four; Vinson Shoots a 74 in Practice.

By Dave Herman.
(Post Staff Correspondent).

BROOKLINE COUNTRY CLUB, Brookline, Mass., Sept. 7.—Washington's forces in the National amateur golf championship, scheduled to open next Monday, were reduced to four tonight with the unexpected withdrawal of John C. Shorey, of Kenwood.

In a wire to Executive Secretary Tom McMahon from Forest Hills, N. Y., Shorey stated that pressing business would prevent him from playing in the tournament.

As a result of Shorey's withdrawal, which was one of nine announced by the U. S. G. A. today, Don McPhail, of the Baltimore Country Club, Baltimore, Md., was called upon to substitute. McPhail was next in line in the sectional trials at Five Farms.

Hold Brisk Workout.

The District's four hopefuls—Gene Vinson, of Manor; Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional; Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, and Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, were on the scene, and stepped through a brisk workout today.

Playing over a course made exceptionally heavy by a morning drizzle, Vinson, outstanding of the District golfers, scored a 74, three over par. The transplanted Mississippian, shooting birdies on the third and seventh holes, did a 34 on the outgoing nine, but came to grief on the long eleventh, where a 7 set off the spark for trouble on two other holes. He was over par on only four holes.

The 16-year-old Dettweiler, who is one of two of the youngest players in the tournament, served a warning to his more experienced golfing contemporaries by shooting the first nine in 34, one under par. Satisfied with his playing, Dettweiler retired without playing a full nine. He holed out a 50-foot chip on the third, and birdied the fourth, sixth and seventh.

McCarthy Cards 79.

McCarthy scored 39—40—79 and Drain picked up after a faulty start. Ernie Caldwell, of Baltimore, who played with Vinson, McCarthy and Drain, had a 74.

With virtually all of the big guns on the scene, and the field cut down to 184 by reason of withdrawals, freckled-faced George Dunlap, defending champion, gave the boys something to think about today by drilling out a 33—36—69. Thus far Lawson Little, British amateur champion and one of several favorites, has been low with his 68, but Dunlap, flashing the form that was responsible for his 66 in the 1932 Walker Cup matches here, played almost flawless golf in his tour of the course with four other Walker cuppers—Johnny Fischer, Max Marston and Chandler Egan, of the American team, and Tony Torrence, of the English forces.

Has Four Birdies.

Dunlap had a 6 on the par 4 thirteenth, but picked up birdies on the eighth, ninth, eleventh and seventeenth, holing a curling 20-footer on the seventeenth green.

Fischer's 37—35—72 was the next best practice score reported. Johnny Goodman, 1933 open champion, did a 74, and the other scores were nothing to write home about.

Two of the withdrawals are Britishers—W. B. Torrence and Rex Hartley, both of the Walker Cup team.

Kid Norfolk, Cross Fight Next Friday

To Meet in Main Event on Griffith Stadium Card.

Unable to agree on terms with Mack House and Harry Campbell, Lincoln Athletic Club boxing promoters last night closed with Young Kid Norfolk, of Baltimore, and Tommy Cross, of Philadelphia, for the main ten-round bout at Griffith Stadium next Friday night. Norfolk holds the colored lightweight championship and Cross ranks well up on the list of contenders for the crown.

Young Canada Lee and young Kid Chocolate already are booked for a ten-round semifinal. The six-rounders, Young Buffalo vs. Virginia Wildcat, and Charley Wells vs. Kid Criss, and a four complete the card. A pair of local scrappers are to appear in the four-rounder.

The Lincoln Club made overtures to Al Gainor, outstanding colored light-heavy, and Gorilla Jones for the top spot on the card, but could not complete negotiations. They may be signed for the first indoor card of the season, however.

Buzz Arlett Suspended.

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—Buzz Arlett, of Minneapolis, leading home-run hitter of the American Association, was indefinitely suspended today by President Thomas J. Hickey for abusing Umpire Pat Donohue in yesterday's game against Milwaukee.

Columbian League Organized.

The Columbian Football League will sponsor competition in four divisions, ranging from 100-pound to the 125-pound class, according to President J. Cohen. Teams desiring to enter should communicate with Cohen at 1438 F street northeast, or phone Lincoln 10431.

Mackie, Warwicks, Lefty Grove's Double

CHARLIE MACKIE, Warwick A. C. pitcher and candidate for selection as outstanding star of The Post Association.

Southpaw Speed-Ball Hurler Reminds of Red Sox Star.

MAYBE Lefty Grove does not know it, but he has a "double" playing sandlot ball in The Post Association. The youngster is doing it so well that he has a chance of being selected as the winner of The Post award and given a six-week thorough training at the spring camp of the Griffs under the guidance of Manager Joe Cronin, and perhaps a chance of meeting his famous protoype face to face in big-league surroundings. The player in question, who so closely resembles the famous Red Sox southpaw, is young Charlie Mackie, of the Warwick A. C., of Section B of the National City League.

His resemblance to the famous big-league pitcher does not stop at a physical resemblance. Young Mackie is also a pitcher and a southpaw one at that. His main forte is a fast ball, which he delivers with a long sweeping motion and immediately there flashes through the mind's eye a picture of Lefty in his prime as he was throwing his feared smoke-ball by the batters and mowing them down with the regularity of clockwork.

Fanned 23 in Two Games.

Lefty led the American League in strike-outs for several seasons and young Mackie here again is following in his footsteps. Against Dor-A in a league game, he hung up 11 strikeouts and one week later when the Warwicks were playing the Rinaldi Coalmen, he sent 12 of the Rinaldis back to the bench talking to themselves.

Charlie is only 17 years of age, 5 feet 11 in his stocking feet, and weighs 146 pounds. Just last year, he was pitching for the Bunker Hill American Leigon Team and this year he made the jump all the way to the unlimited class and has been one of the reasons for the success of the young Warwick nine in its first year of organized baseball.

Young Mackie went to the Holy Comforter Grammar School and has been playing ball as long as he remembers and he has always pitched. He attended Eastern High for one year when economic difficulties forced his withdrawal from school. Undoubtedly, he would have been a great aid to Coach Charley Guyon, who coaches Eastern's baseball nines, had he been able to remain in school.

Hero of Teammates.

Manager Henry Sappey of the Warwicks becomes enthusiastic when asked about Mackie, so certain is he that he will make a name for himself in a baseball way. His teammates, too, are his most enthusiastic supporters and all have the utmost confidence in Charlie's ability, as witness their performances when he is in the box for them.

Bergman, C. U. Coach, Off for Rules Meeting

A. J. "Dutch" Bergman, head coach of football and director of athletics at Catholic University, departed last night for the rules interpretation meeting to be held at the Hotel McAlpin, New York City, tomorrow.

The Cardinal coach will attend both afternoon and evening sessions, which will be conducted by a number of prominent coaches. B. L. "Dutch" Eberts, former Catholic University player and president of the Washington Football Officials Association, will accompany the Red Bird coach.

Some news concerning the proposed game between the Brooklanders and Providence College, to be played in the Rhode Island city next Thanksgiving Day, should be forthcoming upon the return of Bergman.

Plays Semi-pro Football.

Minneapolis, Sept. 7 (AP).—Carl Tengler, veteran University of Minnesota substitute full back, will play semipro football this fall, Coach Bernie Bierman said today. Tengler left the university before the end of the last school year.

Speed Keynote Of V. P. I. Plans

With Cunning, Will Supplant Power, Says Coach Redd.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Sept. 7 (AP). It was sheer power that made Henry Redd a great full back at Virginia Tech just after the war—almost irresistible power, opposing lines found—but the great plunger, as head coach at his alma mater, is building an eleven that relies on speed and cunning.

Redd has some fast boys among nine seniors who, he says, have more good football brains than most coaches dare hope for in a squad of 40 men.

Then, Redd muses, more than a score of recruits are coming up from an undefeated freshman team, and these fit well into the scheme.

"A team whose resources is relentless power," says Redd, "impresses but it doesn't thrill either the spectators or its coach. I'll take the speed and headwork of my team against just plain power any day and win my share—and that's what we expect to do this year."

Choosing 185-Pound Line.

With speed as the gauge, Redd is choosing a 185-pound line in place of a heavier one. He has three fast and experienced guards in Red English, Norman Ochs and Benny Botnick; an outstanding, powerful tackle in Tris Huffman, and Red Negri, all-conference end, on one flank. A trio of big, hustling sophomores are battling for the other tackle. The real problems to be solved are at center and one end.

Capt. George Smith will call signals from the blocking back position, where he stands out, by vote of the coaches, as the finest blocker in the conference last year.

From the ranks of Martin Cunningham, Jim Ottaway, Duncan Holsclaw and Hank Spruill, all veterans, and Harmon Dickerson, Joe Russell, Durward Stowe, Wilburt Kennedy and George Sodaro, speedy sophomores, Redd can round out two well balanced back fields and have a capable punter in each.

Has Few Ball Toters.

Redd has only 13 ball toters, instead of the usual score, and is afraid of injuries.

The schedule, listing Temple, Florida and North Carolina State as new foes, follows:

September 22, Roanoke, at Blacksburg; 29, Temple, at Philadelphia.

October 6, Florida, at Blacksburg; 13, William and Mary, at Richmond; 20, Maryland, at Norfolk; 27, Washington and Lee, at Lexington.

November 3, South Carolina, at Columbia; 10, North Carolina State, at Portsmouth; 17, Virginia, at Blacksburg; 20, Virginia Military Institute, at Roanoke.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Beginning of the regular college session this morning allowed V. M. I. Cadets only one practice period, which lasted two hours despite rain. Coaches Raftery and Hess again sent players through dummy scrimmage in preparation for regular scrimmage tomorrow.

Jim Farley and Morris Haas, sophomores, and Charlie Banks, junior, will be the only nonletter men on the starting eleven.

It Looks Like the West

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The boys are getting ready to play croquet on horseback out on Long Island tomorrow afternoon for the honor of the East and the West and it will be very dangerous croquet because, in this game, neither the ball nor the horse holds still. If, in your enthusiasm, you should haul off with your belter or mallet and whale your opponent across the Adam's apple, or step on him with your horse, you do not even stop to say "excuse me, I am sorry," because in the first place it does not matter and is a part of the game and in the second you are not really sorry at all.

And they tell me that in these East-West matches, they dispense with politeness and save that for the get-together parties in the tap room when the game is over. Polo is played by the nicest young men in the country with the bluest blood of the finest families and the most money, but they are also the roughest, toughest, fightingest, swearingest parties about, and sometimes when a sudden hush falls on the crowd, as it will, you can hear the dirty word and its brother ringing out over the field, loud and clear. That is all right, too. The ladies just smile and say—"Isn't that quaint?"

Hard and Tough on Field.

I used to know the polo crowd better than I do now. Our Eastern polo players, long thought to be the best in the world, are all society folk and sweet-spoken and good dressers except on the polo field, where they get very hard and tough, but last year they went out on a sort of a picnic or church festival to Chicago to play a sort of pick-up Western team for the East-West championship. Nobody took it very seriously back here—it was a nice jaunt and a chance to see the World's Fair and get drunk.

The Westerners outroughed, outrode, outtoughed, outpoloed and outeverythinged the Eastern team and simply murdered them. Tomorrow's affair will be the first encore since those happy days last year when the East rode out to play polo and the West to commit mayhem and murder as well as to play the game.

Same Result Likely.

I see no reason for thinking that anything different will happen this year than happened last, except that the East will be ready for the rough stuff and will pay it back with interest, and will lose the polo matches just the same. Somehow the make-up of that Western team looks more like the pay-off to me—better polo players, tougher men.

You have to be pretty expert to write about polo, which same I am not, but there is one simple feature which seems to stand out and that is that the West seems to have better polo players on the handicap rating of goals. Ten goals seems to be the high or scratch rating. Well, on the Eastern team Mike Phipps has a seven-goal rating. Winston Guest eight goals, Jimmy Mills eight, and Billy. Post seven. On the Western team, Cecil Smith is rated at ten goals, Boeseke, jr., ten, Eric Pedley eight, and Aidan Roark eight. That looks to me like 36 goals to 30, which makes the Western team six better than the Eastern bunch before they ever spit on their hands and climb into the saddle.

Imported Horses for East.

The Eastern team is riding imported horse flesh, English-bred horses with nice manners, good breeding and manicured nails, while the Westerners will climb aboard rat-tailed cowponies and American-bred horses. Each to his own game, each to his own horse.

For pure polo, team play and following the ball, the imported horse probably is better. For the rough stuff, smashing, running interference and all-around hell raising, the American horse is the beast. The West still looks like the business, doesn't it?

Stocks Decline Nine-tenths In Slow Sales

Gold, Silver Issues Turn Steadier; Trading Rises to 688,570 Shares.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—The stock market continued its slow retreat today in an atmosphere that was murky with political uncertainties, textile strike developments and an obscure business outlook.

Gold and silver shares were steadier in contrast with their sharp decline in late trading of the preceding session, but suffered some further recessions.

After touching 119¼, nearly 22 points off from its top yesterday, United States Smelting & Refining closed 4 points lower at 121½. It was disclosed the stock exchange had undertaken an investigation of its break.

Focused on Election.

With attention focused on the Maine election and the anticipated Government financing announcement next week, financial markets seemed inclined to pursue a waiting course and movements on the whole were narrow and unimportant.

United States Government issues settled into a narrow drift following their rally. Wheat scored net gains of ¾ to 1⅛ cents a bushel but most commodities stayed in a rut. Cotton sagged 20 to 35 cents a bale.

Firmness in the dollar, along with the better market for Treasury issues, smoothed the way for the impending Federal financing.

Some of the recent prophets of inflation seemed less sure of their premises and there was additional scattered liquidation in food, sugar and other issues, aside from metals, which had been favored by speculators recently on inflation theories.

Homestake Mining, the leading domestic gold stock, which did not trade during the preceding break in the metals, lost 15 points. Alaska Juneau touched a new 1934 low under 17 on a further fractional decline. The decline in Howe Sound was extended more than a point, but Cerro de Pasco and McIntyre, in the mining group, firmed to finish fractionally higher.

Alcohol Shares Weak.

Alcohol shares were weak. American Commercial Alcohol and U. S. Industrial Alcohol each lost more than 2 points. American Sugar, Caterpillar Tractor, Cuban American Sugar preferred, Monsanto Chemical, Western Union and Corn Products were among issues finishing 1 to about 3 points lower.

The Standard Statistics Co. average of 90 selected stocks dipped nine-tenths of a point to a new low for the current decline at 70.9. Transfers increased to 688,570 shares, compared with 603,330 yesterday.

The monthly figures of the New York Stock Exchange on the outstanding short interest showed an increase of 103,750 shares in August to a total of 826,911.

American Brokers in France Face Blow in U. S. Tax Drive

Efforts of Washington to Collect Income Levies Abroad May Intensify Growing Dissatisfaction of French Investors in Securities.

By Andre Vulliet
(Special Correspondent to The Post).

Paris, Sept. 7.—American brokerage firms in Paris may suffer a severe blow from the recent offensive launched by the United States income-tax authorities to collect taxes on American securities transactions from foreigners abroad.

This is the opinion expressed by New York brokers' correspondents here, as very firm letters from the U. S. tax collector are being received by French banks and brokers inviting them to return complete data on all income and profits derived from American securities by their clients since 1929.

Such a move is regarded as likely to strengthen the already growing disaffection of French investors for American securities. Moreover, American firms fear they will lose part of their business to their foreign competitors whose facilities to disregard United States regulations are much greater.

Liability of Aliens.

The liability of nonresident aliens to American income taxes on all their income and profits derived from American securities is not new. The United States fiscal authorities have always endeavored to collect what was due them from abroad with varrying success. American banks in Paris have generally filed scrupulous returns for their clients. Correspondents of American brokers usually informed their clients they were liable to tax but left them the task of filing a return. French banks let their cutsomers ignore the American law.

That the majority of French investors never filed an American income-tax return, is a well known fact in brokerage circles here. Most of them did not bother and had nothing to fear, since they had no property in their own name in America.

For those who wanted to be on the safe side in their relations with American fiscal authorities, ways of getting around the tax were devised and commonly used by large investors, either individuals or corporations.

Trading in Holland.

Firstly, American securities can be bought and sold in Amsterdam, where Dutch banks have issued certificates representing American shares registered in their names. The certificates, in the public's hands, can be the object of numerous transactions while the shares they represent are kept in the bank's vaults.

Secondly, there exists a regular market in London for about 20 American stocks. In this case, the actual American certificates are dealt in. They are registered in the name of an English bank, and indorsed in blank by said bank, which pays out the dividends thereof upon presentation. The certificates, known as "street certificates," circulate like regular shares to the bearer.

Thirdly, for those stocks which are not "listed" in London, the way out is this. For instance, French investor has bought 100 American shares in New York through his bank in Paris. When he has a profit, the Paris bank will sell them for him to its London correspondent, who immediately covers himself, at the same price, by selling an equivalent number of shares in New York.

Bank Uses London.

Meanwhile, the Paris bank cables its New York correspondent to hold the shares in question at the disposal of its correspondent in London for delivery on the New York market. So, the London bank, which sells in New York at the same price at which it bought, makes no profit and therefore is not liable to tax. On the other hand, the actual owner of the securities "realizes" his profit in London and consequently is not liable to tax.

This game went on a large scale in 1929 when profits were large. Since it implies plenty of additional costs, there has been no use for it in the past few years when everyone could sell with less charges through an American broker and show a loss.

It would easily be rivived, should the revelation of a foreign customer's name to the American income-tax authorities imply too many risks for him.

"The first-reaction of our French customers, anyway," the head of a large American brokerage firm's Paris branch said, "it to 'get out.' Many of our clients have closed their accounts recently. Some, even though they would, could not honestly trace all the transactions they have made since 1929. Others, who keep account-books, may show profits in dollars but, considering the dollar devaluation, show losses in francs. None of them is willing to submit to the investigations of a foreign government.

It is understood in Paris financial circles that French banks will meet the United States tax collector's request with polite elusiveness. It appears they have already decided not to reveal their clients' names. They will let the matter lie low for awhile.

Pittsburgh District Trade Drop Eases

Pittsburgh, Sept. 7 (AP).—The business decline, noted in the Pittsburgh district since early July, slackened for the week ended September 1, showing only a .4 per cent fall off from the week before.

This was disclosed tonight in figures released by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Pittsburgh which charts the rise and fall of trade in the 11 western Pennsylvania counties comprising the Pittsburgh district.

Rail shipments showed a slight gain for the week, but iron, steel, coal and electric power production, together with the other commercial activities which are computed in the charts, were either stationary or registered slight declines.

Sales of S. S. Kresge Increase in August

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Sales of the S. S. Kresge Co. during August totaled $10,252,468, compared with $9,920,933 in the same month a year ago, a gain of 3.3 per cent.

Sales for the first eight months of the year aggregated $83,016,109, or 12.1 per cent higher than the 1933 figure of $74,053,822.

Bonds Yield Fraction Again; Sales Heavier

Federal List Is Mixed as Trading Rises to $16,066,000.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—The bond market was subjected to considerable stress and strain today and with a rather mixed Government list as a background, corporate issues generally yielded to lower price levels.

Transfers approximated $16,066,000, par value, compared with $13,854,000 on Thursday. Of this total the turnover in Governments accounted for $10,040,000 against $8,650,000 the day before.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans declined two-tenths of a point to 83.6.

Federals Gain Slightly.

In the last full day of trading before the Treasury Department makes known its refunding plans for some $1,750,000,000 in certificates and called Liberties, seven Government obligations finished the day with small gains. Most of the Treasury loans declined 2-32ds to 8-32ds of a point.

Home Owners Loan and Federal Form Mortgage bonds were in the best demand. Dealers said they saw no evidence of Treasury support.

Railroad and utility bonds generally pointed lower. Texas & Pacific 5s declined 2⅜ points, to 77¼; Baltimore & Ohio refunding 5s were 1¼ lower at 69, and losses of around a point occurred in some obligations of Alleghany Co., Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Rock Island, Erie, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Postal Telegraph, International Telephone, Rio Grande Western, Southern Pacific, Wabash, Western Union, American Water Works, Montana Power and Southern Railway.

Prime Investments Inactive.

Prime investments of all classes were narrow and generally inactive. American Telephone issues were mostly unchanged, California Petroleum 5½s were ¼ higher at 102¼; Canadian Railways yielded 3⅜, to 115⅝, and Cincinnati Union Terminal 5s were unchanged at 110⅝.

Strength of Argentine and other South American bonds was noted in the foreign section.

Argentine 5s were 1⅞ higher at 95, and Buenos Aires 6s were 2 better at 79. German 5½s were ⅞ lower at 26.

Curb's Prices Are Unsettled In Dull Dealing

Selling in Alcohols, Metals Aided; Transfers Rise to 115,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Selling in alcohols and metals helped to keep further the curb market in an unsettled state today.

Offerings increased somewhat in the last hour, the rest of the session was dull.

Quotations were narrow at the opening and the list backed and filled most of the forenoon. The lower drift embraced specialties and utilities, but oils displayed some resistance.

Dow Chemical dipped nearly 3 points while Hiram Walker lost more than 2. Declines of sizeable fractions to around a point were recorded by Aluminum Co. of America, American Cyanamid B, Distillers Corporation - Seagrams, Lake Shore, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Swift Internacional, Swift & Co., Pan-American Airways and American Gas Electric.

Electric Bond & Share, International Petroleum, Sherwin Williams and Creole Petroleum held fairly steady, while Singer Manufacturing got up a point net.

Transfers approximated 115,000 shares, or slightly more than yesterday.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

The dollar steady in terms of gold currencies today and moved slightly higher against the pound sterling.

The British unit dipped ½ a cent in New York to $4.99¾, after the dollar had closed the London trading at 4.99 9-16 to the pound. The pound also weakened against francs, falling to 74.75 francs from 74.87.

The price of gold in London rose 1½ pence to 140 shillings 9½ pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $35.22). Bars valued at $1,210,605 changed hands.

French francs were unchanged in New York at 6.68 cents, while the dollar closed in Paris at the equivalent of 6.67¾ cents to the franc.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Investment bankers, with hopes of an early revival of corporate financing dashed by the slump in the bond market last month, are now awaiting the new Treasury financing in the hope that it may mark a turn for the better.

Much of the unsettlement in the bond market is traced to the sag in the U. S. Government issues since July. This decline was presumably due in part to the stirring up of inflationary sentiment with the nationalization of silver.

The root of the trouble, however, in the opinion of a number of bond market analysts, was the too rapid issuance of Federal guaranteed issues of the Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage Corporations at a time when the Treasury's own obligations had risen to the highest level for the post-war period, save for a short time in 1928, with the long-term issues yielding less than 2¾ per cent on the average.

As the market became overloaded, it started to sag, and soon a series of adverse influences began to pile up, so that the movement gathered momentum and volume like a rolling snowball.

If the Treasury "puts over with a bang" the refunding of its $525,000,000 certificates maturing September 15 and the $1,200,000,0000 of Libertys called for payment October 15, bankers believe the whole investment market should take on a healthier tone, which might, within a reasonable time, permit a resumption of corporate financing of fair proportions. The Treasury financing is to be announced Monday.

The Markets at a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Thur.
Advances	74	145
Declines	445	320
Unchanged	123	118
Total issues	642	583

Stocks—The market continued its slow retreat as textile strike developments and obscure business outlook tended to aid the fall. The average decline totaled nine-tenths of a point. Trading volume increased to 688,570 shares.

Bonds—Considerable pressure in selling forced the bond market to lower ground. Corporate issues were generally in the loss column. Declines averaged two-tenths of a point, and sales increased to $16,066,000.

Curb—Selling in alcohols and metals helped to keep the curb exchange in an unsettled state. Most all of the session was dull. Transfers were advanced to 115,000 shares.

Wheat—Sharp new upturns converted wheat losses into gains. Barley jumped .5 cents and oats and corn joined the advance group. The market closed firm. September wheat sold at 1.06⅜; December, at 1.07⅝.

Cotton—Prices moved narrowly downward. Pending Government crop report and the textile strike situation were blamed for the decline. October closed at 13.13. The general market fell 4 to 7 points. December sold at 13.26.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed dull, 7 to 12 points lower. September sold at 15.74; October, at 15.81.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.86; refined stood at 4.75.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4 sold at 11½; Rio No. 7, at 9¼.

Silver—Bar silver was unchanged. It sold in New York at 49½ cents per ounce. In London it stood at 21 13-16 pence.

Gold—Bar gold sold in London at 140 shillings and 9½ pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was slightly higher on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.00 to the English pound; 6.68 cents to the French franc, and 40.24 cents to the German mark.

Bankers' Journal Plans To Use Title of Banking

New York, Sept. 7.—With the October issue the name of the American Bankers Association Journal will be changed to Banking, it is announced here by F. N. Shepherd, executive manager of the association.

"This change has a broader significance than merely an alteration in wording," Mr. Shepherd said. "The magazine Banking will continue to be edited primarily for bankers and business executives and for those who have frequent contact with the banking field. It will continue to present material aimed to develop the best there is in banking and also to interpret the traditions and aims of American banking to those who come in contact with our banking institutions."

London—Quietness prevailed on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities held firm, home rails were dull, and kaffirs and transatlantic issues weakened. Home industrials developed irregularity, oil shares were steady, and rubber stocks uncertain. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Heaviness in the Wall street market and apprehension regarding the consequences of the textile strike in the United States caused prices on the bourse to turn heavy today. The closing was also heavy.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse opened firm, declined fractionally later in the day, but recovered again at the close.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. Votes Dividend

General Electric Company Declares Regular Return of 75 Cents.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Directors of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. declared the usual quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock, payable Sept. 18 to stock of record October 1.

Directors of the General Electric Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of 15 cents a share on the special stock and a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common, the same as was declared in the two preceding quarters. Both are payable October 25 to stock of record September 28.

Columbia Pictures Corporation reports net profit in the 52 weeks ended June 30 amounted to $1,008,834 after charges and taxes, compared with $740,241 in the 53 weeks ended July 1, 1933.

American Chain Co., Inc., and subsidiaries report for the six months ended June 30 net profit of $244,800, equivalent to $2.56 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock, against net loss of $658,753 in the first half of 1933.

Noblitt Sparks Industries, Inc., declared a quarterly dividend of 30 cents on the common stock, payable October 1 to stock of record September 20. This places the issue on a $1.20 annual basis, against $1 previously.

Directors of Capital Administration Co., Ltd., declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the preferred stock, Series A, payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 17.

Directors of the Broad Street Investing Co. have declared a dividend of 20 cents a share on the capital stock, payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 17.

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Continental Assurance Co. has declared the usual 50 cents quarterly dividend, payable September 29 to stockholders of record September 15, it was announced today.

Noblitt-Sparks Industries, Inc., raised its dividend rate today. Directors voted a regular quarterly dividend of 30 cents, payable October 1, to stockholders of record September 20. Previously the dividend has been paid at the rate of 25 cents.

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP).—Although operations by Lockheed Aircraft Corporation for the first half of this year resulted in a loss after depreciation of $48,761, its unfilled orders at the close of the period totaled $937,772, a statement issued today by Robert E. Gross, treasurer, said.

The statement attributed the loss to expenses entailed in revamping the plant and equipment in preparation for production of a new model bimotored transport plane.

Current assets of the company were listed at $490,142 and current liabilities at $311,913.

Wheat Scores Sharp Upturns After Losses

Barley Jumps Five Cents as Corn and Oats Join Advances.

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—Sharp new upturns of wheat prices today converted early losses into gains, and followed a jump of 5 cents for barley, the extreme limit allowed.

Evidence of accumulation of wheat futures on price setbacks was impressive, especially after announcement that No. 1 Northern spring wheat in Chicago had been purchased today at 10 cents a bushel spot cash higher than September delivery contracts.

It was also shown that reports of likelihood of United States imports of Argentine wheat were apparently untrue, as Argentine wheat delivered at Buffalo, duty paid, would be considerably higher than domestic wheat of better quality.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat, in Chicago, closed firm at nearly the day's top, ¾ to 1⅛ above yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to ⅛ higher; oats, ¼ to ⅜ up, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents down.

Wheat started with an upward trend, influenced by unexpected strength of the Liverpool market and to reports of unsatisfactory crop conditions for wheat in sections of Australia. The fact, however, that Chicago wheat had risen 5 cents in the last few days led to profit-taking on advances, and to declines which at times amounted to about a cent.

Unsettlement was also promoted by assertions that a large quantity of Argentine wheat had been bought to come to the United States.

Talk of Argentine Imports.

Later, it developed that the talk of Argentine imports had probably resulted from confusion about purchase of 1,850,000 bushels of Argentine wheat overnight for the United Kingdom, not the United States. Then the question was raised in some quarters whether if Argentina continued to furnish 50 per cent of the total weekly world shipments of wheat, how could there be much call for Canadian wheat. Scantiness of speculative offerings in Chicago became so pronounced near the end of the day, however, that flurried buying suddenly set in, and the market rapidly ran upward.

Advances of 5 cents in barley futures were associated with reports that maltsters had found it necessary to bring Canadian barley into this country. The Minneapolis barley market as well as Chicago went up the limit.

Corn and oats made only a laggard response to wheat strength. Slowness of shipping demand here for corn acted as a drag.

Provisions were steadied by assertions that Great Britain was in the market for cash lard.

West Canada Wheat Yield Up

Crop Estimated Slightly Above Last Year's Harvest.

New York, Sept. 7.—In the prairie provinces of Canada harvesting has been delayed by unsettled weather, but threshing is under way again in most districts and is well advanced in the southern and central areas of the three provinces, according to the current crop report of the Bank of Montreal.

Frost damage has affected the grades in the north. Estimates place the western wheat crop at slightly above last year's yield. The yield of coarse grains is very light and pasturage is poor.

In Quebec crops generally are in satisfactory condition and with favorable weather conditions average yields are in prospect in most sections. In Ontario threshing of spring grains reveals a better than average yield with quality good. Estimated yields of roots and apples and peaches are much below average.

In New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island crops continue to make good progress. In Nova Scotia yields will be materially below average due to lack of moisture. In British Columbia the yield of grain is about average.

A particularly heavy second crop of alfalfa is practically harvested and tree fruits are ripening satisfactorily.

Canada Trade Outlook.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—The outlook for fall business in Canada is relatively favorable, the Standard Statistics Co. reported, stating that "Canadian farm income should be considerably higher this year than last."

New Bond Offerings.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—New bond offerings this week totaled $17,612,000 against $300,000 last week and $32,753,000 in the same week last year.

ZEPTER & BLANKEN, Attorneys, 418 Fifth Street Northwest.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding an Equity Court. Alfred Feldman, 1218 Shepherd street Northwest, plaintiff, vs. George William Cissel, address unknown, defendant. Equity No. 57461. Order of Publication. The object of this suit is to obtain a decree for the substitution of trustee in place and stead of George William Cissel, surviving trustee, in a certain deed of trust dated April 28, 1921, made by the plaintiff herein, on lot numbered fifty-five (55) in Thomas A. Jameson's subdivision of lots in block numbered two (2), "North Columbia Heights," as per plat recorded in Book 60 at page 124 in the Surveyor's Office of the District of Columbia; said deed of trust having been given to secure the payment of a note in the sum of twenty-four hundred and sixty-seven dollars and thirty-seven cents, ($2,467.37). Upon the return of the rule to show cause issued herein on the defendant George William Cissel marked "not to be found," it is by the Court this 5th day of September, 1934, ordered that the said George William Cissel, trustee under the said deed of trust as aforesaid, appear in this court on or before the 15TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1934, and show cause, if any he has, why a trustee or trustees should not be substituted in this case. Let notice herein be published in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each week for three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before the return date. THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Regrets — By Harry J. Tuthill

YOU DIDN'T SLEEP VERY WELL LAST NIGHT, DID YOU TESSIE? EVERY TIME I STARTED TO DOZE I HEARD YOU GETTING UP.
IKE AND I WERE TALKING, HONEY, ABOUT THE LAND.
WE BLAME OURSELVES AS MUCH AS ANYBODY.
YOU MEAN $ 800 FOR THAT EX-FARM WAS A BUST?
IT WAS SUCH A TERRIFIC DROP FROM $ 500,000 TO $ 800.
BUT DEAR, THE $ 500,000 WAS JUST TALK. THE $ 800 IS MONEY.
IT WAS PARTLY OUR OWN FAULT.
LISTEN, ALL YOU GAVE FOR THAT GULLEY WAS A $2 MULE.
IKE IS SO EASILY LED. HE WAS WARNED SO MANY TIMES ABOUT HOW SLICK THOSE WALL ST. MEN ARE.
I KNOW JUST HOW YOU FEEL DARLING, BECAUSE I WARNED GEORGE NOT TO INTERFERE.
WELL, WHY SQUAWK? WE'RE JUST HOOKED, THAT'S ALL.
HOOKED? BY GETTING $ 800 FOR A 40 ACRE MOSQUITO RENDEZ-VOUS?
YOU WANTED TO CLOSE WITH THAT BABY WHEN I GOT HIM UP TO THE FIRST HUNDRED, DIDN'T YOU IKE?
EVERYBODY MADE MISTAKES, GEORGE. THAT IS, EVERYBODY BUT THAT WALL ST. RED-HOT.
ANYHOW, WHAT A PERFECTLY MARVELOUS LESSON IT WAS.
YES, FOR ALL OF US, DEAR.

Walt Mason, Himself

Poor Critters.

When mortals languish, some fellows rise, to soothe their anguish and wipe their eyes. With smiles they hound us, these Sunny Jims, they tag around us on buoyant limbs. They show our losses are truly gains, and that our crosses can cause no pains. They say affliction is something fine, that grief's a fiction, that troubles shine. And ere we know it we're blithe and gay; we're pleased and show it in every way. That cheer-up fellow has made us think that grief is yellow and on the blink. Poor weary mortals, inclined to cuss, are moved to chortles when lectured thus. But poor dumb critters, immersed in grief, must take their bitters without relief. The cow is thirsting by dried-up streams, her heart is bursting, life vicious seems. No cheer-up cattle, no smiling steers will come to battle against her fears. No sprightly heifer, no optimist, will like a zephyr disperse the mist. The poor dumb critters must stand the gaff; no bullock twitters to raise a laugh; no cheerful Durham, no Galloway, is there to stir 'em to raptures gay. There is no booster where chickens dwell, to cheer the rooster that's far from well. He's cut out crowing, so sick is he, and no hen's showing much sympathy. In scorching weather the horses stand, all bunched together, a dismal band. The heat is frightful, they pant and sweat, the flies are spiteful and make them fret. Perhaps it cheers them in their despair, that no one nears them with genial air, with air beguiling and eyes that gleam, to say, "Keep smiling, your woe's a dream."

Reviewers of Films and Vaudeville, of High Caliber, Which Opened Yesterday

Earle and Fox Offerings Are Rated Highly

Both 'British Agent' and 'World Moves On' Go in for War Scenes.

By Gerald G. Gross

(Batting for Nelson B. Bell).

"BRITISH AGENT." Warner-First National picturization of the novel by H. Bruce Lockhart, adapted to the screen by Laird Doyle, starring Leslie Howard and Kay Francis. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Retouched history and conflicting love are blended in this thrilling picturization of H. Bruce Lockhart's best seller which dominates the first rank stage and screen program opening yesterday at the Earle.

Comparable, probably, in a general way to the many pictures which have been made depicting the inward strife which results when a spy falls in love with someone "on the other side," "British Agent" treats a variation of this theme with such ingeniousness and forcefulness as to make it thrilling to the extreme.

There have been few climaxes to surpass the one in "British Agent," which is preceded by an exquisite scene between Stephen and Elena in which the former, not knowing they are to be bombed, describes the Sussex cottage he plans to share with her, while she resignedly counts the moments before their doom.

Stephen Locke is a young Englishman in the consular service when the story opens. The time is 1917, shortly after the deposition of the Czar. Convincing his superiors that recognition of the revolutionaries' provisional government is advisable, he is sent to Petrograd as an "official unofficial" representative to dissuade the Russian powers against entering into a separate peace treaty with Germany. Such a move, he realizes, would prove harmful if not disastrous to the Allies' cause.

Strong Romantic Interest.

Scarcely have negotiations begun than a counter-revolt sweeps Lenin into power. It is at this stage that the British agent, appointed by his home government, but having no positive authority, has occasion to save the life of Elena, the "Red Flame," as it were, in Lenin's drive to power.

After a brief separation, they meet again and fall in love. From this point "British Agent" develops its absorbing romantic interest. Failing to win England's support for the plan he has proposed to Lenin, Stephen goes to Moscow, new seat of the Russian government, to work against the Bolsheviks from within.

Elena, whose devotion to duty is even greater than her love for Stephen, betrays him to the Cheka, secret police. Having disclosed his part in a conspiracy to overthrow the Communist regime and then reported his whereabouts, she goes to Stephen that they may meet death together.

Then—but to tell more might spoil the climax. Suffice it to say that there is a happy ending, despite a wealth of convincing battle scenes, Cossack riding and miscellaneous violence.

Leslie Howard, as Stephen Locke, is polished, intelligent and, in short, first rate as usual. The Elena of Kay Francis is a beautiful young patriot, whose betrayal of her lover does not prevent her from winning sympathy. They have strong support, chiefly in William Gargan and Ivan Simpson.

Lively Stage Bill.

Isham Jones and his orchestra headline a satisfying and diversified vaudeville program. Their offerings are tuneful and tasteful. It is refreshing to hear, for a change, a stage band whose members do not squirt seltzer into one another's faces and crack violins over skulls.

Dancing to the music of Isham Jones, the side-splitting team of Billy and Revel, "Jesters of the Dance," played havoc with the laugh muscles of the audience at yesterday's second show.

Steve Evans, in his "Hollywood Snapshots," offers unbelievably realistic impersonations of El Brendel, Joe E. Brown, John D. Rockefeller and others. "The Five Wonder Girls," a fast dancing and acrobatic act, fill out a good stage bill, not forgetting to mention the mistress of ceremonies, Audrey Sieber, and her handsome gowns.

Freddie Clark has a reminiscent Irving Berlin overture, with Bert Granoff doing several vocal interpolations.

Augumenting the screen feature are a newsreel, the only supplement we had time to catch, and short subjects.

Summary: Swell show for the whole family.

Loew's Fox

"THE WORLD MOVES ON." Fox picturization of a story and screen play by Reginald Berkely, featuring Madeleine Carroll and Franchot Tone, with Reginald Denny, Dudley Digges, Siegfried Rumann, Raul Roulien and others. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Falling somewhat short of being an epic, as heralded in advance notices, "The World Moves On" is, nevertheless, a sincere and entertaining piece proclaiming the virtue of families sticking together and crying out, though somewhat tepidly, against the futility of wars. It opened yesterday at the Fox, sharing the program with a sure-fire stage bill headlined by Little Jack Little and his orchestra.

This reviewer came to the picture interested especially in finding out what Madeleine Carroll, the English screen star, who is cofeatured with Franchot Tone, is like. She did not disappoint. Blonde and reserved, she is a welcome newcomer who plays the part of Mary, daughter of an English magnate, whose ancestors for more than 100 years have been allied in business with a New Orleans family of cotton growers.

Somehow we feel that, fine screen fare that this film is, it could have been better. Perhaps, at least so far as the plea-for-space angle is concerned, improvement might have been made by placing greater emphasis on Henri (Raul Roulien), the soldier-religionist and cousin of Richard (Franchot Tone).

Reminding one of, first, "The House of Rothschild;" second, "Cavalcade," and, third, "Berkeley Square," "The World Moves On" tells the story of the descendants of a New Orleans cotton titan who, through the years, are bound together by pride and honor though they are distributed over many nations.

Stepin Fetchit Back.

Richard, scion of the Southern family, and Mary—(Madeline Carroll), representing the English branch of a business partnership dating from 1825, are married fairly early in the picture but find no real happines until they are reduced from fabulous wealth to bleak poverty in an old homestead garnished by Stepin Fetchit and several little Stepins.

Lest we forget to mention it, Stepin Fetchit is very funny. We emitted such a vulgar laugh at the juncture where he joins the Foreign Legion, thinking he is simply going into a lodge whose members wear hats he likes, that there was an audible complaint from the lady in back of us.

Jumping from the year 1825, when we see Richard and Mary as parties to the original business combine, to the year 1914, in one move, "The World Moves On" then takes us through the Wall street crash in 1929 and to a somewhat theatrical, but effective, conclusion.

The photography and direction are well done. There is a good shot of a torpedo leaving a submarine, another of the U-boat being sunk and several vivid battlefield scenes.

That Saloon Piano.

Little Jack Little is alleged to have the grippe. If he hast, it wasn't noticeable in his singing voice yesterday. He is as pleasing as ever, chiefly when he is pounding out distinctive rhythms on the piano. There is a band which he leads, but the main part of the act is Mr. Little, who, happily, still has that saloon piano bit in his repertoire.

Ross and Edwards, who have been seen here before, are so-so in an offering which is mostly a play on words. Carl Shaw, who has a company of two, is insanely hilarious as a dancing comedian. Boyd and Wallin open the vaudeville portion with a daring slack wire performance.

Phil Lampkin leads a noteworthy overture entitled "My Memory Book," which features hit songs of musical comedies. Eddie Perkins, the Fox singing usher, breaks in with several well-sung choruses and Georgia Grisso dances to "Irene."

The newsreel and other short subjects on the screen are up to snuff.

Summary: Pleasing all 'round entertainment well worth the price of admission.

"CHAINED." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the story by Edgar Selwyn. Screen adaptation by John Lee Mahin. Starring Joan Crawford with Clark Gable, Otto Kruger and Stuart Erwin. Directed by Clarence Brown. Reviewed second week by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

So great an appeal has the romantic Joan Crawford-Clark Gable team that, by popular demand, they remain at Loew's Palace for another triumphal and pleasant week.

"Chained," their latest vehicle, contains the aggregation of luxury and entertainment and all the efflorescence of exaggerated romance that Crawford-Gable fans insist upon, and satisfactorily includes the "eternal triangle" situation handled in a deft and agreeable manner.

Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Otto Kruger, who carry the burden of the slight plot, act with delightful restraint and set a new average for civilized behavior in the aforementioned triangle. Miss Crawford is Diane, who marries Richard (Mr. Kruger) rather than break up his life by telling him that she has fallen in love with Mike, who is, of course, our old friend Clark Gable, all dressed up in Bond street and Fifth avenue clothes in order to impersonate a prosperous South American ranch owner. Every one is very unhappy and very refined about it until the last reel, when things adjust themselves with remarkable ease and rapidity.

Any gaps in the plot are ably filled in by shots of Diane at the opera, at the horse show, in the mountains and on shopping tour, which gives the faminine cash customers a chance to see what will be worn this winter and how. We were delighted to observe that Miss Crawford has lost many of the affectations of speech, wide-eyed stare and heavily rouged lips, which often detracted from her performances in the past, and her portrayal of Diane is sincere and charming with close-ups that are truly beautiful.

Clark Gable, as Mike, will give many a husband some bad half-hours, and Otto Kruger's interpretation of the role of Richard is satisfyingly distinguished. Stuart Erwin is amusingly cast and adds to the light sophistication of the dialogue.

Added subjects include the Metrotone News, an animated cartoon in color, entitled "The Discontended Canary," and an Educational-Coronet comedy labeled "Hello Sailors."

Columbia

"TREASURE ISLAND." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the story by Robert Louis Stevenson, adapted to the screen by John Lee Mahin, costarring Jackie Cooper and Wallace Beery, with Lional Barrymore, Lewis Stone, Charles ("Chic") Sale and Otto Kruger. Directed by Victor Fleming. Reviewed (return engagemnt) by W. A. Whitsy.

Just as a well beloved book becomes a never-ending source of pleasure, so should a faithful screen translation likewise resolve itself into a joy forever. And "Treasure Island" achieves that end.

Following with unusual fidelity the Stevenson book—and banking heavily upon the dramatization of Jules Eckert Goodman—John Lee Mahin has turned out a script that should delight all the other followers of pirate tales and lusty drama of adventure.

No less noteworthy than the adaptation is the cast chosen to portray the beloved characters. Jackie Cooper, as Jim Hawkins; Wallace Berry, as Long John Silver; Lionel Barrymore, as Billy Bones; Lewis Stone, as Capt. Smollett; Chic Sale, as Ben Gunn; Otto Kruger, as Dr. Livesey; William V. Mong, as Pew; Nigel Bruce, as Squire Trelawney; Charles McNaughton, as Black Dog, and Dorothy Peterson (the only woman in the man-and-boy story), as Mrs. Hawkins—all these, as well as the whole boatload of pirates, have been admirably selected, each to his individual part, and in the whole making a fascinating, compelling roster of truly living characters.

The short subjects include "The Coast of Catalonia," a Magic Carpet release of life and living of the Catalans on the Mediterranean shore; "Good Luck—Best Wishes," a musicomedy with the Pickens Sisters, Solly Ward and Ferde Grofe's Orchestra, and a release of the Paramount News.

Rum License Lists Used as Tax Guide

Richmond, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Alcoholic Control Board today forwarded to all Commonwealth's attorneys and commissioners of revenue a list of ABC licenses in their jurisdiction, to guide them in the collection of local license taxes wherever levied.

The board also announced today that as of September 1, licenses for the sale of beers and wines will become effective when issued, rather than when applied for as heretofore.

Formerly dealers were allowed to sell beer and wine from the date they applied for licenses because the board, swamped with applications, was unable to issue licenses rapidly.

Work Starts on Main Building At Maryland Prison This Week

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—With Hal T. Kearns, superintendent of the Maryland State penal farm at Roxbury, Md., laying the first stone, construction of the permanent main building got under way this week. Excavations have been in progress throughout the summer.

The building, when completed, will house the administration department, living quarters for inmates, educational department, auditorium, kitchen and laundry and will accommodate 600 inmates.

All of the work is being done by inmates under skilled supervision.

The permanent farm buildings, including barns for live stock, already have been completed and five staff houses, one of which is the superintendent's home, are nearing completion.

According to Mr. Kearns, the building program, which calls for completion of the permanent farm buildings in about five years, is ahead of schedule.

All of the buildings are being erected of native stone.

The farm now has 275 inmates, model prisoners sent from the Maryland Penitentiary and the House of Correction.

1934 Assessments Lower in Virginia

Richmond, Sept. 7 (AP).—A statement to the State corporation commission, prepared by R. E. Steele, of the commission staff, shows that the 1934 assessment of real and tangible personal property of public service corporations in Virginia has decreased 2.1 per cent in comparison with 1933 figures.

The 1934 total is $199,715,011 against $204,052,414 for 1933, a decrease of $4,337,403.

Analysis of the assessments shows that the decrease is in the assessed valuation of steam and electric railways and steamship properties. Other classes of public service properties show substantial increases. While the assessments of physical properties have fallen off 9.3 per cent since 1926, the commission pointed out that State taxes for the same companies have been decreased over 21 per cent, including the tax increases of this year, as voted by the General Assembly.

Firestone Says Short Labor Day Will Stay

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—The Times Union today quoted Harvey S. Firestone, chairman of the board of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., as prophesying that shorter hours for labor were here to stay and that they "will never go back to where they were."

In an interview with the rubber magnate, the newspaper said Firestone maintained that the NRA "helped no one" and that "you can't legislate prosperity."

Mardi Gras Opens At Colonial Beach

Colonial Beach, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—The Colonial Beach Mardi Gras opened today with aquatic events for boys and women and a fancy dress contest.

Events tomorrow will be a baby parade at 10 a. m., a three-legged race for boys at 2 p. m., and the grand parade at 4 p. m. The parade will be participated in by decorated cars and floats representing both individuals and business concerns.

A horse show, bathing beauty contest, canoe race, and other aquatic events will take place Sunday. The Mardi Gras is sponsored by the Colonial Beach Business Men's Association.

Academy Opening Date Set Sept. 20

Woodstock, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Massanutten Academy will open here September 20, according to Col. H. J. Benchoff. The academy will accommodate 125 boys for the fall term.

Chartered as an R. O. T. C. unit in 1930, the school has been noted for excellence in drilling. In recent years Massanutten has added a recreation center on the academy farm, 3 miles south of here.

The school ranks high in athletics. Last year the swimming team won the State title and placed second in the National meet, losing by half a point to Mercersburg Academy.

Church Has Anniversary.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—The Church of Christ, of Waynesboro, will observe the thirty-first anniversary of its founding Sunday with special services. Speakers for the day will be the Rev. F. J. Stinson and the Rev. L. K. Ziegler.

Winchester Vote Elects A. M. Field

First City Manager Named to Post Again.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.).—Arthur M. Field, first city manager here when the municipality adopted the system 15 years ago, has been named to succeed City Manager P. P. Pilcher January 1.

Mr. Field defeated Mr. Pilcher, who was a candidate for reelection, and former Councilman Charles H. Harper.

All members of the Winchester police force have been reelected for another year, beginning January 1. The force includes C. W. Hollis, chief; T. J. Boyd, captain; Francis M. Funk and H. C. Cline, sergeants, and Jack Bowers, Lloyd Williams, Franklin Ritter, Persell Plank, Ernest C. Dove and Amon Strosnider, patrolmen.

The entire world takes Stetson quality for granted. It's that good! But we've carried style in Stetsons just a step beyond the average. We've basically broken down the male population of Washington into types and secured just the correct hat for each individual. No more "getting used to a hat" . . . as ancient salesmen used to tell you. The minute you put on your Stetson you'll look well, and what's more, you'll know it.
